NOTE TO TEACHERS.

THIS edition of Caesar's Gallic War aims not only to aid the pupil in gaining a practical mastery of the Latin, but also to bring before him such explanatory and illustrative matter as shall awaken his interest in what he reads, lead to an intelligent grasp of the subject-matter, and help him to form a right method of classical study. In college class-rooms the masterpieces of ancient literature are no longer read merely as exercises in parsing and translation; the same methods of broad and sympathetic, yet exact and thorough study which characterize college work may be also successfully applied in preparatory and high-school classes.

The Introduction to this edition contains a brief estimate of Caesar's life-work, viewed in its several aspects, a condensed discussion of the Roman Art of War in Caesar's time, an outline of the geography of the regions most frequently referred to in the Gallic War, and a general view of the contents of the seven books. The latter part of the Introduction may perhaps be taken up with profit in regular lessons, along with the reading of the text. There is always an advantage in the systematic study of a topic or group of topics.

In the Text consonant i has been printed instead of j. That j should be discarded from the texts of classical Latin writers is generally admitted; and most editions of all except Caesar have only i. It is far better for the pupil, however, to become accustomed to the correct orthography at the very beginning of his Latin reading, than to run the risk of being confused later on in his course by the change from j to i. The spelling of Gallic proper names has in several cases been altered, to accord with the results of recent investigations; for the researches of Glück, Desjardins, and others have shown that many of the current spellings are wrong.

In reading Caesar with classes many teachers prefer to take up Book II. before Book I. With this in view the Notes to Book II. have been made both full and elementary, with numerous grammatical references. But for those who do not follow this plan, the Notes to Book I. also have been made full, especially on passages of indirect discourse. To guide the pupil, the editor has ventured to make some suggestions on the study of Caesar, which will be found on page 377. The importance of adopting a correct method of work at the outset cannot be overestimated. It is hoped that the table of Idioms and Phrases will be found helpful in training to both flexibility and accuracy of translation. The pupil should commit to memory the more common idioms. The Vocabulary has been prepared, as the Introduction and Notes, with the design of giving to the pupil such assistance as he needs and such knowledge as he can digest.

The teacher will find the interest and profit of the study of Caesar enhanced if, instead of reading the first four books in course, he make for his classes a series of selections, covering the best portions of the whole work. As such a course of reading, the following selections are suggested:—

BOOK I., the Title and Chapter 1.

II., entire.

I., Chap. 2-54, The Wars with the Helvetii and with Ariovistus.

III., Chap. 7-16, The Campaign against the Veneti.

IV., Chap. 1-36, The Expeditions to Germany and to Britain.

V., Chap. 1-23, The Second Expedition to Britain.

VI., Chap. 12-24, The Customs of the Gauls and Germans contrasted.

VII., Chap. 69-90, The Siege of Alesia.

The works to which the editor has been most indebted in the preparation of this book are the editions of Caesar by Nipperdey, Holder, Kraner, Doberenz (Dinter), Peskett, Moberly, and Long; Rüstow's Heerwesen und Kriegführung, Wagler's Hilfsbüchlein, Napoleon's Jules César, and the Géographie Historique of Desjardins. The Plates are after those of Rheinhard, with some modifications. The Plans are based upon those in Napoleon's Atlas, with various changes introduced from Rustow, von Goeler, von Kampen, and Rheinhard. Special mention of indebtedness is due to Eichert's Vollständiges Wörterbuch zu den Schriftwerken des C. J. Cäsar, and to Creak's Complete Dictionary of Caesar's Gallic War. A selected list of works useful for the special study of Caesar is given on page 379.

The editor takes pleasure in expressing his obligations to Prof. D. Y. Comstock, of Andover, Mass., who has carefully examined the MS. and proofs, and made many suggestions and additions; to Prof. A. G. Wilson, of Lake Forest, Ill., and other friends, for suggestions and criticisms.

INTRODUCTION

I. GAIUS IULIUS CAESAR.

i. Life of Caesar.

Gaius Iulius Caesar was born July 12, in the year 100 before Christ.¹ He was thus six years younger than Cicero and Pompey. His family belonged to the old nobility of Rome, the patrician order. Several of his ancestors had won distinction in the service of the state; but his father had held no higher office than that of practor. Of his early youth nothing is known except that he was taught at his own home by Gnipho, a celebrated rhetorician of the time, and dabbled in verse-making. As his parents were wealthy, we may suppose that he received under private masters the usual training of the time in grammar, numbers, music, and physical exercises.

Caesar's life was cast in a period fraught with great changes for the Roman state. The former adjustment of authorities, the old-time balancing of the elements of power that had brought to Rome both strength and security, had given place to violent party strifes, which threatened the very existence of the government. The city was crowded with turbulent throngs of poor citizens, who most of the time received grain from the public treasury at a rate much below cost, and who were easily bribed by men desiring political elevation. With this needy populace all those of humbler station sympathized and voted; thus the bulk of the popular party was made up. Opposed to this was the old aristocracy, which jealously guarded its ancient privileges. Its stronghold was the Senate. Besides these parties there were the capitalists who wielded vast influence and sided sometimes with the one, sometimes with the other, as self-interest directed. Amid intrigues for power, things had come to such a pass that any great and successful party leader had all his own way and might become virtually supreme. Notwithstanding the risk and uncertainty, politics were thought the only field of activity not beneath the dignity of a young Roman of standing.

When Caesar became old enough to take an active interest in public affairs, Marius, his uncle by marriage, was at the head of the popular party. With this, therefore, his lot was naturally cast. In 83 B.C. he married the daughter of L. Cinna, one of the bitterest opponents of the aristocracy. The following year Sulla returned from a series of victories in the East and restored the power of the Senate, wreaking vengeance upon all its political enemies. Caesar was bidden to put away his wife. He refused, and his life was endangered. He went into hiding, once indeed having purchased his life from a man coming to kill him. After a time, through influential friends, pardon was obtained from Sulla, who granted it with the remark that 'in that young Caesar there were many Mariuses.' Caesar at once left Italy, and served with the army in Asia till Sulla's death, in 78. At the siege of Mitylene he so distinguished himself that a civic crown, made of oak-leaves, was awarded him.

Returning to Rome, he accused first Cn. Dolabella, and afterwards C. Antonius, of extortion in provincial management. At that time the bringing of delinquent officials to justice was a common way of introducing one's self to public notice and winning favor. Though both Dolabella and Antonius were acquitted, Caesar showed great oratorical power, and in prosecuting them attracted much attention. Wishing to perfect himself in oratory, in 76 he set out for Rhodes, to study under Molo. Near Miletus his vessel was captured by pirates; he was kept a prisoner on the island of Pharmacusa until a ransom of fifty talents (over fifty thousand dollars) was paid. But as soon as he was set free he manned some ships, took the pirate stronghold, and crucified his captors, — as he had jokingly told them, when with them, that he would do.

During the next sixteen years Caesar followed the regular course of political promotion, ignoring no means by which he might make himself popular. He bestowed gifts with a lavish hand, assumed the debts of bankrupt young nobles who had squandered their inheritance, gave largesses to the people. own means were soon expended; he borrowed vast sums at exorbitant rates of interest, with the design of getting reimbursement from the spoils of office. He was first elected military tribune; then, in 68, quaestor, going with Antistius Vetus into Spain. Three years later he was curule aedile, with Bibulus as colleague. In this office, by most extravagant expenditures on public games and buildings, he raised the enthusiasm of the populace to the highest pitch. He even dared by night in the Capitol to set up the statues of Marius and some representations of victories in the Jugurthine and Cimbrian wars; and the people wept for joy at the revival of old memories. By some he is thought to have been connected with the Catilinian conspiracy: but of this evidence is lacking. In 62 he obtained the office of praetor, in the discharge of which, amid scenes of violence, he carried himself with firmness and dignity. next year he was governor of Spain, where he won distinction by subduing several wild tribes. He returned to Rome in the summer of 60, having abundant means of satisfying his creditors, and was decreed a public thanksgiving for his victories. He was soon elected consul.

For some years Pompey had been the most prominent man in Rome. His successes in the campaign against the pirates and the war with Mithridates had made him the national hero. But in the qualities needful for a political leader he was utterly lacking; so that even from his own party, the aristocratic, he was unable to win either the recognition he desired or the privileges to which he was entitled. More than once the Senate snubbed him outright. Here Caesar saw his chance. Relying on his own popularity, he proposed to Pompey that they work in harmony, and by uniting their influence accomplish what either might desire. Pompey agreed; and with these two Crassus, the wealthiest man of Rome, was joined, making a political coalition really supreme, which is known as the First Triumvirate. It had no official existence; it was simply a political ring, of only three members but of vast power. To cement the union further, Pompey married Caesar's daughter Julia. During his consulship, among other measures Caesar caused a law to be passed regarding the division of the public lands, which, though bitterly opposed by the Senate, pleased the people greatly. With his aid, too, Pompey gained the favors previously denied. At the close of his consulship Caesar easily obtained for five years the government of both Cisalpine and Transalpine Gaul and Illyricum, as it was the custom to give ex-consuls the charge of provinces.

Nine years were devoted to the subjugation of Transalpine Gaul. The first summer (B.C. 58) Caesar drove back to their homes the Helvetii, who had attempted to migrate to the west of Gaul, and annihilated the army of the German king, Ariovistus. The following year he subdued the Belgic tribes in the north. The third campaign (B. C. 56) was against the tribes of northwest Gaul, that had leagued together to resist him. During this year Caesar renewed his compact with Pompey and Crassus, who agreed to see to it that his command should be prolonged for five years longer. A part of every winter he spent in Cisalpine Gaul, so as to be near Rome and retain his influence in home politics: it was against the law that a provincial governor having an army should enter Italy while in office. In 55 Caesar chastised several German tribes, and crossed over to Britain. The campaign of the next summer was principally against the Britons, part of whom he reduced to nominal subjection. the fall a division of his army in Gaul was cut off by a sudden uprising of the enemy. In 53 Caesar had to face a general rebellion of the subject tribes, which, however, he speedily crushed. But the next year almost all Gaul rose against him, and under the leadership of Vercingetorix taxed his powers to the utmost. He finally prevailed; and after the fall of Alesia, B.C. 52, the strength of the Gauls was forever broken. In the eighth campaign, summer of 51, he reduced the tribes one by one to complete subjection. The following spring he left his army and came up into Cisalpine Gaul. Here he resolved to remain till the expiration of his command in 49, returning to Transalpine Gaul only for a short time during the summer to review the troops.

During Caesar's absence in Gaul Crassus had been defeated and killed in the East, thus putting an end to the Triumvirate, and with it to the harmony between Caesar and Pompey. The latter began to view Caesar's successes with distrust and alarm. He entered into alliance again with the aristocracy. The Senate in Pompey's interest passed a decree that both he and Caesar should give up a legion for service in the East. For some years Caesar had had one of Pompey's legions: this was now demanded back. Caesar let it go, and one of his own too, without a complaint, although the intent of the whole action was evidently to weaken his forces and annov him. As it was not lawful for him to proceed in person to Rome, he stationed himself in Ravenna, the town of his province nearest the Italian boundary. He sent agents and friends to the City to negotiate for him, to try to offset the influence now openly brought to bear against him. Pompey and the Senate both hated and feared him. A decree was soon passed that Caesar should disband his army by a certain date, or be considered an outlaw. state of public affairs at that time this was simply to wrest from him the fruits of his hard-won successes, without leaving him even a guaranty of his personal safety. Caesar hesitated. The Senate voted, further, that "the consuls should provide that the state receive no hurt," which is like a proclamation of martial law in our day. This was virtually a declaration of war against Caesar, inspired by the jealousy of his opponent. Caesar at once with one legion crossed the Rubicon, the boundary of his province. Soon all Italy was in his power, — Pompey, the Senate, and their followers having fled to Greece. After arranging matters at Rome to suit himself he went to Spain, where lieutenants devoted to Pompey had a strong army. They were soon crushed. On his return the siege of Massilia (Marseilles), which had closed its gates to him on the way out, was ended by the capture of the city.

Caesar now gathered his forces in Greece, to meet his enemies there. For some time the two armies faced each other at Dyrrhachium; but Caesar was soon obliged to withdraw into the interior. The decisive battle was fought August 9, B.C. 48, near the city of Pharsālus, in Thessaly. Caesar's forces numbered about twenty-two thousand men, of which one thousand were cavalry; Pompey had forty-seven thousand infantry and seven thousand cavalry. But superior generalship and the courage of desperation won the day against overwhelming odds. The Senatorial forces were entirely routed. Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was treacherously murdered. Caesar also went to Egypt, where he became involved in difficulties known as the Alexandrine War. Putting an end to these he proceeded to the neighborhood of Carthage, where Cato and Scipio had raised a force against him. He won a complete victory over them at the battle of Thapsus, B. C. 46.

Caesar was now everywhere master. In accordance with legal forms he promulgated several laws of great benefit to the people. He reformed the calendar; in memory of this, the name of the month in which he was born was changed to Iulius, our July. In the year 45 a large army was collected in Spain, and commanded by the two sons of Pompey. Caesar marched against it, and at the battle of Munda totally defeated it. On his return to Rome the Senate, whose members were mainly of his own choosing, loaded him with honors. By conferring upon him all the important offices it centred the whole authority in his hands. His tenure of power was marked by clemency towards former opponents, and by the forming of vast projects for the public weal, few of which were ever realized. A league was formed to take his life. The conspirators were led to the crime by different motives, part by personal jealousy and hatred, part by a patriotic desire to restore the old republican constitution in full force, part by ambitious designs upon the spoils of state. So on March 15 B. C. 44, as Caesar had just entered the Senate house, he was set upon with daggers, and fell pierced by twenty-three wounds. But the plans of the murderers all miscarried. Not one of them died a natural death; and before many years Caesar's nephew and heir, Octavius, afterwards called Augustus, was Emperor of the Roman world.

Caesar was tall and of commanding presence. His features were angular and prominent. He had a fair complexion, with keen, expressive black eyes. In later years he was bald; at no time of life did he wear a beard. Though endowed with a constitution naturally by no means robust, he became inured to hardship, and exhibited astonishing powers of endurance. In matters of dress he was particular to the verge of effeminacy. His private life was not free from the vices of his time.

Of all the Romans Caesar was without doubt the greatest. In him the most varied talents were united with a restless ambition and tireless energy. While deliberate and far-seeing in the forming of his plans, in carrying them out he often acted with a haste that seemed like utter recklessness. He could command, could witness unmoved, scenes of the most shocking cruelty; yet none could be more forgiving, or more gracious in granting pardon. Believing with the Epicurean philosophy, that death ends all and life is worth living only for the pleasure to be gotten out of it, he mingled freely with the dissolute society of Rome; yet when it was time for action he spurned indulgences, gave himself to the severest toil, endured without a murmur the most trying privations. Denying the power of the gods, early in life he became a priest of Jupiter; later, high priest. But in regard to all these things we may say that his faults were those he shared in common with his age; his genius belongs to all ages. Chateaubriand declares that Caesar was the most complete man of all history; for his genius was transcendent in three directions, in politics, in war, and in literature. Let us try to form some estimate of this threefold life-work by considering Caesar specially as a General, as a Politician, and as a Man of Letters.

ii. CAESAR AS A GENERAL.

CAESAR was the greatest general Rome produced. His military genius did not display itself, as did that of Hannibal or Napoleon, in the masterly use of strategy and the introduction of new tactics; but taking the Roman art of war as he found it, he brought it to the highest perfection. The Romans, at all periods of their history, relied for victory not so much on brilliant feats in arms as on the rigid discipline, power of endurance, and persistent courage of their soldiers. ability to make his men do more and endure more for him than they would under any one else lies a chief secret of his success. He had the rare power of binding his army to him with a devotion that nothing could destroy. In almost every campaign he fought against vastly superior numbers and the most serious disadvantages. For his troops there were long marches, heavy burdens, the constant labor of fortifying, wellgrounded fears of the enemy often increased tenfold by exaggeration; yet confidence in their leader inspired them with ever fresh zeal; and addresses from time to time, reminding them of what he expected of them, fired their courage to the utmost. To this unflagging faithfulness, this unswerving allegiance to him and his cause that he had the faculty of calling forth, fully as much as to skilful handling of forces on the field of battle, his victories were due.

On the other hand, the longer men served under him the more confidence he placed in them; and he did not hesitate to tell them how much he relied on them. Instances of special courage on the part of legions, companies, or individuals, he made note of, and commended. He made his men think that he was personally interested in each one, -- just as Napoleon used to go among the common soldiers and inquire into their welfare. He knew every centurion by name, and when the battle was hottest he would rush into the ranks and call out to them individually, urging to greater effort. In campaigns he was most careful of the lives of his men, never exposing them to unnecessary risks. Slight delinquencies of conduct he often overlooked; but his general system of discipline was most strict. Active warfare was confined almost entirely to the summer months. During the winter the troops were placed in stationary quarters, where they were kept from idleness by constant drilling. These winter camps, though often distributed about the enemy's country in order to inspire awe, were nevertheless located away from cities, that the soldiers might not become effeminate by being brought under corrupting influences, nor form attachments with those in whose region they were placed. In this way Caesar avoided one of the fatal mistakes of Hannibal, who in the winter allowed his army to revel in the luxuries of South Italy. No matter how well trained a force may be, in a campaign of hard fighting it becomes demoralized, partly by reason of the gaps in the ranks caused by losses, partly on account of irregular movements and constant effort toward Caesar made his winter adaptation to new circumstances. encampments a source of fresh strength. From them his soldiers went forth with recruited powers, confident from the experience of past campaigns, and hardened by training. Thus Caesar "made his army as it were a body, of which he was the soul." He did not command his men to advance, but to follow, and more than once exposed his life by fighting like a common soldier in the front ranks.

The military movements of Caesar, as of Napoleon, were characterized by an incredible swiftness. He often appeared in the vicinity of the enemy, or gained possession of important points, before the news had spread that he was on the march. Thus he not infrequently caught his adversaries unawares, found them with scattered forces, and gained a victory before they could come together. As a consequence, in many cases a panic was excited that paralyzed the efforts of the foe and resulted in greater advantage to Caesar than the winning of several battles. When he felt himself too weak in numbers to assume the offensive with the force at hand, he would gain time by parleying, declaring that he must have opportunity for deliberation, while in reality he was awaiting reinforcements, or completing preparations for active measures. Like Grant, he had the power of keeping to himself his designs. His most trusted officers rarely knew his plans till called upon to execute them. He seems to have thought that the best way to assure the secrecy of a project was to carry it out as soon as formed. At any rate, his movements often appeared rash. In the end, however, results revealed his superior judgment and foresight.

But no matter how rapidly Caesar advanced, he was always careful to keep up connection with his base of supplies. For these he relied in the Gallic war partly on the Roman province, partly on friendly tribes, and partly on the hostile region through which he was marching. That there might be no failure in the regular transportation of supplies to the front he took every precaution. He left no points in possession of the foe behind him; he so secured the route by garrisons at strategic points that in case of defeat he could retreat in safety. Thus, instead of crossing the Rhine by boats, as he could easily have done, he built bridges each time, and left them strongly guarded while he went over into Germany. Once sufficiently near the enemy, his usual practice was to choose immediately a favorable location and fortify a camp. Then by sallies with cavalry he tried to cut off the supplies of the enemy and force them to attack him on his own ground. In this respect his tactics were defensive rather than offensive, and uniformly successful. He never stopped to besiege a town if he could well avoid it, knowing that a crushing defeat in the field opens the gates of cities. Yet no one was more skilled in the conducting of operations against fortified places than he. The siege of Alesia was one of the most remarkable recorded in history. Sometimes by a feigned retreat, or by marching to one side of the direct route, he drew the enemy away from a point he wished to take, then by a reverse movement fell on it suddenly before they could come to the rescue.

None understood better than Caesar how to follow up a victory and turn it to the best advantage. In pursuit of the fleeing he sent detachments of cavalry, and on all sides struck heavy blows before the enemy could gather again or get new courage. Occasionally he authorized indiscriminate slaughter, or the general sale of captives into slavery; but he was not cruel by nature, and in making slaves of those spared by the sword he acted in accordance with the universal custom of antiquity. In the civil war he was more compassionate toward the vanguished than any of his contemporaries. In the Gallic war, on conquering a state he usually took under his protection one of the parties in it, placing it in charge of the government, bound thus by strong ties to himself. His organizing power displayed itself in the bringing of order out of chaos; while his firmness and moderation won the respect, if not the esteem, of those he made subject. When he left Gaul and engaged in the war with Pompey the country was not only once for all subdued, but even contained a strong party devoted to his interests.

The military successes of Caesar have been sometimes attributed to the lack of generalship on the part of his adversaries. This is not just. To say nothing of the fact that in the civil strifes the best warriors of Rome were pitted against him, two at least of his northern foes, Ariovistus and Vercingetorix, were men of great natural powers of organization and leadership, consummate masters of the tactics with which they were familiar. The numbers of the barbarian armies were almost beyond compute, their courage well-nigh invincible. From traditions of Gallic invasions the Gauls had become the bugbear of the Roman soldiery; and even Caesar's men at first trembled before their great size and ferocious aspect. They were by no means the undisciplined savages that they are sometimes thought to have been. The Gauls used the Greek alphabet, and in civilization were far in advance of the early Britons and Germans. In the earlier campaigns they showed lack of military organization; but in the last years of the Gallic war their troops were organized, armed, and drilled after the Roman fashion, and proved almost a match for the invaders. Sometimes Caesar diminished the awe of his soldiers by trial skirmishes, that the mettle of the enemy might be tested, and the confidence of his army strengthened before the general engagement.

No, the reasons for Caesar's pre-eminence as a general must be sought, not in the weakness of his enemies, but in himself, in his singular power of controlling and organizing men, in his quick and comprehensive grasp of circumstances and ready adaptation to them, in his knowledge of human nature and his penetration as shown specially in his selection of officers, in his ability to make skilful use of the Roman tactics. But behind all these qualities there was another that defies analysis, that enabled him always to turn things to his own advantage: shall we not call it genius? Many generals have studied Caesar's Memoirs most carefully as a military manual; some have even taken copies with them on campaigns. As the greatest general of all the Romans, Caesar takes rank among the most famous military leaders of the world. He will not suffer by comparison with Alexander the Great, with Hannibal and Napoleon, Grant and Von Moltke; but the modern warrior whose qualities of leadership and generalship most resemble Caesar's is England's "Iron Duke," Wellington.

iii. Caesar as a Politician.

THE political character of Caesar has long been a subject of controversy. According to some he was a monster of crime, with hardly a redeeming quality; deliberately sacrificing the liberties of his country to an inordinate ambition. Others portray him as a broad-minded statesman, who saw that in the anarchy arising from the strife of parties Rome's great need was a single controlling will; who, to give peace and order to his distracted land, made himself its master. Both these views are extreme and unjust. The one emphasizes the destructive side of Caesar's character, while the constructive side is ignored; the other projects upon him that profound knowledge of the tendencies of the Roman state which the philosophers of history have been eighteen centuries in acquiring. His character presents, indeed, many apparently conflicting elements. But upon careful study it is evident that in the main he acted in accordance with the spirit of his age; that though his motives may not always have been patriotic, he was in reality a benefactor of his country; and that the true significance of his career becomes apparent only when it is considered as the final outworking of a principle that in times past had been asserting itself more and more in Roman politics, - the principle of Imperialism.

In entering the arena of political life Caesar no doubt both followed his own inclinations and chose the course reckoned most proper for a Roman youth of fortune and high position. At that time, owing to the proscriptions of Sulla, there was in the popular party a dearth of leaders, which gave ample room for the exercise of his powers. The methods which he employed to make himself the people's favorite, judged by modern standards, were in the highest degree objectionable. Still, they were the usual methods of his time; while in restoring the statues of Marius to the Capitol he showed a deep insight into the real feelings of the masses as well as a knowledge of the ways of reaching the popular heart. Few of his contemporaries had so great regard for the formalities of the law as he. Even at the trial of the Catilinian conspirators he argued on legal grounds that the accused should not be put to death improperly. The formation of the First Triumvirate was a shrewd move, fraught with momentous consequences. It reveals rare sagacity and foresight; but it had no more and no less significance than the forming of political rings to secure the rewards of office in our day. It proposed not to subvert but to direct the government, and at the same time to turn to private advantage the influence and emoluments of official positions.

The means by which Caesar was enabled finally to obtain the supreme power was the conquest of Gaul. From early times the Gauls, pressed by the tribes beyond, had occasionally made incursions into Italy; and now Roman colonists in southern Gaul were continually harassed. To protect these the rest of the country must be subdued. It is said that Caesar undertook the task of bringing Gaul into subjection in order to acquire a military power with which to overthrow the home government. Can this be the true explanation of his motives? How could he expect in the subduing of a wild northern country to develop a force able to cope with a government that had behind it Pompey, conqueror of rich provinces in the East? More likely he planned the Gallic campaigns as an important service to the state. If he should be successful in carrying them out, he would gain a still higher place in the affections of the people, and would add one more laurel to his political honors. Because his remarkable ability as a general soon won for him extraordinary successes, which he afterwards employed to further his own ends, we have no right to suppose that his aim from the beginning was to obtain the supreme power, and the conquest of Gaul the means he took to accomplish it.

The death of Crassus left Pompey and Caesar without rivals in political power. The latter, as master of Gaul, found himself much more nearly on a level with the "great man of Rome" than ever before. A mutual jealousy soon provoked a collision. Pompey undoubtedly had the advantage; for while he was administering a powerful command in Spain through his lieutenants, he was in person at Rome, at the centre of affairs, acting as sole consul by the desire of the people; but Caesar was outside the limits of Italy. As a matter of fact, Rome was under Pompey's control. So it was at Pompey's bidding that the Senate ordered Caesar to disband his legions and resign his command. Caesar was placed in a difficult position. In obeying this decree he would give up everything to his opponent and make himself a political cipher, with but small prospect of ever regaining his former influence. His enemies had woven a net around In refusing to obey he would give to the Senate a chance to declare him a traitor, and to his adversary an opportunity of attacking him in the name of the state. Yet simple justice required that all which might be demanded of the one should be demanded of the other also. So at least Caesar thought; and he acted accordingly. If he had previously fought for fame and influence, he must now fight for self-preservation. An appeal to arms was his only means of defence. Delay was dangerous; he decided on immediate action. If an appeal to arms against the existing authority is ever justifiable in the case of an individual, the crossing of the Rubicon, that first aggressive step of the movement which resulted in Caesar's elevation to supreme power, was attended at least by palliating circumstances.

But in this contest there was a deeper significance than the elevation or overthrow of an individual. Whoever conquered would be king. There were certain tendencies in the Roman state that rendered a monarchy inevitable. Rome was at first a municipality; her government, a group of institutions developed by and adapted to a city population. When she extended her boundaries she conquered cities, and her government thus had to deal with a collection of municipal organizations similar to her own. The consequence was a constant tendency toward disintegration, — toward the separation of this combination of units into its original elements. Opposed to this localizing tendency there was necessarily developed a contrary drift toward centralization. It was found that a body composed of many inharmonious members needed a single will. In times of extreme danger the state was obliged to put almost absolute power into the hands of a dictator. The people thus became familiar with the prerogatives of royalty under a different name. Meanwhile the influx of wealth after the period of conquest, the development of large landed estates which absorbed the small farms of the peasant class, and the excessive employment of slave labor which was reducing the free classes within ever narrower limits, gave prominence to individual aspirants to power who made the state a republic only in name. Gaius Gracchus for a time held virtual sovereignty. Marius was supreme for five years. Sulla was as really a king as if he had worn the purple. Matters at length had come to such straits, that the very existence of the state demanded a king. There was needed a strong, centralized government, capable of repressing anarchy at home and of enforcing respect abroad.

The murder of Pompey left Caesar without a rival; and under the forms of the old constitution he became in truth monarch of Rome. Thus had he who at first cherished no more ambitious aim than to become a political leader, risen by the force of circumstances to the absolute mastery of the Roman world. His short administration revealed in him statesmanship of a high order. Under him the state enjoyed a larger measure of prosperity than before for many decades; and his untimely end only renewed the political disturbances that he had sought to repress. Endowed with such deep insight into men and things, Caesar must have foreseen, faintly at first perhaps, but more and more distinctly as time passed on, what would be the end of the course he was pursuing, — as the traveller sees through the breaking mist the summit toward which the upward path is leading. We claim for him, however, that he did not definitely contemplate the subversion of the liberties of the Commonwealth; and that, guided by an overruling Providence, he accomplished an important work for the Roman state and for humanity. Certainly few men have left so strong an impress upon the history of the race as he. The calendar, as reformed by him, is still in use in Greece and Russia. His name has become a designation of imperial authority, and remains to-day in the word Kaiser, the official title of the emperors of Germany and Austria; some think also in the Russian Czar. Political writers, too, use the word Cæsarism. What a life, able not simply to make for itself a place in the records of history, but even to hand down a name as synonymous with the highest power!

iv. CAESAR AS A MAN OF LETTERS.

CAESAR had a natural taste for literature. He enjoyed the best educational advantages of his time in rhetoric and elocution; but the freshness, directness, and vigor of his style indicate not so much careful training as an inborn power over language. As an orator he was considered second only to Cicero. It is to be regretted that none of his orations have come down to us; from the fragments that survive, we know that his manner of speaking was terse, logical, earnest, and convincing. Even during the busiest periods of his life he kept up literary pursuits. He composed a treatise on grammar (De Analogia) while crossing the Alps. He wrote also a tract 'Against Cato,' and a work in sixteen books on 'Auspices.' All these, as well as his poems, have been lost. But his most important writings, which still survive, were the 'Commentaries on the Gallic War,' in seven books, describing the conquest of Gaul: and 'Commentaries on the Civil War,' in three books, giving an account of the struggle with Pompey. These works, as the name indicates (Commentarii, that is, notes or jottings, comments, 'Memoirs'), were not intended to be formal historical treatises, but were written in great haste in the midst of the campaigns described, and given to the world rather as rough first draughts, as a general's diary, than as complete and finished productions. An eighth book was afterwards added to the 'Gallic War' by Aulus Hirtius; other hands, too, extended the 'Civil War,' by adding narratives of Caesar's military operations in Egypt, Africa, and Spain.

The style of the 'Memoirs' has always been much admired. Cicero, although a political enemy of the author, did not hesitate to say of them: "They are worthy of all praise. They are unadorned, straightforward, and elegant, every embellishment being stripped off as a garment. Caesar desired, indeed, to furnish others who might wish to write history with material upon which they might draw; and perhaps men without good taste, who like to deck out facts in tawdry graces of expression, may think that in this he has done a kindness, but he has deterred men of sound sense from trying to improve on them in writing. For in history a pure and brilliant conciseness of style is the highest attainable beauty." The manner of expression, although so condensed, is most clear, and often vivid. It stands as a warning to those who think that a simple, direct, and forcible statement of facts can be made more effective by the use of many words and high-sounding phrases. The same unaffected directness of language is a noticeable characteristic of Grant's memoirs.

Although Caesar is everywhere, as a matter of course, the principal figure in the 'Memoirs,' he throws himself into the background, making prominent the deed rather than the doer. He speaks of himself usually in the third person, — a mode of expression as rare in personal narrative in his time as to-day. More surprising still is the fact that one finds no bitter aspersions upon his enemies, no extravagant commendations of friends, no professedly special pleas to justify his course. The reasons for important movements are always stated, but in such a way that they seem to have grown out of the attendant circumstances, and to have forced on action; so that no man of discretion could have done otherwise than he did. In all this there is the highest skill. While keeping himself free from all expressions alike of malice and of self-glorification, he draws the reader along with him, arouses sympathy, and wins to his own view; thus he justifies his course tenfold more effectively than if he were to excite the reader's opposition or suspicion by violent statements, or had adopted a more direct way of pleading his course. Little doubt that behind both the 'Gallic' and the 'Civil War' there lay a political purpose, to set a favorable explanation of his career before the eyes of his fellow-countrymen and of posterity. But does this affect the truthfulness of his statements?

In writing his 'Memoirs' Caesar had to deal with several classes of facts. First, especially in the 'Gallic War,' there was a vast fund of information about the strange peoples with whom he came in contact. Most of these were previously unknown to the Romans. Caesar was a close and careful observer. He made minute inquiries not only into the numbers and military prowess of his foes, but also into their manner of life, their customs, and religious beliefs. In him, with the circumspection and foresight of the general was united the eager desire for knowledge of the man of science. His nature was averse to the marvellous. The pages of few ancient writers who present accounts of new peoples are so free from the improbable. Whenever possible he got his information directly, at first hand. In a few instances he seems to have become possessed of erroneous views; but as a whole his statements about lands and peoples are, no doubt, thoroughly trustworthy. Then, there were the accounts of his military operations, of the general conduct of his campaigns. The accuracy of these has hardly been called in question; while the surveys and excavations carried on under the direction of the Emperor Napoleon III. have furnished in many cases a remarkable confirmation. Finally, there remain the more particular descriptions of battles, sieges, and the like; of successes and defeats. These affect reputation; here if anywhere we should look for untruthfulness. Did Caesar, as some have thought, magnify his victories and cover up his defeats? There is no evidence that he did. The tone throughout his works is candid and fair. Besides, with these things most of his readers were familiar by means of reports brought from the field. Falsifying under such circumstances would have been downright folly, would have excited all manner of derision, and have entirely defeated the writer's purposes. Possibly now and then Caesar colored his narrative a little, or purposely omitted something: his general reliability we have not the slightest reason to doubt. His statements of his motives of action in certain cases, bearing in mind the circumstances, we are at liberty to accept or reject as we choose; his veracity in regard to facts should not be impugned without good reason. From whatever standpoint viewed, his works are of great interest and value. The De Bello Gallico in particular deserves to be carefully studied, as a masterpiece of concise and spirited writing, as casting light upon the beginnings of the history of Northern Europe, and as revealing the modes of thought and action of one of the world's greatest men.

II. THE ROMAN ART OF WAR IN CAESAR'S TIME.

i. Organization of the Army.

THE Roman army consisted of three parts, — the Infantry (pedites, or simply milites), the Cavalry (equites or equitatus), and the Commissariat, or Baggage-train (impedimenta).

1. The Infantry. — The main body of the infantry was divided into legions (legiones). The number of men in a legion varied according to circumstances; for the killed or disabled were not replaced by recruits enrolled in the same legion, but when an accession of strength was received new legions were formed. Generally the longer a legion remained in service the smaller it became. The average number of men in Caesar's legions was 3,600. The legion was divided into ten cohorts, or battalions (cohortes), of 360 men each. The cohort contained three maniples, or companies (manipuli), having each thus 120 men. Those belonging to the first, the second, and the third maniples respectively were sometimes designated as hastati, principes, and triarii; but in Caesar's time, the old distinctions in equipment and service formerly implied by these names no longer existed. The maniple was divided into two centuries (ordines), of sixty men each.

Outside the legions were, — a. The evocati. These were veterans who had served their full time, but had volunteered for further service. They were held in honor, and had several privileges, such as immunity from picket-duty and work on fortifications. They were not attached to any particular corps, but had a place near the commander, from whom directly or through a lieutenant they received their orders. b. The light-armed troops (milites levis armaturæ). These were slingers and bowmen, and were always drawn from foreign peoples. In the earlier times the legions were composed only of Romans; later, others were admitted.

Citizens entered the service not by volunteering, but by being summoned and chosen through levies (delectus) held usually at Rome. A Roman could be called out any time between the ages of seventeen and forty-six. The regular period of service was twenty years in the infantry and ten years in the cavalry.

The officers were of three classes, — centurions, military tribunes, and lieutenants. a. Centurions, or captains (centuriones). These led the centuries; there were consequently two in each maniple, six in each cohort, and sixty in the legion. lowest in rank was the second centurion of the third maniple of the tenth cohort, the highest was the first centurion of the first cohort, called primi pili centurio, or primipīlus. The primipilus had a place in the war council. As a mark of authority the centurions carried a stick in the right hand. plate II. 3.) b. Military Tribunes (tribuni militum). These were six in number to each legion, stood in rank above the centurions, and commanded in turn. In Caesar's army they were of little importance, because most of their authority and duties were given over to the lieutenants. c. The Lieutenants, or legates (legati). These ranked next to the general. They carried a sceptre, and wore a purple robe with gold trimming. They held no particular division of the army as their permanent command, but were placed in charge now of this, now of that undertaking, sometimes over one legion, sometimes over several. They directed the movements of cavalry as well as infantry. The general (imperator), inasmuch as he held military authority (imperium) directly from the state, was on formal occasions accompanied by lictors (lictores), who bore an axe in a bundle of rods as symbolic of his power. (See plate II. 4, 2.)

2. The Cavalry. — Caesar's cavalry was drawn from allied and subject peoples, the officers only being Romans. It was distinct from the legion, and of secondary importance. It probably numbered on the average 3,300 to 4,000 men, separated into divisions (alae) of 330 to 400 men. The divisions were composed of squads (turmae) of thirty-three to forty horsemen, these last of decuries of ten or more. The higher officers of the cavalry were the cavalry prefects (praefecti equitum); the under officers were the decurions (decuriones). (See plate III. 5.)

3. The Commissariat, or Baggage-Train. — This consisted of a great number of beasts of burden and wagons, with the drivers and other drudge-folk (calones). Thus the tents, hand-mills, bridge material, engines of war, extra weapons, and all other needful military stores were conveyed. Each legion had a separate baggage train. When accompanied by this on the march it was called (legio) impedita, "encumbered;" when without, expedita, "unencumbered." From impedimenta, or baggage of the legion, sarcinae, the private luggage of each soldier, which he himself carried, should be carefully distinguished. Besides the calones, and just above them in position, were the artisans (fabri), — carpenters, blacksmiths, and the like.

ii. THE WEAPONS, STANDARDS, AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

The weapons of Caeşar's army were of two kinds, offensive and defensive. The offensive weapons were the javelin and the sword; the defensive were the helmet, the shield, the greaves, and the cuirass, or coat of mail.

1. Offensive Weapons. — a. The javelin. Of this there were four varieties, — pilum, iaculum, hasta, lancea. The pilum was a strong and heavy pike, the principal weapon of the legion soldiers. It consisted of a square shaft of wood four feet long, to the end of which a sharp but strong iron point, like a bayonet, was securely fastened. The entire length of the pilum was six feet; its weight was ten to eleven pounds, — about that of the guns furnished by the United States Government and most European nations to their infantry. The pila were thrown only at short distances, and often the first hurling decided the battle. The iaculum was a lighter dart; the hasta, a long spear adapted specially for stabbing; the lancea, a light spear, a lance, often with a broad point like an arrow-head. These three weapons were used by the cavalry and the light-armed troops. Some of the latter also carried bows and arrows (arcus, sagitta) and even slings (funda). (See pl. IV. 6, 7, 11, and pl. III. 1.) b. The Roman sword (gladius) was short (not over two and a half feet long), almost as wide as the hand, two-edged, and pointed. It was thus better adapted for stabbing than for slashing, though used for both purposes. (See pl. IV. 9.) It was kept in a light scabbard fastened to a belt (balteus), which was not passed around the waist as our soldiers have it, but over the left shoulder. (See the two right-hand figures in pl. III. 1, soldiers of the legion.) The cavalry men had a sword somewhat longer than that described above.

2. Defensive Weapons. - The legion-soldiers were protected by, — a. A brazen helmet (cassis) ornamented with a crest of red or white feathers (crista). (See pl. IV. 5.) b. A cuirass (lorīca), made of leather simply, or of leather with strips of metal fastened on about the waist and shoulders, or of scales of metal, or of a single brazen plate fourteen inches square over the breast. (See pl. II. 3; III. 3.) c. Greaves, reaching as high as the knee (ocreae), worn as a rule only on the right leg. d. An oblong shield, or buckler (scutum), almost a man's height, made of boards fitted together, covered with leather and having a broad rim of metal running around the edge. (See pl. IV. 3.) Another variety of shield sometimes used by the infantry was the clipeus, which was of bronze and oval in shape. (See pl. IV. 1.) Both scutum and clipeus were variously ornamented, with representations of thunderbolts, symbols of the legion, and the like The light-armed troops carried a small shield almost round, or target (parma), and seven light spears, and wore upon the head a helmet of leather with or without metal framework (galea). (See pl. IV. 4, 5.) The cavalry also had the galea and the parma, with greaves of leather. (See pl. III. 5.) The soldier wore beneath his armor a thick woollen under-garment, reaching nearly to the knees (tunica). His shoes were much like sandals with heavy soles, held on by bands over the ankle. His cloak (sagum) was of heavy woollen stuff, usually a single piece of cloth, fastened across the shoulders by a clasp and open in front. It served him as a blanket also; and in battle it was thrown off, so as not to hinder free movement. The cloak of the general or high officer (paludamentum) was of finer texture and ornamented. (See pl. II. 1, 2.)

The standards (signa) of the Roman army were many in number, and of a great variety of forms. The most important was the legion eagle (aquila), of gold, silver, or bronze, with expanded wings, and of the size of a dove. In times of peace it was kept in the temple of Saturn at Rome; on the march and in battle it was borne aloft on a strong pole in the maniple of the primipilus; in camp it was taken off the pole and placed in a little shrine, where it became an object of veneration. (See pl. IV. 2, 8.) The loss of the eagle was reckoned the deepest disgrace. The ancient Persians also had a golden eagle as the royal standard; and to-day the eagle holds an important place among the military emblems of Austria, Russia, Germany, France, and the United States. The cohort had several standards, at least one to each maniple; thus the manipuli are sometimes called signa. They were of many different shapes and designs, representing a wolf, a serpent, a dog, an outstretched hand, the goddess of victory, etc. Underneath frequently were placed as ornaments figures of victorious crowns, metallic disks having in relief the face of the commander, the number or name of the company, and the like. Sometimes the name and number of the legion, cohort, or maniple were indicated on a banner under or over the figure. (See pl. II. 5; pl. IV. 2.) It is probable that the standard of the first maniple of the cohort was also the standard of the cohort. The standard-bearers in general were called signiferi; but the bearer of the legion eagle was given the special name aquilifer. The chief standard-bearers often wore a bear or lion skin over the head to make them look ferocious. (See pl. II. 5.) vexillum was a square or oblong banner used for many purposes. A large red vexillum was placed over the general's tent as a signal to break camp. A similar banner of red or white was carried by the cavalry squads, by the evocati, and on war-ships. (See pl. II. 8, pl. III. 5.)

By means of the standards the movements of troops were largely directed. Hence arose many peculiar expressions, unintelligible without a recognition of this fact. Thus signa inferre means "to advance;" signa referre, "to retreat;" signa convertere, "to face about;" signa efferre, or signa castris vellere, "to march out of camp;" ad signa convenire, "to assemble." Those who fought in the front ranks, before the standards, were called antesignani.

The musical instruments of Caesar's army were of three kinds, — the tuba, the cornu, and the bucina. The tuba, "trumpet," was straight, with funnel-shaped opening, and had a deep tone. It was used to give military signals, such as to form, to advance, to retreat. The cornu and bucina were curved, and had a shriller note. The bučina, "clarion," was sounded to mark the watches, — as at noon, sunset, midnight. The cornu, "horn" (made originally of buffalo horn), gave the classicum, a signal by which the army was called together to hear an address from the commander or a sentence of death pronounced. On the march signals were given by the tuba: in battle, by the cornu and bucina. The horn-blowers were called from the names of their instruments, tubicines, bucinatores and cornicines. (See pl. II. 6, 7.) In Caesar's day the lituus, a kind of horn curved at the larger end like the butt of a pistol, was sometimes used by cavalry. Its tone was harsh and high. It is not spoken of by Caesar. The Romans never had a regular system of music as we have, with different instruments playing different parts. They understood only intervals and melody, not harmony.

SUMMARY.

iii. PROVISIONING AND PAY OF THE SOLDIERS.

Caesar took every precaution to have ample supplies always at hand. The care of the stores was in the hands of a quaestor, with his staff. Not bread, or even flour, but grain (frumentum), usually wheat, was served out to the soldiers for rations. they themselves ground with handmills (molae manuales) and prepared for food, by boiling into a paste or by making into bread without yeast. The grain was portioned out every fifteen days, and on the march each soldier carried his share in a sack. The amount furnished does not seem large when we reflect that the men lived almost exclusively on a vegetable diet. The allowance for the fifteen days was two Roman pecks (modii); about half a bushel by our measure. As the weight of this was not far from thirty pounds, the soldier had about two pounds per day. On difficult or forced marches extra rations were served out. If the soldier desired to do so he could trade off his grain for bread, or buy other articles of food from the numerous traders (mercatores), who accompanied the army and had a flourishing business. When wheat was scarce, barley (hordeum) was substituted. Rations of barley were also frequently served out as punishment for slight offences. In traversing an enemy's country fresh meat was often obtained in abundance. The horses of the cavalry-men and the beasts of burden were fed on barley; but on expeditions green fodder was usually found.

Previous to Caesar's time the pay (merces) of the legionsoldier was about  $6\frac{1}{4}$  cents per day. Caesar doubled this; so that in his army the soldier received  $12\frac{1}{2}$  cents per day, the centurion 25 cents, — about \$46 and \$92 per year respectively. But in successful campaigns the soldiers had a share of the booty (praeda), consisting largely of captives, who were sold as slaves. These were bought up on the spot by the traders, and thus readily turned into cash. Sometimes Caesar gave money realized from the sale of booty (praemium); thus after the conquest of the Bituriges he promised the common soldiers 200 sesterces (about \$8.00) apiece, the centurions 2,000 sesterces (about \$80.00). As other rewards (praemia), the commander could grant to those not Romans the right of citizenship, and to Romans of low degree the right of wearing a gold ring. He could also make special gifts (dona), such as military decorations of metal for the breast (phalerae), corresponding to our medallions; chains (torques); rings for the arms (armillae); little silver or gold spears (hastae purae) or shields (parmae purae); sacrificial bowls (paterae sacrificiales); grain and wine; several kinds of crowns of oak-leaves, or even wrought with gold (coronae). The crown of laurel leaves was bestowed on the victorious commander. At the close of his period of service (twenty years for the infantry, ten years for cavalry), or on reaching his fiftieth year, the soldier who had served well was entitled to an honorable discharge (missio honesta). When released on account of health or disablement he received an invalid's discharge (missio causaria). The general sometimes granted a discharge by favor (missio gratiosa). On account of cowardly or disgraceful conduct the soldier was deprived of his weapons and driven from the camp (exauctoratio ignominiosa), or in extreme cases put to death.

iv. THE ARMY ON THE MARCH.

On the march the army usually advanced in three divisions,—the van (agmen primum), the main force (exercitus, agmen legionum), and the rear (agmen novissimum).

The van was made up of light-armed infantry and cavalry, and had three special functions, — a. To spy out the country through scouts (exploratores); to report the presence of the enemy and any other important information or discoveries; and when in the vicinity of the foe to ascertain his strength, disposition, and the like. The desired knowledge was frequently obtained by capturing in sudden sallies peasants and stragglers, and obliging these to reveal the facts, even by means of tortures. b. To hold an attacking force at bay until the legions could form in battle-order, and to guard the crossings of rivers. c. To hinder the escape of a fleeing enemy till the main force could come up and complete the victory.

The main force marched sometimes in a single column, each legion followed by its own baggage-train; sometimes in a column with the baggage-trains of all the legions together; sometimes in battle array with the baggage under strong guard at some distance, either on one side or behind. The last order of march was observed only when in the neighborhood of a threatening foe.

The rear was made up either of cavalry and light-armed troops or of legion-soldiers, detached from the main force to repel any attack from behind. In dangerous regions, where the nature of the country allowed, a hollow square was formed. In such cases a part of the main force drawn up in battle-order in three ranks took the front; a like detachment held the rear; two other detachments, generally of the cavalry and light-armed troops, closed in the sides. In the middle of the figure thus formed the baggage-trains were placed.

The regular day's march (iter iustum) was from six to seven hours long. The start was usually made at sunrise; but in special emergencies the army got under way at midnight, or two or three o'clock in the morning. The distance ordinarily traversed was thirty thousand paces (passus), between 15 and 20 miles; the Roman military pace was shorter than the common passus (cf. N. to p. 48, 16). But on forced marches (itinera magna) of eight to twelve hours much greater distances were made, — as fifty thousand paces. Rivers were crossed by means of bridges, either permanent or hastily constructed, and by fording.

On the march the soldier carried, besides his food-supply, his cooking utensils (vasa), his arms, blanket, and two rampart stakes (valli). The luggage was done up in a tight bundle (sarcinae; see pl. III. 4), which was fastened to a forked pole, and thus raised over the shoulder. This arrangement was introduced by Marius, in memory of whom soldiers so equipped were called "mules of Marius" (muli Mariani). The helmet was hung by a cord from the neck, the other weapons disposed of in the most convenient way. When it rained, the oblong shields (scuta) were put over the head like a roof. The entire weight of each legion soldier's burden must have been from fifty to sixty pounds,—and much more than this when, on special service, rations were served out for twenty or twenty-five days. The infantry of our day are not expected to carry more than forty-five pounds apiece. When preparing for battle the legion soldiers cast off their luggage, either leaving it in camp or depositing it in heaps in a guarded place.

v. THE ARMY IN CAMP.

The Roman camp was laid out, fortified, and guarded with great care. Even when the army was to remain in a place but a single night the same precautions were taken as if a stay of weeks was intended. When the army was on the march, men were sent forward to choose a suitable location for a camp and measure it off (castra metari; the surveyors were called castrorum metatores or mensores). Whenever possible, a site was selected on a slight elevation (locus superior), with abundance of water and of wood for fuel near at hand. The proximity of a dense forest or overhanging mountain was avoided, that a favorable opportunity of attack might not be given to the enemy. When possible, the rear or one side was placed facing a river.

The camp was usually square or oblong; in a few cases we read of camps of other shapes adapted to the nature of the ground. First an embankment was thrown up on all sides. Outside of this was a ditch, from which the earth for it was taken. On the outer edge of the embankment a row of strong stakes or palisades (valli) was driven firmly in. The rampart thus made (vallum) was several feet high and wide enough for the soldiers to stand on behind the palisades. The ditch (fossa) was from nine to twelve feet wide, and from seven to nine feet deep. When the army expected to remain in the same place for a long time (castra statīva), sometimes watch-towers were added at certain intervals, and the intervening spaces further protected by a roof. (See pl. VI. 6.) The labor of fortifying a camp was prodigious; the ease and quickness with which the work was done are a testimony to the endurance of the Roman soldiers. The system was in every way productive of the best results. It lessened greatly the chances of successful night attacks by the enemy; and it made the army more independent, ready to stand wholly on the defensive if need be. Modern generals are returning in this respect to the Roman tactics, and while in the enemy's country they rarely pass a night without throwing up breastworks and making use of whatever means of fortifying may be at hand. In our recent War for the Union not infrequently barrels or hogsheads filled with earth took the place of the Roman rampart.

The camp had four gates (see pl. IV. 10). That in the direction of the advance, toward the enemy, was called the porta praetoria; the one opposite to this, at the rear, porta decumana; those on the right and left side respectively, as one faced the front, porta principalis dextra and porta principalis sinistra. The last two were connected by the chief street (via principalis), from the middle point of which another street (via praetoria) ran to the porta praetoria. Parallel with the via principalis on the side towards the rear ran another important street, the via quintana. In the middle of the camp a large oblong space was set off for the general's tent, the headquarters (praetorium). Behind this was the quaestor's place (quaestorium). Just inside the porta decumana were the booths of the traders. Inside the rampart, between it and the tents, a vacant space two hundred feet wide was left for wagons and animals. The remaining room in the inclosure was systematically divided, so that every maniple knew its place and could find its quarters at once. The tents were of leather, of the shape of huts (see pl. V. 3). Each was calculated to hold ten men; but a centurion seems generally to have had one to himself. In a hostile region a strong guard was always kept before the gates; and the entrances were made more easily defensible by a winding approach. The night, from sunset to sunrise, was divided into four watches (vigilia), called prima nox, nox concubia (ending at midnight), nox media, and gallicinium. The password of the sentinels, different each night, was written on slips of wood, given by the commander to the military tribunes, and passed by these to the men on duty.

The winter quarters (hiberna, or castra hiberna) were made more comfortable than the ordinary encampments, by the substitution of rude huts for tents. Many Roman camps became the nucleus of permanent settlements, which exist still in cities of to-day. In several towns which originated thus the plan of the Roman camp can be clearly seen in the arrangement of streets and the surrounding wall. The most marked instance of this is in the city of Chester, England, the name of which also is derived from castra (so too Rochester, from Rodolphi castra, "Rudolph's Camp," and all names of cities ending in -chester; compare Lincoln, from Lindi colonia). An idea of the size of a Roman camp may be gained from the fact that Chester contains about thirty-five thousand inhabitants, most of whom live within the limits of the wall that replaced the ancient rampart. The four gates remain, doubtless, in the places designated by the Roman surveyors. The two main streets were levelled by the Romans, and where they cross at right angles the rock was cut down four to ten feet. Many relics of antiquity have been dug up in and about the town.

vi. THE ARMY IN BATTLE ARRAY.

The usual battle order of the legion-soldiers was a threefold line (acies triplex) made by arranging the maniples in three rows or ranks. Between the maniples of each row there was left space about equal in width to the face of the maniple; and the maniples of each row stood opposite the vacant spaces of the other row nearest to it, like the squares on a checker-board (see pl. V. 4). If the front rank was hard pressed, either it retreated into the spaces of the second, or the maniples of the second advanced into the spaces of the first and bore the brunt. The third rank took up its position a little farther behind the second than the second behind the first, so that it could be readily ordered to any point where help might be most needed. The soldiers of this rank waited on one knee with their shields in front of them until bidden by the commander to rise (consurgite, triarii!) and charge. If the enemy threatened from different quarters at the same time, the form of the front was Thus at times the line of batvaried to suit the circumstances. tle presented the shape of a hollow square, a circle, a half moon, etc. The place of the light-armed troops and cavalry was on the wings; that is, on the right and the left of the front presented by the legion-soldiers. They opened the engagement by skirmishing, prevented flank movements of the enemy, drew on themselves the brunt of the attack if the legions wished to take another position, and were employed in various other ways as occasion demanded. The cavalry in particular followed up the victory.

vii. OPERATIONS AGAINST FORTIFIED PLACES.

The taking of walled towns was accomplished either by sudden storming without long preparation (oppugnatio repentina), or by regular siege (obsidio, or obsessio). The former was not attempted unless there was good prospect of success. In such cases the forces rushed forward, tried to batter down the gates, fill up the moat (fossas complere), mount the walls with ladders (scalae),—in short, endeavored in every way to get into the place. The siege was a work of months. It aimed to hedge in the enemy and bring him to terms through starvation, or to destroy his defences or make them useless by means of counterworks. After the enemy had been so weakened that an attack would probably reduce him, and after the preparations were completed, a final assault was made.

The siege was begun by extending a line of works (circumvallatio), in case the nature of the site allowed, entirely around the place to be reduced. Then a high and wide mound of earth and timber (agger) was begun just outside the reach of the enemy's weapons, and gradually prolonged directly toward the city wall, and raised until the top was on a level with this, or even higher. In the agger there were passage-ways through which the materials for the structure could be safely carried. The workmen at the front were protected by movable breastworks (plutei; see pl. VI. 4, 5), or by sheds resting on wheels (vineae: see plate VI. 9), made of timber or of raw-hides stretched over thick wickerwork. Rows of vineae were placed along the sides of the agger to afford passage-ways to the front (see pl. VI. 2). High movable towers (turres ambulatoriae) were filled with soldiers and brought up near the walls (see pl. VI. 7; pl. I). In the lowest storey of the movable tower, or under a separate roof, was the battering ram (aries), an enormous beam with a metallic head swung against the walls with terrific force (see pl. V. 1). There were also several kinds of machines (tormenta) for hurling great missiles against the wall or over into the city. Of these the most important were: a. the catapult (catapulta; see pl. VI. 8) for shooting immense arrows; b. the ballista (ballista; see pl. V. 8), which was constructed on the same principle as the catapult, but cast stones instead of arrows; its missiles often weighed a hundred pounds or more, and could be thrown any distance up to half a mile; c. the wild ass (onager; see pl. V. 7) which hurled stones and masses often to immense distances.

The other operations of the siege varied according to circumstances. Where the ground allowed, the walls were undermined and tunnels run under the town. Meanwhile, of course, the besieged were not idle. Mines they met by counter-mines. With great hooks they tried to catch the head of the battering ram and hold it, or let down masses of wood or wickerwork along the side of the wall to deaden the force of the blow. By frequent sallies (eruptiones) they endeavored to destroy the works of the besiegers, drove the workmen from their posts, hurled fire-brands into the sheds, towers, and even into the agger. Sometimes the work of weeks or months was thus in a short time destroyed.

Owing to the amount of wood used the danger from fire was ever great. Not infrequently even parts of the agger were burned. When a breach had been made in the wall, or a gate battered down, an attack was begun on all sides where it was thought possible to force an entrance. Effort was made to connect the agger or towers with the top of the wall by means of planks and beams thrown across (see pl. I). Whole maniples, by holding their oblong shields close together above their heads, formed a testudo, under cover of which they marched up to the walls and tried to scale them, or entered the breach (see pl. V. 6). The shields were so firmly held that a second detachment sometimes mounted over the heads of the first, and in a few instances even war-chariots were driven over the testudo. The name testudo was also employed to designate a peculiar form of the vinea used by the besiegers (see pl. V. 10). carefully planned were their works, so powerful their military engines, and so irresistible their onset, that the Romans rarely failed in reducing a city which they had determined to take.

viii. THE ROMAN WAR-SHIPS.

The war-ships (naves longae) of Caesar's time rarely had more than a single sail, and were propelled mainly by means of oars. There were usually three rows or banks of oars one above the other (triremes); but we read of vessels with one, two, four, and even five banks of oars. The rowers kept time to the sound of a horn or click of a hammer. The rudder (gubernaculum) was not like those of to-day, but consisted of a wide blade like a large paddle thrust down into the sea on one or both sides of the stern. The anchor was much like those of our time. At the prow, just above the water, was the ship's beak (rostra), consisting of one or more sharp metal-pointed beams thrust out some distance, the aim of which was to pierce the side of the enemy's vessel. On the fore part of the ship there were usually a tower from which missiles could be hurled over into a vessel near at hand, a lot of grappling hooks by which the opposing ship might be seized, and a movable bridge that could be thrown across in boarding. The stern was often ornamented with a swan's head and other devices. The ships had particular names, as Aquila, Apollo, Spes, and the like. The flag was square or oblong (vexillum); that of the admiral's vessel was distinguished by a purple color. The size of the war-ships varied greatly; the average length of the triremes was perhaps a hundred and fifty feet, - breadth, twenty feet. Ships built for quick movement, for inspecting the enemy's strongholds and harbors, and similar undertakings (naves actuariae), were smaller and lighter. The despatch vessels (naves tabellariae) were very narrow and carried many sails, being provided generally with but one bank of oars. The Roman naval tactics consisted mainly in either propelling a vessel with great force against a rival and crushing the side, or in catching hold of the hostile craft with hooks, pulling alongside, springing over on it, and settling the conflict with a hand-to-hand fight. The admiral was called praefectus classis.

III. THE THEATRE OF THE GALLIC WAR.

i. GAUL.

1. The Land and the Peoples of Gaul.

The word Gallia was used by the Romans in three different ways. a. In its broadest sense it included Gallia Cisalpīna, north Italy, and Gallia Transalpīna, a vast region which comprised all of France, the greater part of Switzerland, and the western portion of Germany, with Holland and Belgium. b. In a narrower sense Gallia embraced only Gallia Transalpina; with this meaning we use the word "Gaul." c. In its most restricted use Gallia was applied to the land of the Galli, the middle part of Gaul. In Caesar, Gallia alone usually refers to Gallia Transalpina, "Gaul." According to him it falls into three parts: a. The land of the Belgae, in the northeast, between the Seine, the Marne, and the Rhine. b. The land of the Celtae, or Galli, in the central part between the Seine, the Marne, and the Garonne. c. The land of the Aquitani, in the south, between the Garonne and the Pyrenees. these divisions, however, properly belonging to Gaul, but before Caesar's time already subject to the Romans, was the Province (provincia) lying along the southeast coast, and extending for some distance back into the interior. (See map).

The chief mountains of Gaul were: a. Alpes, the Alps, of which the western and southern part (the French and the Swiss Alps) were known to Caesar. b. Mons Cevenna, the Cévennes, west of the Rhone. c. Montes Pyrenaei, the Pyrenees, on the border towards Spain (Hispania). d. Mons Iura, the Jura, between the headwaters of the Rhone and the Rhine. e. Mons Vosegus, the Vosegs, north of the Jura, and west of the Rhine. f. Mons (and Silva) Arduenna, Ardennes, on both sides of the Meuse.

The most important rivers of Gaul were: a. Rhodănus, the Rhone, which flows through the Lake of Geneva (Lacus Lemannus), and empties into the Mediterranean near Marseilles (Massilia): tributaries, Arar, Saône; and Isăra, Isère. b. Garumna, Garonne, on which was situated the city Tolosa, Toulouse. c. Liger, Loire, with the town Cenăbum (Orléans). d. Sequăna, Seine, on which was Lutetia Parisiorum, Paris; tributary, Matrona, Marne. e. Scaldis, Schelde. f. Mosa, Meuse, or Maas; tributary, Sabis, Sambre. g. Rhenus, Rhine; tributary, Mosella, Mosel.

In Caesar's time all Gaul except the Province was occupied by tribes more or less barbarous, which were divided into three great groups. The most powerful were,—

- (1). In the land of the Belgae: a. The Treveri, along the Mosel. b. The Remi, between the Meuse and the Seine (hence the name of the city Rheims). c. The Belloväci, north of the Seine (Beauvais). d. The Ambiāni, north of the Belloväci (Amiens). e. The Nervii, along the Schelde. f. The Aduatuci, along the Sambre; these were of German origin. g. The Eburones, along the Meuse. h. The Morini, in the neighborhood of Calais. i. The Menapii, on the plain between the lower part of the Meuse and the Schelde.
- (2). In the land of the Celtae, or Galli: α. The Helvetii, in Switzerland. b. The Sequăni, along the Arar; chief city, Vesontio, to-day Besançon. c. The Aedui, between the Saône and the Loire; chief city, Bibracte, Mont Beuvray. d. The Senŏnes, about the upper part of the Seine; city, Agedincum. e. The Carnūtes, on both sides of the Loire; city, Cenăbum, Orléans. f. The Arverni (compare the modern name Auvergne), in and about the Cévennes Mountains; city, Gergovia. g. The Biturĭges, in the most central part of Gaul; city, Avarĭcum, Bourges. h. The Lingŏnes, about the sources of the Meuse and the Seine; city, Alesia, Alise. i. The Parisii, in the region of Paris. j. The Veněti, along the west coast, in Brittany.
- (3). In the land of the Aquitani there were many small tribes, of which only a few are worthy of special mention:

a. The Sontiātes, along the Garonne.
b. The Vocates, northwest of the Sontiates.
c. The Tarusates, southwest of the Sontiates.
d. The Tarbelli, along the west coast near the Pyrenees.

The Belgae and the Celtae belonged mainly to the great Keltic (or Celtic) stock of peoples, which is a branch of the Indo-European family. Hence these had at least a remote kinship with the Greeks and the Romans. The Aquitanian tribes were of different origin, and connected with the Iberians of Spain. Their descendants still survive in the Basques of the Pyrenees.

These many peoples, or states (civitates), of Gaul were constantly at war with one another, the stronger striving to extend their sway, the weaker to regain or maintain their independence. In each tribe usually there were two factions, each contending for the mastery. Changes of rulers were very frequent. The power was everywhere in the hands of the nobles and the Druid priests. The common folk were in a condition little better than slavery. This unsettled state of society enabled Caesar not infrequently to further his own ends, by setting one people or one party against the other.

The Druids had great influence. Above the individual, above the state, as endowed with authority from the unseen world they awed into submission the fierce spirit of a people that acknowledged no other control. They alone had knowledge; from generation to generation they handed down by word of mouth a body of doctrines about the universe and life. Believing in the transmigration of souls they exhorted men not to fear death, since immortality must follow. To the Druids was entrusted the administration of justice. Whoso obeyed not their decrees was ever after treated as an outcast. Once a year Druids from all parts of Gaul met in the land of the Carnutes, and settled difficulties between tribes as well as individuals. In Caesar's time the great stronghold of Druidism, however, was not Gaul but Britain. The Gauls were then degenerating. The growth of towns and the increase of wealth had made the distinctions of classes very marked, while the decline of society was hastened by corrupting contact with the Greeks. The masses were in absolute dependence upon the nobles, in a kind of feudal relation.

2. History of Gaul.

FROM a very early period Gauls in great numbers had occasionally invaded or threatened Italy and the countries of the East. Rome itself was sacked by a horde of them under Brennus in B.C. 390; and for nearly three hundred years after that, only the most strenuous efforts kept them at bay. In the third century before Christ a great multitude of Gauls pressed on to Asia Minor and settled there; their descendants were the Galatians, to whom Paul wrote. Yet about 600 B.C. a company of Phocaean Greeks from Asia Minor founded Massilia, and held in subjection a considerable district around it. In 122 B.c. the Romans secured a firm foothold in Gaul by founding the colony of Aquae Sextiae, now Aix, near the south coast. Soon Marseilles, by a nominal alliance, became tributary to Rome, and the surrounding region was organized into a province. now became the seat of war with invading Gauls and Teutons, till the great victory won by Marius at Aix B.C. 102.

The first opportunity Caesar had for interfering in the affairs of Gaul outside the Province was afforded by the attempt of the Helvetii to leave their country and seek a new home to the westward. Soon after, he was asked by several tribes to aid them against the German king Ariovistus. Thus becoming involved in the matters of Gaul, on one pretext or another he pushed his claims and conquests until all the land was in his power. The most formidable foes he met were, besides Ariovistus, the Aeduan Dumnŏrix; Indutiomărus, the leader of the Trevĕri; Ambiŏrix, prince of the Eburones; and greatest of all, Vercingetŏrix.

After the conquest many Roman colonies were settled in Gaul. The country was rapidly Romanized. It was divided by Augustus into four provinces: a. Narbonensis, which in territory was the same as the former Provincia; capital, Narbo, now Narbonne. b. Lugdunensis, which included most of the central and the eastern parts of Gaul; capital, Lugdūnum, now Lyons. c. Aquitania, covering not merely the old land of the Aquitani, but the country north as far as the Loire. d. Belgica, comprising the rest of Gaul not belonging to the other provinces. The original speech was replaced by the Latin. Roman institutions became everywhere established. The remains of the Roman structures, — amphitheatres, theatres, aqueducts, and the like, — in South France particularly, are most imposing. In Paris one is still shown the now crumbling arches of a Roman bath.

With the downfall of the Roman Empire in the fifth century of our era Gaul was overrun by German tribes, who settled in it as conquerors, not destroying the inhabitants, but holding these as a subject population. The Franks were among the most powerful of the invaders, and gave their name, first, to a district in the northern part; later, to the whole country. From the imposing of new authorities upon an old firmly-established political and social organization arose the Feudal system, with its many gradations of rank and subdivisions of territory, with its restless, turbulent spirit and tendencies to disorder. In the ninth century Gaul formed a part of the empire of Karl the Great (Charlemagne). When this fell to pieces the land was rent with turmoils for several hundred years, until out of the various discordant elements the French monarchy was developed. became a republic in the latter part of the last century, and has vacillated between monarchy and democracy ever since.

But amid all these changes, from the Roman period till now, there has been a continuity of life, language, and institutions. The Latin gradually became transformed into the French. The origin of many a local custom to-day is to be sought in remote antiquity. Many a town of France has in its municipal organization peculiarities that point back to the laws of the Roman Empire. It is said that not a few of the territorial divisions of the French Republic are on the old boundary lines of Gallic tribes; that down to 1789, indeed, the local limits of Gaul remained substantially unchanged. Physically, politically, and socially the French show the traits, tendencies, and spirit of their Gallic ancestors. Other race elements have been infused, yet the Gauls form the basis of the French nation. On the heights of Alise (ancient Alesia), where the bravest and noblest of the Gauls made the last struggle for freedom, there is a monument, the inscription on which translated reads, "Napoleon III., Emperor of the French, to the memory of Vercingetorix." This is not misplaced sentiment; the French have still the same love of glory and love of freedom that urged on Vercingetorix.

ii. GERMANY.

Before Caesar's time Germany (Germania) was to the Romans an unknown land. Caesar himself has left but little According to him its boundaries were information about it. the Rhine and the Danube. Through the whole country stretched a vast forest (Silva Hercynia), sixty days' journey long and nine days' journey wide. Of the peoples the most important were: a. The Suebi, Swabians, in the middle of the country, powerful and much feared on all sides. b. The Ubii, dwelling next to the Rhine, friendly to Caesar. c. The Sugambri, north of the Ubii. d. The Usipetes, north of the Sugambri. e. The Cherusci, between the Elbe and the Weser. The Sugambri and the Usipetes, being driven out by the Suebi, came over into Gaul, whence they were forced back by Caesar. victories over the German tribes were gained under Augustus and others of the early Emperors, but the country was never subdued by the Romans, except the borders along the Rhine and the Danube. There are remains of an old Roman tower and aqueduct at Mainz (French, Mayence). A Roman colony was founded where Vienna now stands, and Trajan built a road along the Danube.

iii. Britain.

THE British Isles (Lat. Britannia, Britannicae Insulae) were early known to the Greeks through the Phoenician traders, but Caesar is the first ancient writer who gives any account of them from personal observation. In neither of his expeditions to England did he penetrate far into the country, and not a few of the statements he makes about it are inaccurate or erroneous. He thought the land stretched much farther than it does to the southwest, and lay towards Spain. The principal tribe in his time was the Trinobantes, who lived north of the Thames (Tamesis). Of Ireland he knew nothing further than the name (Hibernia), and that it was about half the size of Britain proper. England was thoroughly subdued by the Romans in the latter part of the first century A.D. Many traces of Roman towns, roads, and other evidences of occupation are still to be seen. From the Latin strata our word "street" directly comes. In the fifth century England was overrun by Low-German tribes, among them the Angles and Saxons, who form the basis of the English people.

The League of all Gaul, under the leadership of Vercingetorix. against Caesar; the final supremacy of Caesar. 1–90.

That Julius Caesar was a famous man; With what his valour did enrich his wit, His wit set down to make his valour live: Death makes no conquest of this conqueror; For now he lives in fame, though not in life.

RICHARD III., act iii. sc. 1.

suae civitatis imperium obtenturus esset; non esse dubium, quin totius Galliae plurimum Helvetii possent; se suis copiis suoque exercitu illis regna conciliaturum confirmat. Hac oratione adducti inter se fidem et iusiurandum dant, et regno occupato per tres potentissimos ac firmissimos populos totius 5 Galliae sese potiri posse sperant.

IV. Ea res est Helvetiis per indicium enuntiata. Moribus suis Orgetorigem ex vinclis causam dicere coëgerunt. Damnatum poenam sequi oportebat, ut igni cremaretur. Die constituta causae dictionis Orgetorix ad iudicium omnem 10 suam familiam, ad hominum milia decem, undique coëgit, et omnes clientes obaeratosque suos, quorum magnum numerum habebat, eodem conduxit; per eos, ne causam diceret, se eripuit. Cum civitas ob eam rem incitata armis ius suum exsequi conaretur, multitudinemque hominum ex agris magistratus cogerent, Orgetorix mortuus est; neque abest suspicio, ut Helvetii arbitrantur, quin ipse sibi mortem consciverit.

The Helvetii get ready; they plan to go through the Province.

V. Post eius mortem nihilo minus Helvetii id, quod constituerant, facere conantur, ut e finibus suis exeant. Ubi iam se ad eam rem paratos esse arbitrati sunt, oppida sua omnia, 20 numero ad duodecim, vicos ad quadringentos, reliqua privata aedificia incendunt, frumentum omne, praeterquam quod secum portaturi erant, comburunt, ut domum reditionis spe sublata paratiores ad omnia pericula subeunda essent; trium mensum molita cibaria sibi quemque domo efferre iubent. 25 Persuadent Rauricis et Tulingis et Latobrigis finitimis, uti ecdem usi consilio oppidis suis vicisque exustis una cum eis proficiscantur; Boiosque, qui trans Rhenum incoluerant et in agrum Noricum transierant Noreiamque oppugnarant, receptos ad se socios sibi adsciscunt.

VI. Erant omnino itinera duo, quibus itineribus domo exire possent: unum per Sequanos, angustum et difficile, inter montem Iuram et flumen Rhodanum, vix qua singuli carri ducerentur; mons autem altissimus impendebat, ut facile perpauci prohibere possent; alterum per provinciam nostram, 35 multo facilius atque expeditius, propterca quod inter fines

Caesar hastens to Geneva; he keeps the Helvetii out of the Province.

VII. Caesari cum id nuntiatum esset, eos per provinciam nostram iter facere conari, maturat ab urbe proficisci et, quam maximis potest itineribus, in Galliam ulteriorem contendit et ad Genavam pervenit. Provinciae toti quam maximum po-15 test militum numerum imperat (erat omnino in Gallia ulteriore legio una), pontem, qui erat ad Genavam, iubet rescindi. Caesar, quod memoria tenebat, L. Cassium consulem occisum exercitumque eius ab Helvetiis pulsum et sub iugum missum, concedendum non 25 putabat; neque homines inimico animo, data facultate per provinciam itineris faciundi, temperaturos ab iniuria et maleficio existimabat. Tamen, ut spatium intercedere posset, dum milites, quos imperaverat, convenirent, legatis respondit, diem se ad deliberandum sumpturum; si quid vellent, ad Id. 30 April. reverterentur.

VIII. Interea ea legione, quam secum habebat, militibusque, qui ex provincia convenerant, a lacu Lemanno, qui in flumen Rhodanum influit, ad montem Iuram, qui fines Sequanorum ab Helvetiis dividit, milia passuum decem novem 35 murum in altitudinem pedum sedecim fossamque perducit.

CAESAR'S LINE OF WORKS ALONG THE RHONE FROM GENEVA TO PAS DE L'ÉCLUSE.

The Rhone is represented as widened in certain parts, as it is supposed to have been in the time of Caesar.

Eo opere perfecto praesidia disponit, castella communit, quo facilius, si se invito transire conarentur, prohibere possit. Ubi ea dies, quam constituerat cum legatis, venit, et legati ad eum reverterunt, negat, se more et exemplo populi Romani posse iter ulli per provinciam dare; et, si vim facere 5 conentur, prohibiturum ostendit. Helvetii, ea spe deiecti, navibus iunctis ratibusque compluribus factis, alii vadis Rhodani, qua minima altitudo fluminis erat, nonnumquam interdiu, saepius noctu, si perrumpere possent, conati, operis munitione et militum concursu et telis repulsi hoc conatu 10 destiterunt.

They get leave to go through the land of the Sequani.

IX. Relinquebatur una per Sequanos via, qua Sequanis invitis propter angustias ire non poterant. His cum sua sponte persuadere non possent, legatos ad Dumnorigem Aeduum mittunt, ut eo deprecatore a Sequanis impetrarent. 15 Dumnorix gratia et largitione apud Sequanos plurimum poterat, et Helvetiis erat amicus, quod ex ea civitate Orgetorigis filiam in matrimonium duxerat, et cupiditate regni adductus novis rebus studebat, et quam plurimas civitates suo beneficio habere obstrictas volebat. Itaque rem suscipit, et a Sequanis 20 impetrat, ut per fines suos Helvetios ire patiantur, obsidesque uti inter sese dent perficit: Sequani, ne itinere Helvetios prohibeant; Helvetii, ut sine maleficio et iniuria transeant.

Caesar fetches five legions from Italy; the Aedui and others entreat his aid against the Helvetii.

X. Caesari renuntiatur, Helvetiis esse in animo per agrum Sequanorum et Aeduorum iter in Santŏnum fines facere, qui 25 non longe a Tolosatium finibus absunt, quae civitas est in provincia. Id si fieret, intellegebat, magno cum periculo provinciae futurum, ut homines bellicosos, populi Romani inimicos, locis patentibus maximeque frumentariis finitimos haberet. Ob eas causas ei munitioni, quam fecerat, T. Labie- 30 num legatum praefecit; ipse in Italiam magnis itineribus contendit duasque ibi legiones conscribit, et tres, quae circum Aquileiam hiemabant, ex hibernis educit, et qua proximum iter in ulteriorem Galliam per Alpes erat, cum his quinque legionibus ire contendit. Ibi Ceutrones et Graioceli et Caturiges locis superioribus occupatis itinere exercitum prohibere conantur. Compluribus his proeliis pulsis, ab Ocelo, quod est citerioris provinciae extremum, in fines Vocontiorum ulterioris provinciae die septimo pervenit; inde in Allobrogum fines, ab Allobrogibus in Segusiavos exercitum ducit. Hi sunt extra provinciam trans Rhodanum primi.

XI. Helvetii iam per angustias et fines Sequanorum suas 10 copias traduxerant, et in Aeduorum fines pervenerant eorumque agros populabantur. Aedui, cum se suaque ab eis defendere non possent, legatos ad Caesarem mittunt rogatum auxilium: Ita se omni tempore de populo Romano meritos esse, ut paene in conspectu exercitus nostri agri vastari, liberi 15 eorum in servitutem abduci, oppida expugnari non debuerint. Eodem tempore Aedui Ambarri, necessarii et consanguinei Aeduorum, Caesarem certiorem faciunt, sese depopulatis agris non facile ab oppidis vim hostium prohibere. Item Allobroges, qui trans Rhodanum vicos possessiones-20 que habebant, fuga se ad Caesarem recipiunt, et demonstrant, sibi praeter agri solum nihil esse reliqui. Quibus rebus adductus Caesar non exspectandum sibi statuit, dum omnibus fortunis sociorum consumptis in Santonos Helvetii pervenirent.

Caesar cuts to pieces one division of the Helvetii by the Arar. The rest send deputies to treat with him.

25 XII. Flumen est Arar, quod per fines Aeduorum et Sequanorum in Rhodanum influit, incredibili lenitate, ita ut oculis, in utram partem fluat, iudicari non possit. Id Helvetii ratibus ac lintribus iunctis transibant. Ubi per exploratores Caesar certior factus est, tres iam partes copiarum Helvetios 30 id flumen traduxisse, quartam fere partem citra flumen Arărim reliquam esse, de tertia vigilia cum legionibus tribus e castris profectus ad eam partem pervenit, quae nondum flumen transierat. Eos impeditos et inopinantes aggressus magnam partem eorum concidit; reliqui sese fugae manda 35 runt atque in proximas silvas abdiderunt. Is pagus appella-batur Tigurīnus: nam omnis civitas Helvetia in quattuor pagos divisa est. Hic pagus unus, cum domo exisset patrum nostrorum memoria, L. Cassium consulem interfecerat et eius exercitum sub iugum miserat. Ita sive casu sive consilio deorum immortalium, quae pars civitatis Helvetiae insignem 5 calamitatem populo Romano intulerat, ea princeps poenas persolvit. Qua in re Caesar non solum publicas, sed etiam privatas iniurias ultus est, quod eius soceri L. Pisonis avum, L. Pisonem legatum, Tigurini eodem proelio, quo Cassium, interfecerant.

XIII. Hoc proelio facto reliquas copias Helvetiorum ut consequi posset, pontem in Arare faciendum curat, atque ita exercitum traducit. Helvetii repentino eius adventu commoti, cum id, quod ipsi diebus xx aegerrime confecerant, ut flumen transirent, illum uno die fecisse intellegerent, legatos 15 ad eum mittunt; cuius legationis Divico princeps fuit, qui bello Cassiano dux Helvetiorum fuerat. Is ita cum Caesare egit: Si pacem populus Romanus cum Helvetiis faceret, in eam partem ituros atque ibi futuros Helvetios, ubi eos Caesar constituisset atque esse voluisset; sin bello persequi perseve- 20 raret, reminisceretur et veteris incommodi populi Romani et pristinae virtutis Helvetiorum. Quod improviso unum pagum adortus esset, cum ei, qui flumen transissent, suis auxilium ferre non possent, ne ob eam rem aut suae magnopere virtuti tribueret aut ipsos despiceret; se ita a patribus maioribusque 25 suis didicisse, ut magis virtute quam dolo contenderent aut insidiis niterentur. Ouare ne committeret, ut is locus, ubi constitissent, ex calamitate populi Romani et internicione exercitus nomen caperet aut memoriam proderet.

They reject Caesar's conditions, and march on; Caesar follows.

XIV. His Caesar ita respondit: Eo sibi minus dubitationis 30 dari, quod eas res, quas legati Helvetii commemorassent, memoria teneret, atque eo gravius ferre, quo minus merito populi Romani accidissent; qui si alicuius iniuriae sibi conscius fuisset, non fuisse difficile cavere; sed eo deceptum, quod neque commissum a se intellegeret, quare timeret, 35 neque sine causa timendum putaret. Quod si veteris contu-meliae oblivisci vellet, num etiam recentium iniuriarum, quod eo invito iter per provinciam per vim temptassent, quod Aeduos, quod Ambarros, quod Allobrogas vexassent, memoriam deponere posse? Quod sua victoria tam insolenter 5 gloriarentur, quodque tam diu se impune iniurias tulisse admirarentur, eodem pertinere. Consuesse enim deos immortales, quo gravius homines ex commutatione rerum doleant, quos pro scelere eorum ulcisci velint, his secundiores interdum res et diuturniorem impunitatem concedere. Cum ea 10 ita sint, tamen, si obsides ab eis sibi dentur, uti ea, quae polliceantur, facturos intellegat, et si Aeduis de iniuriis, quas ipsis sociisque eorum intulerint, item si Allobrogibus satisfaciant, sese cum eis pacem esse facturum. Divico respondit: Ita Helvetios a maioribus suis institutos esse, uti obsides accipere, 15 non dare, consuerint: eius rei populum Romanum esse testem. Hoc responso dato discessit.

XV. Postero die castra ex eo loco movent. Idem facit Caesar equitatumque omnem, ad numerum quattuor milium, quem ex omni provincia et Aeduis atque eorum sociis coactum 20 habebat, praemittit, qui videant, quas in partes hostes iter faciant. Qui cupidius novissimum agmen insecuti alieno loco cum equitatu Helvetiorum proelium committunt; et pauci de nostris cadunt. Quo proelio sublati Helvetii, quod quingentis equitibus tantam multitudinem equitum propule-25 rant, audacius subsistere nonnumquam et novissimo agmine proelio nostros lacessere coeperunt. Caesar suos a proelio continebat, ac satis habebat in praesentia hostem rapinis, pabulationibus populationibusque prohibere. Ita dies circiter quindecim iter fecerunt, uti inter novissimum hostium agmen 30 et nostrum primum non amplius quinis aut senis milibus passuum interesset.

The Aedui neglect to bring grain; Caesar learns of disloyalty.

XVI. Interim cotidie Caesar Aeduos frumentum, quod essent publice polliciti, flagitare. Nam propter frigora, quod Gallia sub septentrionibus, ut ante dictum est, posita est, non 35 modo frumenta in agris matura non erant, sed ne pabuli quidem satis magna copia suppetebat; eo autem frumento, quod flumine Arare navibus subvexerat, propterea minus uti poterat, quod iter ab Arare Helvetii averterant, a quibus discedere nolebat. Diem ex die ducere Aedui: conferri, comportari, adesse dicere. Ubi se diutius duci intellexit et diem instare, quo die frumentum militibus metiri oporteret, convocatis 5 corum principibus, quorum magnam copiam in castris habebat, in his Divitiăco et Lisco, qui summo magistratui praeerat, quem 'vergobretum' appellant Aedui, qui creatur annuus et vitae necisque in suos habet potestatem, graviter eos accusat, quod, cum neque emi neque ex agris sumi posset, tam re necessario tempore, tam propinquis hostibus, ab eis non sublevetur, praesertim cum magna ex parte eorum precibus adductus bellum susceperit; multo etiam gravius, quod sit destitutus, queritur.

XVII. Tum demum Liscus oratione Caesaris adductus, 15 quod antea tacuerat, proponit: Esse nonnullos, quorum auctoritas apud plebem plurimum valeat, qui privatim plus possint quam ipsi magistratus. Hos seditiosa atque improba oratione multitudinem deterrere, ne frumentum conferant, quod praestare debeant; si iam principatum Galliae obtinere 20 non possint, Gallorum quam Romanorum imperia praeferre, neque dubitare quin, si Helvetios superaverint Romani, una cum reliqua Gallia Aeduis libertatem sint erepturi. Ab eisdem nostra consilia, quaeque in castris gerantur, hostibus enuntiari: hos a se coerceri non posse. Quin etiam, 25 quod necessariam rem coactus Caesari enuntiarit, intellegere sese, quanto id cum periculo fecerit, et ob eam causam, quam diu potuerit, tacuisse.

The treachery of Dumnorix is proved.

XVIII. Caesar hac oratione Lisci Dumnorigem, Divitiăci fratrem, designari sentiebat; sed, quod pluribus praesentibus 30 eas res iactari nolebat, celeriter concilium dimittit, Liscum retinet. Quaerit ex solo ea, quae in conventu dixerat. Dicit liberius atque audacius. Eadem secreto ab aliis quaerit; reperit esse vera: Ipsum esse Dumnorigem, summa audacia, magna apud plebem propter liberalitatem gratia, cupidum 35 rerum novarum. Compluris annos portoria reliquaque omnia Aeduorum vectigalia parvo pretio redempta habere, propterea quod illo licente contra liceri audeat nemo. et suam rem familiarem auxisse et facultates ad largiendum magnas comparasse; magnum numerum equitatus suo sumptu 5 semper alere et circum se habere, neque solum domi, sed etiam apud finitimas civitates largiter posse, atque huius potentiae causa matrem in Biturigibus homini illic nobilissimo ac potentissimo collocasse; ipsum ex Helvetiis uxorem habere, sororem ex matre et propinquas suas nuptum in alias civitates to collocasse. Favere et cupere Helvetiis propter eam affinitatem, odisse etiam suo nomine Caesarem et Romanos, quod eorum adventu potentia eius deminuta et Divitiacus frater in antiquum locum gratiae atque honoris sit restitutus. Si quid accidat Romanis, summam in spem per Helvetios regni obti-15 nendi venire; imperio populi Romani non modo de regno, sed etiam de ea, quam habeat, gratia desperare. Reperiebat etiam in quaerendo Caesar, quod proelium equestre adversum paucis ante diebus esset factum, initium eius fugae factum a Dumnorige atque eius equitibus (nam equitatui, quem auxilio 20 Caesari Aedui miserant, Dumnorix praeerat): eorum fuga reliquum esse equitatum perterritum.

Caesar consults Divitiacus, for whose sake Dumnorix is pardoned.

XIX. Quibus rebus cognitis, cum ad has suspiciones certissimae res accederent, quod per fines Sequanorum Helvetios traduxisset, quod obsides inter eos dandos curasset, quod 25 ea omnia non modo iniussu suo et civitatis sed etiam inscientibus ipsis fecisset, quod a magistratu Aeduorum accusaretur, satis esse causae arbitrabatur, quare in eum aut ipse animadverteret, aut civitatem animadvertere iuberet. His omnibus rebus unum repugnabat, quod Divitiaci fratris summum in populum Romanum studium, summam in se voluntatem, egregiam fidem, iustitiam, temperantiam cognoverat: nam, ne eius supplicio Divitiaci animum offenderet, verebatur. Itaque prius, quam quicquam conaretur, Divitiacum ad se vocari iubet et, cotidianis interpretibus remotis, per C. 35 Valerium Procillum, principem Galliae provinciae, familiarem suum, cui summam omnium rerum fidem habebat, cum eo colloquitur; simul commonefacit, quae ipso praesente in concilio Gallorum de Dumnorige sint dicta, et ostendit, quae separatim quisque de eo apud se dixerit. Petit atque hortatur, ut sine eius offensione animi vel ipse de eo causa 5 cognita statuat vel civitatem statuere iubeat.

XX. Divitiacus multis cum lacrimis Caesarem complexus obsecrare coepit, ne quid gravius in fratrem statueret: Scire se, illa esse vera, nec quemquam ex eo plus quam se doloris capere, propterea quod, cum ipse gratia plurimum domi 10 atque in reliqua Gallia, ille minimum propter adulescentiam posset, per se crevisset; quibus opibus ac nervis non solum ad minuendam gratiam, sed paene ad perniciem suam utere-Sese tamen et amore fraterno et existimatione vulgi commoveri. Quod si quid ei a Caesare gravius accidisset, 15 cum ipse eum locum amicitiae apud eum teneret, neminem existimaturum, non sua voluntate factum; qua ex re futurum, uti totius Galliae animi a se averterentur. Haec cum pluribus verbis flens a Caesare peteret, Caesar eius dextram prendit; consolatus rogat, finem orandi faciat; tanti eius apud se 20 gratiam esse ostendit, uti et reipublicae iniuriam et suum dolorem eius voluntati ac precibus condonet. Dumnorigem ad se vocat, fratrem adhibet; quae in eo reprehendat, ostendit; quae ipse intellegat, quae civitas queratur, proponit; monet, ut in reliquum tempus omnes suspiciones vitet; prae- 25 terita se Divitiaco fratri condonare dicit. Dumnorigi custodes ponit, ut, quae agat, quibuscum loquatur, scire possit.

Caesar plans an attack on the Helvetii. He is misled by a false report.

XXI. Eodem die ab exploratoribus certior factus, hostes sub monte consedisse milia passuum ab ipsius castris octo, qualis esset natura montis et qualis in circuitu ascensus, qui 30 cognoscerent, misit. Renuntiatum est, facilem esse. De tertia vigilia Titum Labienum, legatum pro praetore, cum duabus legionibus et eis ducibus, qui iter cognoverant, summum iugum montis ascendere iubet; quid sui consilii sit, ostendit. Ipse de quarta vigilia eodem itinere, quo hostes 35 ierant, ad eos contendit equitatumque omnem ante se mittit. P. Considius, qui rei militaris peritissimus habebatur et in exercitu L. Sullae et postea in M. Crassi fuerat, eum exploratoribus praemittitur.

5 XXII. Prima luce, cum súmmus mons a Labieno teneretur, ipse ab hostium castris non longius mille et quingentis passibus abesset, neque, ut postea ex captivis comperit, aut ipsius adventus aut Labieni cognitus esset, Considius equo admisso ad eum accurrit, dicit, montem, quem a Labieno occupari 10 voluerit, ab hostibus teneri; id se a Gallicis armis atque insignibus cognovisse. Caesar suas copias in proximum collem subducit, aciem instruit. Labienus, ut erat ei praeceptum a Caesare, ne proelium committeret, nisi ipsius copiae prope hostium castra visae essent, ut undique uno tempore in hostes 15 impetus fieret, monte occupato nostros exspectabat proelioque abstinebat. Multo denique die per exploratores Caesar cognovit, et montem a suis teneri et Helvetios castra movisse et Considium timore perterritum, quod non vidisset, pro viso sibi renuntiasse. Eo die, quo consuerat intervallo, hostes 20 sequitur et milia passuum tria ab eorum castris castra ponit.

Caesar turns to go to Bibracte; the Helvetii follow.

XXIII. Postridie eius diei, quod omnino biduum supererat, cum exercitui frumentum metiri oporteret, et quod a Bibracte, oppido Aeduorum longe maximo et copiosissimo, non amplius milibus passuum xvIII aberat, rei frumentariae prospiziciendum existimavit: iter ab Helvetiis avertit ac Bibracte ire contendit. Ea res per fugitivos L. Aemilii, decurionis equitum Gallorum, hostibus nuntiatur. Helvetii, seu quod timore perterritos Romanos discedere a se existimarent, eo magis, quod pridie superioribus locis occupatis proelium non commissisent, sive eo, quod re frumentaria intercludi posse confiderent, commutato consilio atque itinere converso nostros a novissimo agmine insequi ac lacessere coeperunt.

His responsis ad Caesarem relatis, iterum ad eum Caesar legatos cum his mandatis mittit: Quoniam tanto suo populique Romani beneficio affectus, cum in consulatu suo rex atque amicus a senatu appellatus esset, hanc sibi populoque Romano gratiam referret, ut in colloquium venire in- 5 vitatus gravaretur neque de communi re dicendum sibi et cognoscendum putaret, haec esse, quae ab eo postularet: primum, ne quam multitudinem hominum amplius trans Rhenum in Galliam traduceret; deinde, obsides, quos haberet ab Aeduis, redderet, Sequanisque permitteret, ut, quos 10 illi haberent, voluntate eius reddere illis liceret: neve Aeduos iniuria lacesseret, neve his sociisque eorum bellum inferret. XXXVI. Ad haec Ariovistus respondit: Ius esse belli, ut, 20 qui vicissent, eis, quos vicissent, quemadmodum vellent, imperarent: item populum Romanum victis non ad alterius praescriptum, sed ad suum arbitrium imperare consuesse. ipse populo Romano non praescriberet, quemadmodum suo iure uteretur, non oportere sese a populo Romano in suo 25 iure impediri. Caesar hastens. He reaches Vesontio before Ariovistus.

XXXVII. Haec eodem tempore Caesari mandata referebantur, et legati ab Aeduis et a Treveris veniebant: Aedui questum, quod Harudes, qui nuper in Galliam transportati essent, fines eorum popularentur; sese ne obsidibus quidem 5 datis pacem Ariovisti redimere potuisse: Treveri autem, pagos centum Sueborum ad ripam Rheni consedisse, qui Rhenum transire conarentur; his praeesse Nasuam et Cimberium fratres. Quibus rebus Caesar vehementer commotus maturandum sibi existimavit, ne, si nova manus Sueborum 10 cum veteribus copiis Ariovisti sese coniunxisset, minus facile resisti posset. Itaque re frumentaria, quam celerrime potuit, comparata, magnis itineribus ad Ariovistum contendit.

XXXVIII. Cum tridui viam processisset, nuntiatum est ei, Ariovistum cum suis omnibus copiis ad occupandum Veson-15 tionem, quod est oppidum maximum Sequanorum, contendere triduique viam a suis finibus profecisse. Id ne accideret, magnopere sibi praecavendum Caesar existimabat. Namque omnium rerum, quae ad bellum usui erant, summa erat in eo oppido facultas, idque natura loci sic muniebatur, ut 20 magnam ad ducendum bellum daret facultatem, propterea quod flumen Dubis ut circino circumductum paene totum oppidum cingit; reliquum spatium, quod est non amplius pedum sexcentorum, qua flumen intermittit, mons continet magna altitudine. ita, ut radices montis ex utraque parte 25 ripae fluminis contingant. Hunc murus circumdatus arcem efficit et cum oppido coniungit. Huc Caesar magnis nocturnis diurnisque itineribus contendit occupatoque oppido ibi praesidium collocat.

Si per populum Romanum stipendium remittatur et dediticii subtrahantur, non 10 minus libenter sese recusaturum populi Romani amicitiam, quam appetierit. Quod multitudinem Germanorum in Galliam traducat, id se sui muniendi, non Galliae impugnandae causa facere: eius rei testimonium esse, quod nisi rogatus non venerit, et quod bellum non intulerit, sed defenderit. 15 Se prius in Galliam venisse quam populum Romanum. Numquam ante hoc tempus exercitum populi Romani Galliae provinciae finibus egressum. Quid sibi vellet? Cur in suas possessiones veniret? Provinciam suam hanc esse Galliam, sicut illam nostram. Ut ipsi concedi non oporteret, si in 20 nostros fines impetum faceret, sic item nos esse iniquos, quod in suo iure se interpellaremus. Quod fratres Aeduos appellatos diceret, non se tam barbarum neque tam imperitum esse rerum, ut non sciret, neque bello Allobrogum proximo Aeduos Romanis auxilium tulisse, neque ipsos in his con-25 tentionibus, quas Aedui secum et cum Sequanis habuissent, auxilio populi Romani usos esse. Quod si eum interfecerit, multis sese nobilibus principibusque populi Romani gratum esse facturum: id se ab ipsis per eorum nuntios compertum habere, quorum omnium gratiam atque amicitiam eius morte redimere posset. Quod si discessisset et liberam possessionem 35 Galliae sibi tradidisset, magno se illum praemio remuneraturum et, quaecumque bella geri vellet, sine ullo eius labore et periculo confecturum.

Caesar remains firm; and escapes from the snares set by Ariovistus.

XLV. Multa ab Caesare in eam sententiam dicta sunt, quare negotio desistere non posset; neque suam neque populi Romani consuetudinem pati, uti optime merentes socios desereret, neque se iudicare, Galliam potius esse Ariovisti quam populi Romani. Bello superatos esse Arvernos et Rutenos ab Quinto Fabio Maximo, quibus populus Romanus ignovisset neque in provinciam redegisset neque stipendium imposuisset. Quod si antiquissimum quodque tempus spectari oporteret, populi Romani iustissimum esse in Gallia 10 imperium; si iudicium senatus observari oporteret, liberam debere esse Galliam, quam bello victam suis legibus uti voluisset.

XLVI. Dum haec in colloquio geruntur, Caesari nuntiatum est, equites Ariovisti propius tumulum accedere et ad 15 nostros adequitare, lapides telaque in nostros conicere. Caesar loquendi finem facit seque ad suos recepit suisque imperavit, ne quod omnino telum in hostes reicerent. Nam etsi sine ullo periculo legionis delectae cum equitatu proelium fore videbat, tamen committendum non putabat, ut 20 pulsis hostibus dici posset, eos ab se per fidem in colloquio circumventos. Posteaquam in vulgus militum elatum est, qua arrogantia in colloquio Ariovistus usus omni Gallia Romanis interdixisset, impetumque in nostros eius equites fecissent, eaque res colloquium ut diremisset, multo maior 25 alacritas studiumque pugnandi maius exercitui iniectum est.

cum periculo ad eum missurum et hominibus feris obiecturum existimabat. Commodissimum visum est Gaium Valerium Procillum, C. Valeri Caburi filium, summa virtute et humanitate adulescentem, cuius pater a Gaio Valerio Flacco civitate donatus erat, et propter fidem et propter linguae Gallicae 5 scientiam, qua multa iam Ariovistus longinqua consuetudine utebatur, et quod in eo peccandi Germanis causa non esset, ad eum mittere, et Marcum Metium, qui hospitio Ariovisti utebatur. His mandavit, ut, quae diceret Ariovistus, cognoscerent et ad se referrent. Quos cum apud se in castris 10 Ariovistus conspexisset, exercitu suo praesente conclamavit: Quid ad se venirent? an speculandi causa? Conantis dicere prohibuit et in catenas coniecit.

XLVIII. Eodem die castra promovit et milibus passuum sex a Caesaris castris sub monte consedit. Postridie eius re diei praeter castra Caesaris suas copias traduxit et milibus passuum duobus ultra eum castra fecit eo consilio, uti frumento commeatuque, qui ex Sequanis et Aeduis supportaretur, Caesarem intercluderet. Ex eo die dies continuos quinque Caesar pro castris suas copias produxit et aciem in- 20 structam habuit, ut, si vellet Ariovistus proelio contendere, ei potestas non deesset. Ariovistus his omnibus diebus exercitum castris continuit, equestri proelio cotidie contendit. Genus hoc erat pugnae, quo se Germani exercuerant. Equitum milia erant sex, totidem numero pedites velocissimi ac 25 fortissimi, quos ex omni copia singuli singulos suae salutis causa delegerant: cum his in proeliis versabantur. Ad eos se equites recipiebant: hi, si quid erat durius, concurrebant, si qui graviore vulnere accepto equo deciderat, circumsistebants si quo erat longius prodeundum aut celerius recipi- 30 endum, tanta erat horum exercitatione celeritas, ut iubis equorum sublevati cursum adaequarent.

Caesar fortifies another camp beyond Ariovistus.

XLIX. Ubi eum castris se tenere Caesar intellexit, ne diutius commeatu prohiberetur, ultra eum locum, quo in loco Germani consederant, circiter passus sexcentos ab eis, castris 35 idoneum locum delegit acieque triplici instructa ad eum locum venit. Primam et secundam aciem in armis esse, tertiam castra munire iussit. Hic locus ab hoste circiter passus sexcentos, uti dictum est, aberat. Eo circiter hominum numero sedecim milia expedita cum omni equitatu 5 Ariovistus misit, quae copiae nostros perterrerent et munitione prohiberent. Nihilo secius Caesar, ut ante constituerat, duas acies hostem propulsare, tertiam opus perficere iussit. Munitis castris duas ibi legiones reliquit et partem auxiliorum, quattuor reliquas in castra maiora reduxit.

- copias suas eduxit paulumque a maioribus castris utrisque copias suas eduxit paulumque a maioribus castris progressus aciem instruxit, hostibus pugnandi potestatem fecit. Ubi ne tum quidem eos prodire intellexit, circiter meridiem exercitum in castra reduxit. Tum demum Ariovistus partem suarum copiarum, quae castra minora oppugnaret, misit. Acriter utrimque usque ad vesperum pugnatum est. Solis occasu suas copias Ariovistus multis et illatis et acceptis vulneribus in castra reduxit. Cum ex captivis quaereret Caesar, quamobrem Ariovistus proelio non decertaret, hanc reperiebat causam, quod apud Germanos ea consuetudo esset, ut matresfamiliae eorum sortibus et vaticinationibus declararent, utrum proelium committi ex usu esset necne; eas ita dicere: non esse fas Germanos superare, si ante novam lunam proelio contendissent.
- LI. Postridie eius diei Caesar praesidium utrisque castris, quod satis esse visum est, reliquit, omnis alarios in conspectu hostium pro castris minoribus constituit, quod minus multitudine militum legionariorum pro hostium numero valebat, ut ad speciem alariis uteretur; ipse triplici instructa acie 30 usque ad castra hostium accessit. Tum demum necessario Germani suas copias castris eduxerunt generatimque constituerunt paribus intervallis, Harūdes, Marcomānos, Tribōces, Vangiŏnes, Nemētes, Sedusios, Suebos, omnemque aciem suam redis et carris circumdederunt, ne qua spes in 35 fuga relinqueretur. Eo mulieres imposuerunt, quae in proe-lium proficiscentes passis manibus flentes implorabant, ne se in servitutem Romanis traderent.

There is a desperate battle; the Germans are routed.

LII. Caesar singulis legionibus singulos legatos et quaestorem praefecit, uti eos testes suae quisque virtutis haberet; ipse a dextro cornu, quod eam partem minime firmam hos- 5 tium esse animadverterat, proelium commisit. Ita nostri acriter in hostes signo dato impetum fecerunt, itaque hostes repente celeriterque procurrerunt, ut spatium pila in hostes coniciendi non daretur. Reiectis pilis comminus gladiis pugnatum est. At Germani celeriter ex consuetudine sua 10 phalange facta impetus gladiorum exceperunt. Reperti sunt complures nostri milites, qui in phalangas insilirent et scuta manibus revellerent et desuper vulnerarent. Cum hostium acies a sinistro cornu pulsa atque in fugam conversa esset, a dextro cornu vehementer multitudine suorum nostram aciem 15 premebant. Id cum animadvertisset Publius Crassus adulescens, qui equitatui praeerat, quod expeditior erat quam ei, qui inter aciem versabantur, tertiam aciem laborantibus nostris subsidio misit.

LIII. Ita proelium restitutum est, atque omnes hostes 20 terga verterunt neque prius fugere destiterunt, quam ad flumen Rhenum milia passuum ex eo loco circiter quinque pervenerunt. Ibi perpauci aut viribus confisi tranare contenderunt aut lintribus inventis sibi salutem reppererunt. In his fuit Ariovistus, qui naviculam deligatam ad ripam nactus 25 ea profugit; reliquos omnes equitatu consecuti nostri interfecerunt. Duae fuerunt Ariovisti uxores, una Sueba natione, quam domo secum duxerat, altera Norica, regis Voccionis soror, quam in Gallia duxerat a fratre missam : utraeque in ea fuga perierunt. Duae filiae harum altera occisa, altera capta 30 Gaius Valerius Procillus, cum a custodibus in fuga trinis catenis vinctus traheretur, in ipsum Caesarem hostis equitatu persequentem incidit. Quae quidem res Caesari non minorem quam ipsa victoria voluptatem attulit, quod hominem honestissimum provinciae Galliae, suum familiarem et hospitem, 35 ereptum e manibus hostium, sibi restitutum videbat, neque eius calamitate de tanta voluptate et gratulatione quicquam fortuna deminuerat. Is se praesente de se ter sortibus consultum dicebat, utrum igni statim necaretur an in aliud tempus reservaretur: sortium beneficio se esse incolumem. Item 5 Marcus Metius repertus et ad eum reductus est.

Caesar, una aestate duobus maximis bellis confectis, maturius paulo, quam tempus anni postulabat, in hiberna in Sequanos exercitum deduxit; hibernis Labienum praeposuit; ipse in citeriorem Galliam ad conventus agendos profectus est.

COMMENTARIUS SECUNDUS.

All the Belgae rise against Caesar.

I. Cum esset Caesar in citeriore Gallia in hibernis, ita uti supra demonstravimus, crebri ad eum rumores afferebantur, litterisque item Labieni certior fiebat, omnes Belgas, quam tertiam esse Galliae partem dixeramus, contra populum Romanum coniurare obsidesque inter se dare. Coniurandi has s esse causas: primum, quod vererentur, ne omni pacata Gallia ad eos exercitus noster adduceretur; deinde, quod ab nonnullis Gallis sollicitarentur, partim qui, ut Germanos diutius in Gallia versari noluerant, ita populi Romani exercitum hiemare atque inveterascere in Gallia moleste ferebant, 10 partim qui mobilitate et levitate animi novis imperiis studebant; ab nonnullis etiam, quod in Gallia a potentioribus atque eis, qui ad conducendos homines facultates habebant, vulgo regna occupabantur, qui minus facile eam rem imperio nostro consegui poterant. 15

He marches quickly to their territory; the Remi surrender.

II. His nuntiis litterisque commotus Caesar duas legiones in citeriore Gallia novas conscripsit et inita aestate, in interiorem Galliam qui deduceret, Quintum Pedium legatum misit. Ipse, cum primum pabuli copia esse inciperet, ad exercitum venit. Dat negotium Senonibus reliquisque Gallis, 20 qui finitimi Belgis erant, uti ea, quae apud eos gerantur, cognoscant seque de his rebus certiorem faciant. Hi constanter omnes nuntiaverunt, manus cogi, exercitum in unum locum conduci. Tum vero dubitandum non existimavit, quin ad eos proficisceretur. Re frumentaria comparata 25 castra movet diebusque circiter quindecim ad fines Belgarum pervenit.

III. Eo cum de improviso celeriusque omni opinione venisset, Remi, qui proximi Galliae ex Belgis sunt, ad eum legatos Iccium et Andecumborium, primos civitatis, miserunt, qui dicerent, se suaque omnia in fidem atque in potestatem populi Romani permittere, neque se cum Belgis reliquis consensisse neque contra populum Romanum coniurasse, paratosque esse et obsides dare et imperata facere et oppidis recipere et frumento ceterisque rebus iuvare; reliquos omnes Belgas in armis esse, Germanosque, qui cis Rhenum incolant, 10 sese cum his coniunxisse, tantumque esse eorum omnium furorem, ut ne Suessiones quidem, fratres consanguineosque suos, qui eodem iure et isdem legibus utantur, unum imperium unumque magistratum cum ipsis habeant, deterrere potuerint, quin cum his consentirent.

The origin and forces of the Belgae.

15 IV. Cum ab his quaereret, quae civitates quantaeque in armis essent et quid in bello possent, sic reperiebat: plerosque Belgas esse ortos ab Germanis Rhenumque antiquitus traductos propter loci fertilitatem ibi consedisse Gallosque, qui ea loca incolerent, expulisse solosque esse qui patrum 20 nostrorum memoria omni Gallia vexata Teutonos Cimbrosque intra fines suos ingredi prohibuerint; qua ex re fieri, uti earum rerum memoria magnam sibi auctoritatem magnosque spiritus in re militari sumerent. De numero eorum omnia se habere explorata Remi dicebant, propterea quod, 25 propinquitatibus affinitatibusque coniuncti, quantam quisque multitudinem in communi Belgarum concilio ad id bellum pollicitus sit, cognoverint. Plurimum inter eos Bellovacos et virtute et auctoritate et hominum numero valere; hos posse conficere armata milia centum, pollicitos ex eo numero 30 electa sexaginta, totiusque belli imperium sibi postulare. Suessiones suos esse finitimos; fines latissimos feracissimosque agros possidere. Apud eos fuisse regem nostra etiam memoria Divitiacum, totius Galliae potentissimum, qui cum magnae partis harum regionum, tum etiam Britanniae im-35 perium obtinuerit; nunc esse regem Galbam: ad hunc propter iustitiam prudentiamque suam summam totius belliomnium voluntate deferri; oppida habere numero XII, polliceri milia armata quinquaginta; totidem Nervios, qui maxime feri inter ipsos habeantur longissimeque absint; quindecim milia Atrebătes, Ambianos decem milia, Morinos XXV milia, Menapios VII milia, Caletos X milia, Veliocasses et Viromanduos totidem, Aduatŭcos decem et novem milia; Condrusos, Eburones, Caeroesos, Paemanos, qui uno nomine Germani appellantur, arbitrari ad XL milia.

Caesar marches to the Axona; the Belgae attack Bibrax.

- V. Caesar Remos cohortatus liberaliterque oratione prosecutus omnem senatum ad se convenire principumque liberos 10 obsides ad se adduci iussit. Ouae omnia ab his diligenter ad diem facta sunt. Ipse Divitiacum Aeduum magnopere cohortatus docet, quanto opere rei publicae communisque salutis intersit, manus hostium distineri, ne cum tanta multitudine uno tempore confligendum sit. Id fieri posse, si suas 15 copias Aedui in fines Bellovacorum introduxerint et eorum agros populari coeperint. His mandatis eum ab se dimittit. Postquam omnes Belgarum copias in unum locum coactas ad se venire vidit, neque iam longe abesse, ab eis, quos miserat, exploratoribus et ab Remis cognovit, flumen Axonam, 20 quod est in extremis Remorum finibus, exercitum traducere maturavit atque ibi castra posuit. Quae res et latus unum castrorum ripis fluminis muniebat et, post eum quae essent, tuta ab hostibus reddebat et, commeatus ab Remis reliquisque civitatibus ut sine periculo ad eum portari possent, efficiebat. 25 In eo flumine pons erat. Ibi praesidium ponit et in altera parte fluminis Quintum Titurium Sabinum legatum cum sex cohortibus relinquit; castra in altitudinem pedum duodecim vallo fossaque duodeviginti pedum munire iubet.
- VI. Ab his castris oppidum Remorum nomine Bibrax 30 aberat milia passuum octo. Id ex itinere magno impetu Belgae oppugnare coeperunt. Aegre eo die sustentatum est. Gallorum eadem atque Belgarum oppugnatio est haec. Ubi circumiecta multitudine hominum totis moenibus undique in murum lapides iaci coepti sunt, murusque defensoribus 35 nudatus est, testudine facta portas succendunt murumque subruunt. Quod tum facile fiebat. Nam cum tanta multitudo lapides ac tela conicerent, in muro consistendi potestas erat nulli. Cum finem oppugnandi nox fecisset, Iccius Remus, summa nobilitate et gratia inter suos, qui tum oppido praefuerat, unus ex eis, qui legati de pace ad Caesarem venerant, nuntium ad eum mittit, nisi subsidium sibi submittatur, sese diutius sustinere non posse.

Caesar relieves the town, and strongly fortifies a camp.

VII. Eo de media nocte Caesar isdem ducibus usus, qui nuntii ab Iccio venerant, Numidas et Cretas sagittarios et 10 funditores Baleares subsidio oppidanis mittit; quorum adventu et Remis cum spe defensionis studium propugnandi accessit, et hostibus eadem de causa spes potiundi oppidi discessit. Itaque paulisper apud oppidum morati agrosque Remorum depopulati, omnibus vicis aedificiisque, quos adire 15 potuerant, incensis ad castra Caesaris omnibus copiis contenderunt et ab milibus passuum minus duobus castra posuerunt; quae castra, ut fumo atque ignibus significabatur, amplius milibus passuum octo in latitudinem patebant.

VIII. Caesar primo et propter multitudinem hostium et 20 propter eximiam opinionem virtutis proelio supersedere statuit, cotidie tamen equestribus proeliis, quid hostis virtute posset et quid nostri auderent, periclitabatur. Ubi nostros non esse inferiores intellexit, loco pro castris ad aciem instruendam natura opportuno atque idoneo, quod is collis, ubi castra 25 posita erant, paululum ex planitie editus tantum adversus in latitudinem patebat, quantum loci acies instructa occupare poterat, atque ex utraque parte lateris deiectus habebat et in frontem leniter fastigatus paulatim ad planitiem redibat, ab utroque latere eius collis transversam fossam obduxit cir-30 citer passuum quadringentorum et ad extremas fossas castella constituit ibique tormenta collocavit, ne, cum aciem instruxisset, hostes, quod tantum multitudine poterant, ab lateribus pugnantes suos circumvenire possent. Hoc facto duabus legionibus, quas proxime conscripserat, in castris relictis, ut, 35 si quo opus esset, subsidio duci possent, reliquas sex legiones pro castris in acie constituit. Hostes item suas copias ex castris eductas instruxerant.

COMMENTARIUS TERTIUS.

Caesar stations Galba with a small force in the Alps.

I. Cum in Italiam proficisceretur Caesar, Servium Galbam cum legione duodecima et parte equitatus in Nantuatis, Veragros Sedunosque misit, qui ab finibus Allobrogum et lacu Lemanno et flumine Rhodano ad summas Alpes pertinent. Causa mittendi fuit, quod iter per Alpes, quo magno cum 5 periculo magnisque cum portoriis mercatores ire consuerant, Huic permisit, si opus esse arbitraretur, patefieri volebat. uti in his locis legionem hiemandi causa collocaret. Galba, secundis aliquot proeliis factis castellisque compluribus eorum expugnatis, missis ad eum undique legatis obsidibusque datis 10 et pace facta, constituit cohortes duas in Nantuatibus collocare et ipse cum reliquis eius legionis cohortibus in vico Veragrorum, qui appellatur Octodurus, hiemare; qui vicus positus in valle, non magna adiecta planitie, altissimis montibus undique continetur. Cum hunc in duas partes flumen 15 divideret, alteram partem eius vici Gallis ad hiemandum concessit, alteram vacuam ab his relictam cohortibus attribuit. Eum locum vallo fossaque munivit.

There is a sudden uprising of the mountain tribes.

II. Cum dies hibernorum complures transissent, frumentumque eo comportari iussisset, subito per exploratores certior 20 factus est, ex ea parte vici, quam Gallis concesserat, omnes noctu discessisse, montesque, qui impenderent, a maxima multitudine Sedunorum et Veragrorum teneri. Id aliquot de causis acciderat, ut subito Galli belli renovandi legionisque opprimendae consilium caperent: primum, quod legionem, 25 neque eam plenissimam detractis cohortibus duabus et compluribus singillatim, qui commeatus petendi causa missi erant, propter paucitatem despiciebant; tum etiam, quod propter iniquitatem loci, cum ipsi ex montibus in vallem decurrerent et tela conicerent, ne primum quidem posse impetum suum sustineri existimabant. Accedebat, quod suos ab se liberos abstractos obsidum nomine dolebant, et Romanos non solum 5 itinerum causa, sed etiam perpetuae possessionis culmina Alpium occupare conari et ea loca finitimae provinciae adiungere sibi persuasum habebant.

III. His nuntiis acceptis Galba, cum neque opus hibernorum munitionesque plene essent perfectae, neque de frumento reliquoque commeatu satis esset provisum, quod deditione facta obsidibusque acceptis nihil de bello timendum existimaverat, consilio celeriter convocato sententias exquirere coepit. Quo in consilio, cum tantum repentini periculi praeter opinionem accidisset ac iam omnia fere superiora loca multitudine armatorum completa conspicerentur, neque subsidio veniri neque commeatus supportari interclusis itineribus possent, prope iam desperata salute nonnullae huiusmodi sententiae dicebantur, ut impedimentis relictis eruptione facta isdem itineribus, quibus eo pervenissent, ad salutem conzo tenderent. Maiori tamen parti placuit, hoc reservato ad extremum consilio interim rei eventum experiri et castra defendere.

Ad haec, quae visum est, Caesar respondit; sed 10 exitus fuit orationis: Sibi nullam cum his amicitiam esse posse, si in Gallia remanerent; neque verum esse, qui suos fines tueri non potuerint, alienos occupare; neque ullos in Gallia vacare agros, qui dari tantae praesertim multitudini sine iniuria possint; sed licere, si velint, in Ubiorum fini-15 bus considere, quorum sint legati apud se et de Sueborum iniuriis querantur et a se auxilium petant: hoc se Ubiis imperaturum.

IX. Legati haec se ad suos relaturos dixerunt et re deliberata post diem tertium ad Caesarem reversuros: interea 20 ne propius se castra moveret, petierunt. Ne id quidem Caesar ab se impetrari posse dixit. Cognoverat enim, magnam partem equitatus ab iis aliquot diebus ante praedandi frumentandique causa ad Ambivarītos trans Mosam missam: hos exspectari equites atque eius rei causa moram 25 interponi arbitrabatur.

Description of the Rhine region. The Germans act treacherously.

X. Mosa profluit ex monte Vosego, qui est in finibus Lingonum, et parte quadam ex Rheno recepta, quae appellatur Vacalus, insulam efficit Batavorum neque longius ab Oceano milibus passuum Lxxx in Rhenum influit. Rhenus 30 autem oritur ex Lepontiis, qui Alpes incolunt, et longo spatio per fines Nantuatium, Helvetiorum, Sequanorum, Mediomatricum, Tribocorum, Treverorum citatus fertur et, ubi Oceano appropinquavit, in plures defluit partes multis ingentibusque insulis effectis, quarum pars magna a feris 35 barbarisque nationibus incolitur, ex quibus sunt, qui piscibus atque ovis avium vivere existimantur, multisque capitibus in Oceanum influit.

XI. Caesar cum ab hoste non amplius passuum xII milibus abesset, ut erat constitutum, ad eum legati revertuntur; qui 5 in itinere congressi magnopere, ne longius progrederetur, orabant. Cum id non impetrassent, petebant, uti ad eos equites, qui agmen antecessissent, praemitteret eosque pugna prohiberet, sibique ut potestatem faceret in Ubios legatos mittendi; quorum si principes ac senatus sibi iureiurando fidem fecisset, ea condicione, quae a Caesare ferretur, se usuros ostendebant: ad has res conficiendas sibi tridui spatium daret. Haec omnia Caesar eodem illo pertinere arbitrabatur, ut tridui mora interposita equites eorum, qui abessent, reverterentur; tamen sese non longius milibus passuum quattuor aquationis causa processurum eo die dixit: huc postero die quam frequentissimi convenirent, ut de eorum postulatis cognosceret. Interim ad praefectos, qui cum omni equitatu antecesserant, mittit, qui nuntiarent, ne hostes proelio lacesserent et, si ipsi lacesserentur, sustinerent, quoad pipse cum exercitu propius accessisset.

XII. At hostes, ubi primum nostros equites conspexerunt, quorum erat quinque milium numerus, cum ipsi non amplius octingentos equites haberent, quod ii, qui frumentandi causa ierant trans Mosam, nondum redierant, nihil timentibus nostris, 25 quod legati eorum paulo ante a Caesare discesserant atque is dies indutiis erat ab his petitus, impetu facto celeriter nostros perturbaverunt; rursus resistentibus, consuetudine sua ad pedes desiluerunt, subfossis equis compluribusque nostris deiectis reliquos in fugam coniecerunt atque ita perterritos 20 egerunt, ut non prius fuga desisterent, quam in conspectum agminis nostri venissent. XVII. Caesar his de causis, quas commemoravi, Rhenum transire decreverat; sed navibus transire neque satis tutum esse arbitrabatur, neque suae neque populi Romani dignitatis ; esse statuebat. Itaque, etsi summa difficultas faciendi pontis proponebatur propter latitudinem, rapiditatem altitudinemque fluminis, tamen id sibi contendendum aut aliter non traducendum exercitum existimabat. Rationem pontis hanc instituit. Tigna bina sesquipedalia paulum ab imo praeacuta 10 dimensa ad altitudinem fluminis intervallo pedum duorum inter se iungebat. Haec cum machinationibus immissa in flumen defixerat fistucisque adegerat, non sublicae modo directe ad perpendiculum, sed prone ac fastigate, ut secundum naturam fluminis procumberent, his item contraria duo 15 ad eundem modum iuncta intervallo pedum quadragenum ab inferiore parte contra vim atque impetum fluminis conversa statuebat. Haec utraque insuper bipedalibus trabibus immissis, quantum eorum tignorum iunctura distabat, binis utrimque fibulis ab extrema parte distinebantur; quibus dis-20 clusis atque in contrariam partem revinctis tanta erat operis firmitudo atque ea rerum natura, ut, quo maior vis aquae se incitavisset, hoc artius illigata tenerentur. XVIII. Diebus decem, quibus materia coepta erat comportari, omni opere effecto, exercitus traducitur. Caesar ad utramque partem pontis firmo praesidio relicto in fines Sugambrorum contendit. Interim a compluribus civitatibus ad eum legati veniunt; quibus pacem atque amicitiam peten-35 tibus liberaliter respondit obsidesque ad se adduci iubet. apud se habebant, finibus suis excesserant suaque omnia exportaverant seque in solitudinem ac silvas abdiderant.

XIX. Caesar paucos dies in eorum finibus moratus omnibus vicis aedificiisque incensis frumentisque succisis se in 5 fines Ubiorum recepit atque iis auxilium suum pollicitus, si ab Suebis premerentur, haec ab iis cognovit: Suebos, posteaquam per exploratores pontem fieri comperissent, more suo concilio habito nuntios in omnes partes dimisisse, uti de oppidis demigrarent, liberos, uxores suaque omnia in silvis 10 deponerent, atque omnes, qui arma ferre possent, unum in locum convenirent: hunc esse delectum medium fere regionum earum, quas Suebi obtinerent; hic Romanorum adventum exspectare atque ibi decertare constituisse. Quod ubi Caesar comperit, omnibus rebus iis confectis, quarum rerum 15 causa traducere exercitum constituerat, ut Germanis metum iniceret, ut Sugambros ulcisceretur, ut Ubios obsidione liberaret, diebus omnino decem et octo trans Rhenum consumptis, satis et ad laudem et ad utilitatem profectum arbitratus, se in Galliam recepit pontemque rescidit.

Caesar prepares to invade Britain; the Morini submit.

XX. Exigua parte aestatis reliqua Caesar, etsi in his locis, quod omnis Gallia ad septentriones vergit, maturae sunt hiemes, tamen in Britanniam proficisci contendit, quod omnibus fere Gallicis bellis hostibus nostris inde subministrata auxilia intellegebat et, si tempus anni ad bellum gerendum deficeret. 25 tamen magno sibi usui fore arbitrabatur, si modo insulam adisset, genus hominum perspexisset, loca, portus, aditus cognovisset; quae omnia fere Gallis erant incognita. Neque enim temere praeter mercatores illo adit quisquam, neque iis ipsis quicquam praeter oram maritimam atque eas 30 regiones, quae sunt contra Gallias, notum est. Itaque vocatis ad se undique mercatoribus, neque quanta esset insulae magnitudo, neque quae aut quantae nationes incolerent, neque quem usum belli haberent aut quibus institutis uterentur, neque qui essent ad maiorum navium multitudinem idonei 35 portus, reperire poterat.

Neque enim naves erant aliae, quibus reportari possent, et omnia deerant, quae ad reficiendas naves erant usui, et, quod omnibus constabat, hiemari in Gallia oportere, frumentum his in locis in hiemem provisum non 5 erat.

The Britons treacherously attack Caesar; their war-chariots.

XXX. Quibus rebus cognitis principes Britanniae, qui post proelium ad Caesarem convenerant, inter se collocuti, cum equites et naves et frumentum Romanis deesse intellegerent et paucitatem militum ex castrorum exiguitate cognoscerent, 10 quae hoc erant etiam angustiora, quod sine impedimentis Caesar legiones transportaverat, optimum factu esse duxerunt, rebellione facta frumento commeatuque nostros prohibere et rem in hiemem producere, quod his superatis aut reditu interclusis neminem postea belli inferendi causa in Britanniam 15 transiturum confidebant. Itaque rursus coniuratione facta paulatim ex castris discedere ac suos clam ex agris deducere coeperunt.

XXXI. At Caesar, etsi nondum eorum consilia cognoverat, tamen et ex eventu navium suarum et ex eo, quod obsides 20 dare intermiserant, fore id, quod accidit, suspicabatur. Itaque ad omnes casus subsidia comparabat. Nam et frumentum ex agris cotidie in castra conferebat et, quae gravissime afflictae erant naves, earum materia atque aere ad reliquas reficiendas utebatur et, quae ad eas res erant usui, ex conticienticomportari iubebat. Itaque cum summo studio a militibus administraretur, XII navibus amissis, reliquis ut navigari commode posset, effecit.

XXXII. Dum ea geruntur, legione ex consuetudine una frumentatum missa, quae appellabatur septima, neque ulla ad 30 id tempus belli suspicione interposita, cum pars hominum in agris remaneret, pars etiam in castra ventitaret, ii, qui pro portis castrorum in statione erant, Caesari nuntiaverunt, pulverem maiorem, quam consuetudo ferret, in ea parte videri, quam in partem legio iter fecisset. Caesar id, quod 35 erat, suspicatus, aliquid novi a barbaris initum consilii, cohortes, quae in stationibus erant, secum in eam partem proficisci, ex reliquis duas in stationem cohortes succedere, reliquas armari et confestim sese subsequi iussit. Cum paulo longius a castris processisset, suos ab hostibus premi atque 5 aegre sustinere et conferta legione ex omnibus partibus tela conici animadvertit. Nam quod omni ex reliquis partibus demesso frumento pars una erat reliqua, suspicati hostes, huc nostros esse venturos, noctu in silvis delituerant; tum dispersos depositis armis in metendo occupatos subito adorti, 70 paucis interfectis reliquos incertis ordinibus perturbaverant, simul equitatu atque essedis circumdederant.

XXXIII. Genus hoc est ex essedis pugnae. Primo per omnes partes perequitant et tela coniciunt atque ipso terrore equorum et strepitu rotarum ordines plerumque perturbant, 15 et cum se inter equitum turmas insinuaverunt, ex essedis desiliunt et pedibus proeliantur. Aurigae interim paulatim ex proelio excedunt atque ita currus collocant, ut, si illi a multitudine hostium premantur, expeditum ad suos receptum habeant. Ita mobilitatem equitum, stabilitatem peditum in 20 proeliis praestant, ac tantum usu cotidiano et exercitatione efficiunt, uti in declivi ac praecipiti loco incitatos equos sustinere et brevi moderari ac flectere et per temonem percurrere et in iugo insistere et se inde in currus citissime recipere consuerint.

They are routed and give hostages; Caesar returns to Gaul.

25 XXXIV. Quibus rebus perturbatis nostris novitate pugnae tempore opportunissimo Caesar auxilium tulit: namque eius adventu hostes constiterunt, nostri se ex timore receperunt. Quo facto ad lacessendum et ad committendum proelium alienum esse tempus arbitratus suo se loco continuit et brevi 30 tempore intermisso in castra legiones reduxit. Dum haec geruntur, nostris omnibus occupatis, qui erant in agris reliqui, discesserunt. Secutae sunt continuos complures dies tempestates, quae et nostros in castris continerent et hostem a pugna prohiberent. Interim barbari nuntios in omnes par-35 tes dimiserunt paucitatemque nostrorum militum suis praedicaverunt et, quanta praedae faciendae atque in perpetuum sui liberandi facultas daretur, si Romanos castris expulissent, demonstraverunt. His rebus celeriter magna multitudine peditatus equitatusque coacta ad castra venerunt.

XXXV. Caesar etsi idem, quod superioribus diebus acciderat, fore videbat, ut, si essent hostes pulsi, celeritate perisculum effugerent, tamen nactus equites circiter xxx, quos Commius Atrebas, de quo ante dictum est, secum transportaverat, legiones in acie pro castris constituit. Commisso proelio diutius nostrorum militum impetum hostes ferre non potuerunt ac terga verterunt. Quos tanto spatio secuti, quantum cursu et viribus efficere potuerunt, complures ex iis occiderunt, deinde omnibus longe lateque aedificiis incensis se in castra receperunt.

XXXVI. Eodem die legati ab hostibus missi ad Caesarem de pace venerunt. His Caesar numerum obsidum, quem 15 ante imperaverat, duplicavit eosque in continentem adduci iussit, quod propinqua die aequinoctii infirmis navibus hiemi navigationem subiciendam non existimabat. Ipse idoneam tempestatem nanctus paulo post mediam noctem naves solvit; quae omnes incolumes ad continentem pervene- 20 runt; sed ex iis onerariae duae eosdem, quos reliqui, portus capere non potuerunt et paulo infra delatae sunt.

The Morini rebel, and are terribly punished. A thanksgiving is decreed at Rome for Caesar's victories.

XXXVII. Quibus ex navibus cum essent expositi milites circiter trecenti atque in castra contenderent, Morini, quos Caesar in Britanniam proficiscens pacatos reliquerat, spe 25 praedae adducti primo non ita magno suorum numero circumsteterunt ac, si sese interfici nollent, arma ponere iusserunt. Cum illi orbe facto sese defenderent, celeriter ad clamorem hominum circiter milia sex convenerunt. Qua re nuntiata Caesar omnem ex castris equitatum suis auxilio 3º misit. Interim nostri milites impetum hostium sustinuerunt atque amplius horis quattuor fortissime pugnaverunt et paucis vulneribus acceptis complures ex his occiderunt. Postea vero quam equitatus noster in conspectum venit, hostes abiectis armis terga verterunt magnusque eorum numerus est occisus. 35

XXXVIII. Caesar postero die Titum Labienum legatum cum iis legionibus, quas ex Britannia reduxerat, in Morinos, qui rebellionem fecerant, misit. Qui cum propter siccitates paludum, quo se reciperent, non haberent, quo superiore anno perfugio fuerant usi, omnes fere in potestatem Labieni pervenerunt. At Q. Titurius et L. Cotta legati, qui in Menapiorum fines legiones duxerant, omnibus eorum agris vastatis, frumentis succisis, aedificiis incensis, quod Menapii se omnes in densissimas silvas abdiderant, se ad Caesarem receperunt. Caesar in Belgis omnium legionum hiberna constituit. Eo duae omnino civitates ex Britannia obsides miserunt, reliquae neglexerunt. His rebus gestis ex litteris Caesaris dierum viginti supplicatio a senatu decreta est.

COMMENTARIUS QUINTUS

Caesar orders ships built; quiets disturbances in Illyricum; settles a dispute between two chiefs of the Treveri.

I. L. Domitio, Ap. Claudio consulibus discedens ab hi bernis Caesar in Italiam, ut quotannis facere consuerat, legatis imperat, quos legionibus praefecerat, uti, quam plurimas possent, hieme naves aedificandas veteresque reficiendas curarent. Earum modum formamque demonstrat. Ad celeri- 5 tatem onerandi subductionesque paulo facit humiliores, quam quibus in nostro mari uti consuevimus, atque id eo magis, quod propter crebras commutationes aestuum minus magnos ibi fluctus fieri cognoverat; ad onera ac multitudinem iumentorum transportandam paulo latiores, quam quibus in reliquis 10 utimur maribus. Has omnes actuarias imperat fieri, quam ad rem humilitas multum adiuvat. Ea, quae sunt usui ad armandas naves, ex Hispania apportari iubet. Ipse conventibus Galliae citerioris peractis in Illyricum proficiscitur, quod a Pirustis finitimam partem provinciae incursionibus vastari 15 audiebat. Eo cum venisset, civitatibus milites imperat certumque in locum convenire iubet. Oua re nuntiata Pirustae legatos ad eum mittunt, qui doceant, nihil earum rerum publico factum consilio, seseque paratos esse demonstrant omnibus rationibus de iniuriis satisfacere. Percepta oratione 20 eorum Caesar obsides imperat eosque ad certam diem adduci iubet; nisi ita fecerint, sese bello civitatem persecuturum demonstrat. Iis ad diem adductis, ut imperaverat, arbitros inter civitates dat, qui litem aestiment poenamque constituant. 25

Accessum est ad Britanniam omnibus navibus meridiano fere tempore, neque in eo loco hostis est visus; sed, ut postea Caesar ex 10 captivis cognovit, cum magnae manus eo convenissent, multitudine navium perterritae, quae cum annotinis privatisque, quas sui quisque commodi fecerat, amplius octingentae uno erant visae tempore, a litore discesserant ac se in superiora loca abdiderant. 15

IX. Caesar exposito exercitu et loco castris idoneo capto, ubi ex captivis cognovit, quo in loco hostium copiae consedissent, cohortibus decem ad mare relictis et equitibus trecentis, qui praesidio navibus essent, de tertia vigilia ad hostes contendit, eo minus veritus navibus, quod in litore molli 20 atque aperto deligatas ad ancoram relinquebat, et praesidio navibus Ouintum Atrium praefecit. Ipse noctu progressus milia passuum circiter XII hostium copias conspicatus est. Illi equitatu atque essedis ad flumen progressi ex loco superiore nostros prohibere et proelium committere coeperunt. 25 Repulsi ab equitatu se in silvas abdiderunt, locum nancti egregie et natura et opere munitum, quem domestici belli, ut videbantur, causa iam ante praeparaverant; nam crebris arboribus succisis omnes introitus erant praeclusi. silvis rari propugnabant nostrosque intra munitiones ingredi 30 prohibebant. At milites legionis septimae testudine facta et aggere ad munitiones adiecto locum ceperunt eosque ex silvis expulerunt paucis vulneribus acceptis. Sed eos fugientes longius Caesar prosequi vetuit, et quod loci naturam ignorabat, et quod, magna parte diei consumpta, munitioni castrorum 35 tempus relinqui volebat.

His fleet is shattered by a storm; he repairs it.

X. Postridie eius diei mane tripertito milites equitesque in expeditionem misit, ut eos, qui fugerant, persequerentur. His aliquantum itineris progressis, cum iam extremi essent in prospectu, equites a Quinto Atrio ad Caesarem venerunt, 5 qui nuntiarent, superiore nocte maxima coorta tempestate prope omnes naves afflictas atque in litore eiectas esse, quod neque ancorae funesque subsisterent neque nautae gubernatoresque vim pati tempestatis possent: itaque ex eo concursu navium magnum esse incommodum acceptum.

XI. His rebus cognitis Caesar legiones equitatumque revocari atque in itinere resistere iubet, ipse ad naves revertitur; eadem fere, quae ex nuntiis litterisque cognoverat, coram perspicit, sic ut amissis circiter XL navibus reliquae tamen refici posse magno negotio viderentur. Itaque ex legionibus 15 fabros deligit et ex continenti alios arcessi iubet; Labieno scribit, ut, quam plurimas posset, iis legionibus, quae sunt apud eum, naves instituat. Ipse, etsi res erat multae operae ac laboris, tamen commodissimum esse statuit, omnes naves subduci et cum castris una munitione coniungi. In his rebus 20 circiter dies x consumit, ne nocturnis quidem temporibus ad laborem militum intermissis. Subductis navibus castrisque egregie munitis easdem copias, quas ante, praesidio navibus reliquit, ipse eodem, unde redierat, proficiscitur. Eo cum venisset, maiores iam undique in eum locum copiae Britan-25 norum convenerant summa imperii bellique administrandi communi consilio permissa Cassivellauno; cuius fines a maritimis civitatibus flumen dividit, quod appellatur Tamesis, a mari circiter milia passuum LXXX. Huic superiore tempore cum reliquis civitatibus continentia bella intercesserant; sed 30 nostro adventu permoti Britanni hunc toti bello imperioque praefecerant.

Britain and its inhabitants.

XII. Britanniae pars interior ab iis incolitur, quos natos in insula ipsi memoria proditum dicunt, maritima pars ab iis, qui praedae ac belli inferendi causa ex Belgio transierant (qui omnes fere iis nominibus civitatum appellantur, quibus orti ex civitatibus eo pervenerunt), et bello illato ibi permanserunt atque agros colere coeperunt. Hominum est infinita multitudo creberrimaque aedificia fere Gallicis consimilia, pecorum magnus numerus. Utuntur aut aere aut nummo auteo aut taleis ferreis ad certum pondus examinatis pro nummo. Nascitur ibi plumbum album in mediterraneis regionibus, in maritimis ferrum, sed eius exigua est copia; aere utuntur importato. Materia cuiusque generis ut in Gallia est praeter fagum atque abietem. Leporem et gallinam et anserem gustare fas non putant; haec tamen alunt animi voluptatisque causa. Loca sunt temperatiora quam in Gallia, remissioribus frigoribus.

XIII. Insula natura triquetra, cuius unum latus est contra Galliam. Huius lateris alter angulus, qui est ad Cantium, 15 quo fere omnes ex Gallia naves appelluntur, ad orientem solem, inferior ad meridiem spectat. Hoc pertinet circiter milia passuum quingenta. Alterum vergit ad Hispaniam atque occidentem solem; qua ex parte est Hibernia dimidio minor, ut existimatur, quam Britannia, sed pari spatio trans- 20 missus, atque ex Gallia est in Britanniam. In hoc medio cursu est insula, quae appellatur Mona; complures praeterea minores subiectae insulae existimantur; de quibus insulis nonnulli scripserunt, dies continuos triginta sub bruma esse noctem. Nos nihil de eo percontationibus reperiebamus, 25 nisi certis ex aqua mensuris breviores esse quam in continenti noctes videbamus. Huius est longitudo lateris, ut fert illorum opinio, septingentorum milium. Tertium est contra septentriones; cui parti nulla est obiecta terra, sed eius angulus lateris maxime ad Germaniam spectat. Hoc milia 30 passuum octingenta in longitudinem esse existimatur. omnis insula est in circuitu vicies centum milium passuum.

XIV. Ex his omnibus longe sunt humanissimi, qui Cantium incolunt, quae regio est maritima omnis, neque multum a Gallica differunt consuetudine. Interiores plerique frumenta 35 non serunt, sed lacte et carne vivunt pellibusque sunt vestiti. Omnes vero se Britanni vitro inficiunt, quod caeruleum efficit colorem, atque hoc horridiores sunt in pugna aspectu; capil-loque sunt promisso atque omni parte corporis rasa praeter caput et labrum superius. Uxores habent deni duodenique inter se communes, et maxime fratres cum fratribus parentesque cum liberis; sed si qui sunt ex his nati, eorum habentur 5 liberi, quo primum virgo quaeque deducta est.

Though the Britons resist bravely, Caesar marches inland.

XV. Equites hostium essedariique acriter proelio cum equitatu nostro in itinere conflixerunt, tamen ut nostri omnibus partibus superiores fuerint atque eos in silvas collesque compulerint; sed compluribus interfectis cupidius insecuti nonullos ex suis amiserunt. At illi intermisso spatio, imprudentibus nostris atque occupatis in munitione castrorum, subito se ex silvis eiecerunt impetuque in eos facto, qui erant in statione pro castris collocati, acriter pugnaverunt, duabusque missis subsidio cohortibus a Caesare, atque his primis 15 legionum duarum, cum hae perexiguo intermisso loci spatio inter se constitissent, novo genere pugnae perterritis nostris per medios audacissime perruperunt seque inde incolumes receperunt. Eo die Quintus Laberius Durus, tribunus militum, interficitur. Illi pluribus submissis cohortibus repelluntur.

XVI. Toto hoc in genere pugnae, cum sub oculis omnium ac pro castris dimicaretur, intellectum est, nostros propter gravitatem armorum, quod neque insequi cedentes possent neque ab signis discedere auderent, minus aptos esse ad huius generis hostem, equites autem magno cum periculo processor propere a quod illi etiam consulto plerumque cederent et, cum paulum ab legionibus nostros removissent, ex essedis desilirent et pedibus dispari proelio contenderent. Equestris autem proelii ratio et cedentibus et insequentibus par atque idem periculum inferebat. Accedeso bat huc, ut numquam conferti, sed rari magnisque intervallis proeliarentur stationesque dispositas haberent, atque alios alii deinceps exciperent, integrique et recentes defetigatis succederent.

XVII. Postero die procul a castris hostes in collibus con-35 stiterunt rarique se ostendere et lenius quam pridie nostros equites proelio lacessere coeperunt. Sed meridie, cum Caesar pabulandi causa tres legiones atque omnem equitatum cum Gaio Trebonio legato misisset, repente ex omnibus partibus ad pabulatores advolaverunt, sic uti ab signis legionibusque non absisterent. Nostri acriter in eos impetu facto reppulerunt neque finem sequendi fecerunt, quoad subsidio confisi 5 equites, cum post se legiones viderent, praecipites hostes egerunt, magnoque eorum numero interfecto neque sui colligendi neque consistendi aut ex essedis desiliendi facultatem dederunt. Ex hac fuga protinus, quae undique convenerant, auxilia discesserunt, neque post id tempus umquam summis 10 nobiscum copiis hostes contenderunt.

XVIII. Caesar cognito consilio eorum ad flumen Tamesim in fines Cassivellauni exercitum duxit; quod flumen uno omnino loco pedibus, atque hoc aegre, transiri potest. Eo cum venisset, animum advertit, ad alteram fluminis ripam 15 magnas esse copias hostium instructas. Ripa autem erat acutis sudibus praefixis munita, eiusdemque generis sub aqua defixae sudes flumine tegebantur. His rebus cognitis a captivis perfugisque Caesar praemisso equitatu confestim legiones subsequi iussit. Sed ea celeritate atque eo impetu 20 milites ierunt, cum capite solo ex aqua exstarent, ut hostes impetum legionum atque equitum sustinere non possent ripasque dimitterent ac se fugae mandarent.

XIX. Cassivellaunus, ut supra demonstravimus, omni deposita spe contentionis, dimissis amplioribus copiis, milibus 25 circiter quattuor essedariorum relictis, itinera nostra servabat paulumque ex via excedebat locisque impeditis ac silvestribus sese occultabat atque iis regionibus, quibus nos iter facturos cognoverat, pecora atque homines ex agris in silvas compellebat et, cum equitatus noster liberius praedandi vastandique 30 causa se in agros eiecerat, omnibus viis semitisque essedarios ex silvis emittebat et magno cum periculo nostrorum equitum cum iis confligebat atque hoc metu latius vagari prohibebat. Relinquebatur, ut neque longius ab agmine legionum discedi Caesar pateretur, et tantum in agris vastandis incendiisque 35 faciendis hostibus noceretur, quantum labore atque itinere legionarii milites efficere poterant.

Many tribes submit to Caesar; he returns to Gaul.

XX. Interim Trinobantes, prope firmissima earum regionum civitas, ex qua Mandubracius adulescens Caesaris fidem secutus ad eum in continentem Galliam venerat, cuius pater in ea civitate regnum obtinuerat interfectusque erat a Cassivellauno, ipse fuga mortem vitaverat, legatos ad Caesarem mittunt pollicenturque, sese ei dedituros atque imperata facturos; petunt, ut Mandubracium ab iniuria Cassivellauni defendat atque in civitatem mittat, qui praesit imperiumque obtineat. His Caesar imperat obsides quadraginta frumentumque exercitui Mandubraciumque ad eos mittit. Illi imperata celeriter fecerunt, obsides ad numerum frumentumque miserunt.

XXI. Trinobantibus defensis atque ab omni militum iniuria prohibitis, Cenimagni, Segontiăci, Ancalites, Bibrŏci, 15 Cassi legationibus missis sese Caesari dedunt. Ab his cognoscit, non longe ex eo loco oppidum Cassivellauni abesse silvis paludibusque munitum, quo satis magnus hominum pecorisque numerus convenerit. Oppidum autem Britanni vocant, cum silvas impeditas vallo atque fossa munierunt, quo incursionis hostium vitandae causa convenire consuerunt. Eo proficiscitur cum legionibus: locum reperit egregie natura atque opere munitum; tamen hunc duabus ex partibus oppugnare contendit. Hostes paulisper morati militum nostrorum impetum non tulerunt seseque alia ex parte oppidi 25 eiecerunt. Magnus ibi numerus pecoris repertus, multique in fuga sunt comprehensi atque interfecti.

XXII. Dum haec in his locis geruntur, Cassivellaunus ad Cantium, quod esse ad mare supra demonstravimus, quibus regionibus quattuor reges praeerant, Cingetorix, Carvilius, Taximagŭlus, Segŏvax, nuntios mittit atque his imperat, uti coactis omnibus copiis castra navalia de improviso adoriantur atque oppugnent. Ii cum ad castra venissent, nostri eruptione facta multis eorum interfectis, capto etiam nobili duce Lugotorige suos incolumes reduxerunt. Cassivellaunus 55 hoc proelio nuntiato tot detrimentis acceptis, vastatis finibus, maxime etiam permotus defectione civitatum, legatos per Atrebatem Commium de deditione ad Caesarem mittit. Caesar, cum constituisset hiemare in continenti propter repentinos Galliae motus, neque multum aestatis superesset, atque id facile extrahi posse intellegeret, obsides imperat et quid in annos singulos vectigalis populo Romano Britannia 5 penderet, constituit; interdicit atque imperat Cassivellauno, ne Mandubracio neu Trinobantibus noceat.

XXIII. Obsidibus acceptis exercitum reducit ad mare, naves invenit refectas. His deductis, quod et captivorum magnum numerum habebat et nonnullae tempestate deperi- 10 erant naves, duobus commeatibus exercitum reportare instituit. Ac sic accidit, uti ex tanto navium numero tot navigationibus neque hoc neque superiore anno ulla omnino navis, quae milites portaret, desideraretur, at ex iis, quae inanes ex continenti ad eum remitterentur, et prioris com- 15 meatus expositis militibus et quas postea Labienus faciendas curaverat numero Lx, perpaucae locum caperent, reliquae fere omnes reicerentur. Ouas cum aliquamdiu Caesar frustra exspectasset, ne anni tempore a navigatione excluderetur, quod aequinoctium suberat, necessario angustius milites col- 20 locavit ac, summa tranquillitate consecuta, secunda inita cum solvisset vigilia, prima luce terram attigit omnesque incolumes naves perduxit.

Grain being scarce, Caesar for the winter divides up his army.

His friend Tasgetius is slain.

XXIV. Subductis navibus concilioque Gallorum Samarobrivae peracto, quod eo anno frumentum in Gallia propter 25 siccitates angustius provenerat, coactus est aliter ac superioribus annis exercitum in hibernis collocare legionesque in plures civitates distribuere. Ex quibus unam in Morinos ducendam Gaio Fabio legato dedit, alteram in Nervios Quinto Ciceroni, tertiam in Esubios Lucio Roscio; quartam 30 in Remis cum Tito Labieno in confinio Treverorum hiemare iussit; tres in Belgis collocavit; his Marcum Crassum quaestorem et Lucium Munatium Plancum et Gaium Trebonium legatos praefecit. Unam legionem, quam proxime trans Padum conscripserat, et cohortes v in Eburones, quorum 35 pars maxima est inter Mosam ac Rhenum, qui sub imperio Ambiorigis et Catuvolci erant, misit. His militibus Quintum Titurium Sabinum et Lucium Aurunculeium Cottam legatos praeesse iussit. Ad hunc modum distributis legionibus facillime inopiae frumentariae sese mederi posse existimavit. Atque harum tamen omnium legionum hiberna praeter eam, quam Lucio Roscio in pacatissimam et quietissimam partem ducendam dederat, milibus passuum centum continebantur. Ipse interea, quoad legiones collocatas munitaque hiberna cognovisset, in Gallia morari constituit.

XXV. Erat in Carnutibus summo loco natus Tasgetius, cuius maiores in sua civitate regnum obtinuerant. Huic Caesar pro eius virtute atque in se benevolentia, quod in omnibus bellis singulari eius opera fuerat usus, maiorum lo15 cum restituerat. Tertium iam hunc annum regnantem, inimicis multis palam ex civitate et iis auctoribus, eum interfecerunt. Defertur ea res ad Caesarem. Ille veritus, quod ad plures pertinebat, ne civitas eorum impulsu deficeret, Lucium Plancum cum legione ex Belgio celeriter in Carnu20 tes proficisci iubet ibique hiemare, quorumque opera cognoverat Tasgetium interfectum, hos comprehensos ad se mittere. Interim ab omnibus legatis quaestoreque, quibus legiones tradiderat, certior factus est, in hiberna perventum locumque hibernis esse munitum.

The winter camp of Sabinus and Cotta is attacked. The officers parley with the foe, but disagree with each other.

25 XXVI. Diebus circiter xv, quibus in hiberna ventum est, initium repentini tumultus ac defectionis ortum est ab Ambiorige et Catuvolco; qui, cum ad fines regni sui Sabino Cottaeque praesto fuissent frumentumque in hiberna comportavissent, Indutiomari Treveri nuntiis impulsi suos concitaverunt subitoque oppressis lignatoribus magna manu ad castra oppugnatum venerunt. Cum celeriter nostri arma cepissent vallumque ascendissent atque una ex parte Hispanis equitibus emissis equestri proelio superiores fuissent, desperata re hostes suos ab oppugnatione reduxerunt. Tum 35 suo more conclamaverunt, uti aliqui ex nostris ad colloquium prodiret: habere sese, quae de re communi dicere vellent, quibus rebus controversias minui posse sperarent.

XXVII. Mittitur ad eos colloquendi causa Gaius Arpineius eques Romanus, familiaris Quinti Titurii, et Quintus Iunius ex Hispania quidam, qui iam ante missu Caesaris ad Ambi- 5 origem ventitare consuerat; apud quos Ambiorix ad hunc modum locutus est: Sese pro Caesaris in se beneficiis plurimum ei confiteri debere, quod eius opera stipendio liberatus esset, quod Aduatucis, finitimis suis, pendere consuesset, quodque ei et filius et fratris filius ab Caesare remissi essent, 10 quos Aduatuci obsidum numero missos apud se in servitute et catenis tenuissent; neque id, quod fecerit de oppugnatione castrorum, aut iudicio aut voluntate sua fecisse, sed coactu civitatis, suaque esse eiusmodi imperia, ut non minus haberet iuris in se multitudo, quam ipse in multitudinem. Civitati 15 porro hanc fuisse belli causam, quod repentinae Gallorum coniurationi resistere non potuerit. Id se facile ex humilitate sua probare posse, quod non adeo sit imperitus rerum, ut suis copiis populum Romanum superari posse confidat. Sed esse Galliae commune consilium: omnibus hibernis 20 Caesaris oppugnandis hunc esse dictum diem, ne qua legio alterae legioni subsidio venire posset. Non facile Gallos Gallis negare potuisse, praesertim cum de recuperanda communi libertate consilium initum videretur. quoniam pro pietate satisfecerit, habere nunc se rationem 25 officii pro beneficiis Caesaris: monere, orare Titurium pro hospitio, ut suae ac militum saluti consulat. Magnam manum Germanorum conductam Rhenum transisse; hanc affore biduo. Ipsorum esse consilium, velintne prius, quam finitimi sentiant, eductos ex hibernis milites aut ad Cicero- 30 nem aut ad Labienum deducere, quorum alter milia passuum circiter quinquaginta, alter paulo amplius ab iis absit. se polliceri et iureiurando confirmare, tutum iter per fines daturum. Quod cum faciat, et civitati sese consulere, quod hibernis levetur, et Caesari pro eius meritis gratiam referre. 35 Hac oratione habita discedit Ambiorix.

XXVIII. Arpineius et Iunius, quae audierunt, ad legatos deferunt. Illi repentina re perturbati, etsi ab hoste ea dicebantur, tamen non neglegenda existimabant, maximeque hac re permovebantur, quod civitatem ignobilem atque humilem Eburonum sua sponte populo Romano bellum facere ausam vix erat credendum. Itaque ad consilium rem deferunt, 5 magnaque inter eos exsistit controversia. Lucius Aurunculeius compluresque tribuni militum et primorum ordinum centuriones nihil temere agendum neque ex hibernis iniussu Caesaris discedendum existimabant; quantasvis copias etiam Germanorum sustineri posse munitis hibernis docebant: rem cesse testimonio, quod primum hostium impetum multis ultro vulneribus illatis fortissime sustinuerint; re frumentaria non premi; interea et ex proximis hibernis et a Caesare conventura subsidia; postremo quid esse levius aut turpius, quam auctore hoste de summis rebus capere consilium?

XXIX. Contra ea Titurius sero facturos clamitabat, cum 15 maiores manus hostium adiunctis Germanis convenissent, aut cum aliquid calamitatis in proximis hibernis esset acceptum. Brevem consulendi esse occasionem. Caesarem arbitrari profectum in Italiam; neque aliter Carnutes inter-20 ficiendi Tasgetii consilium fuisse capturos, neque Eburones, si ille adesset, tanta contemptione nostri ad castra venturos esse. Non hostem auctorem, sed rem spectare: subesse Rhenum; magno esse Germanis dolori Ariovisti mortem et superiores nostras victorias; ardere Galliam tot contumeliis 25 acceptis sub populi Romani imperium redactam, superiore gloria rei militaris exstincta. Postremo quis hoc sibi persuaderet, sine certa re Ambiorigem ad eiusmodi consilium de-Suam sententiam in utramque partem esse scendisse? tutam: si nihil esset durius, nullo cum periculo ad proxi-30 mam legionem perventuros; si Gallia omnis cum Germanis consentiret, unam esse in celeritate positam salutem. Cottae quidem atque eorum, qui dissentirent, consilium quem habere exitum? in quo si non praesens periculum, at certe longinqua obsidione fames esset timenda.

35 XXX. Hac in utramque partem disputatione habita, cum a Cotta primisque ordinibus acriter resisteretur, 'Vincite,' inquit, 'si ita vultis,' Sabinus, et id clariore voce, ut magna pars militum exaudiret; 'neque is sum,' inquit, 'qui gravissime ex vobis mortis periculo terrear: hi sapient; si gravius quid acciderit, abs te rationem reposcent; qui si per te liceat, perendino die cum proximis hibernis coniuncti communem cum reliquis belli casum sustineant, non reiecti et relegati longe ab ceteris aut ferro aut fame intereant.'

XXXI. Consurgitur ex consilio; comprehendunt utrumque et orant, ne sua dissensione et pertinacia rem in summum periculum deducant: facilem esse rem, seu maneant, seu proficiscantur, si modo unum omnes sentiant ac probent; contra in dissensione nullam se salutem perspicere. Res dis- 10 putatione ad mediam noctem perducitur. Tandem dat Cotta permotus manus: superat sententia Sabini. Pronuntiatur. prima luce ituros. Consumitur vigiliis reliqua pars noctis, cum sua quisque miles circumspiceret, quid secum portare posset, quid ex instrumento hibernorum relinquere cogeretur. 15 Omnia excogitantur, quare nec sine periculo maneatur et languore militum et vigiliis periculum augeatur. Prima luce sic ex castris proficiscuntur, ut quibus esset persuasum, non ab hoste, sed ab homine amicissimo Ambiorige consilium datum, longissimo agmine maximisque impedimentis. 20

The Roman force leaves the camp and is destroyed.

XXXII. At hostes, posteaquam ex nocturno fremitu vigilisque de profectione eorum senserunt, collocatis insidiis bipertito in silvis opportuno atque occulto loco a milibus passuum circiter duobus Romanorum adventum exspectabant, et cum se maior pars agminis in magnam convallem 25 demisisset, ex utraque parte eius vallis subito se ostenderunt novissimosque premere et primos prohibere ascensu atque iniquissimo nostris loco proelium committere coeperunt.

XXXIII. Tum demum Titurius, qui nihil ante providisset, trepidare et concursare cohortesque disponere, haec tamen 30 ipsa timide atque ut eum omnia deficere viderentur; quod plerumque ils accidere consuevit, qui in ipso negotio consilium capere coguntur. At Cotta, qui cogitasset, haec posse in itinere accidere, atque ob eam causam profectionis auctor non fuisset, nulla in re communi saluti deerat: et in appel-35 landis cohortandisque militibus imperatoris et in pugna militis officia praestabat. Cum propter longitudinem agminis minus facile omnia per se obire et, quid quoque loco faciendum esset, providere possent, iusserunt pronuntiare, ut impedimenta relinquerent atque in orbem consisterent. Quod consilium etsi in eiusmodi casu reprehendendum non est, tamen incommode accidit: nam et nostris militibus spem minuit et hostes ad pugnandum alacriores effecit, quod non sine summo timore et desperatione id factum videbatur. Praeterea accidit, quod fieri necesse erat, ut ro vulgo milites ab signis discederent, quaeque quisque eorum carissima haberet, ab impedimentis petere atque arripere properaret, clamore et fletu omnia complerentur.

XXXIV. At barbaris consilium non defuit. Nam duces eorum tota acie pronuntiare iusserunt, ne quis ab loco dis15 cederet: illorum esse praedam atque illis reservari, quaecumque Romani reliquissent: proinde omnia in victoria posita existimarent. Erant et virtute et numero pugnandi pares nostri; tametsi ab duce et a fortuna deserebantur, tamen omnem spem salutis in virtute ponebant, et quotiens quaeque 20 cohors procurrerat, ab ea parte magnus numerus hostium cadebat. Qua re animadversa Ambiorix pronuntiari iubet, ut procul tela coniciant neu propius accedant et, quam in partem Romani impetum fecerint, cedant (levitate armorum et cotidiana exercitatione nihil iis noceri posse), rursus se ad 25 signa recipientes insequantur.

XXXV. Quo praecepto ab iis diligentissime observato, cum quaepiam cohors ex orbe excesserat atque impetum fecerat, hostes velocissime refugiebant. Interim eam partem nudari necesse erat et ab latere aperto tela recipi. 30 Rursus, cum in eum locum, unde erant egressi, reverti coeperant, et ab iis, qui cesserant, et ab iis, qui proximi steterant, circumveniebantur; sin autem locum tenere vellent, nec virtuti locus relinquebatur, neque ab tanta multitudine coniecta tela conferti vitare poterant. Tamen tot 35 incommodis conflictati, multis vulneribus acceptis resistebant et magna parte diei consumpta, cum a prima luce ad horam octavam pugnaretur, nihil, quod ipsis esset indignum, committebant. Tum Tito Balventio, qui superiore anno primum pilum duxerat, viro forti et magnae auctoritatis, utrumque femur tragula traicitur: Quintus Lucanius, eiusdem ordinis, fortissime pugnans, dum circumvento filio subvenit, interficitur; Lucius Cotta legatus omnes cohortes ordinesque adhortans in adversum os funda vulneratur.

XXXVI. His rebus permotus Quintus Titurius, cum procul Ambiorigem suos cohortantem conspexisset, interpretem suum Gneum Pompeium ad eum mittit rogatum, ut sibi militibusque parcat. Ille appellatus respondit: Si velit secum colloqui, licere; sperare, a multitudine impetrari posse, quod 10 ad militum salutem pertineat; ipsi vero nihil nocitum iri, inque eam rem se suam fidem interponere. Ille cum Cotta saucio communicat, si videatur, pugna ut excedant et cum Ambiorige una colloquantur: sperare, ab eo de sua ac militum salute impetrari posse. Cotta se ad armatum hostem 15 iturum negat atque in eo perseverat.

XXXVII. Sabinus, quos in praesentia tribunos militum circum se habebat, et primorum ordinum centuriones se sequi iubet et, cum propius Ambiorigem accessisset, iussus arma abicere imperatum facit suisque, ut idem faciant, im- 20 perat. Interim, dum de condicionibus inter se agunt longiorque consulto ab Ambiorige instituitur sermo, paulatim circumventus interficitur. Tum vero suo more victoriam conclamant atque ululatum tollunt impetuque in nostros facto ordines perturbant. Ibi Lucius Cotta pugnans inter- 25 ficitur cum maxima parte militum. Reliqui se in castra recipiunt, unde erant egressi. Ex quibus Lucius Petrosidius aquilifer, cum magna multitudine hostium premeretur, aquilam intra vallum proiecit, ipse pro castris fortissime pugnans occiditur. Illi aegre ad noctem oppugnationem 30 sustinent; noctu ad unum omnes desperata salute se ipsi interficiunt. Pauci ex proelio elapsi incertis itineribus per silvas ad Titum Labienum legatum in hiberna perveniunt atque eum de rebus gestis certiorem faciunt.

The winter camp of Cicero is attacked, and bravely defended.

XXXVIII. Hac victoria sublatus Ambiorix statim cum 35 equitatu in Aduatucos, qui erant eius regno finitimi, proficiscitur; neque noctem neque diem intermittit peditatumque sese subsequi iubet. Re demonstrata Aduatucisque concitatis, postero die in Nervios pervenit hortaturque, ne sui in perpetuum liberandi atque ulciscendi Romanos pro iis, 5 quas acceperint, iniuriis occasionem dimittant: interfectos esse legatos duos magnamque partem exercitus interisse demonstrat; nihil esse negotii, subito oppressam legionem, quae cum Cicerone hiemet, interfici; se ad eam rem profitetur adiutorem. Facile hac oratione Nerviis perro suadet.

XXXIX. Itaque confestim dimissis nuntiis ad Ceutrones, Grudios, Levăcos, Pleumoxios, Geidumnos, qui omnes sub eorum imperio sunt, quam maximas manus possunt, cogunt, et de improviso ad Ciceronis hiberna advolant, nondum ad 15 eum fama de Titurii morte perlata. Huic quoque accidit, quod fuit necesse, ut nonnulli milites, qui lignationis munitionisque causa in silvas discessissent, repentino equitum adventu interciperentur. His circumventis, magna manu Eburones, Nervii, Aduatuci atque horum omnium socii et clientes 20 legionem oppugnare incipiunt. Nostri celeriter ad arma concurrunt, vallum conscendunt. Aegre is dies sustentatur, quod omnem spem hostes in celeritate ponebant atque hanc adepti victoriam in perpetuum se fore victores confidebant.

XL. Mittuntur ad Caesarem confestim ab Cicerone lit25 terae, magnis propositis praemiis, si pertulissent; obsessis omnibus viis missi intercipiuntur. Noctu ex materia, quam munitionis causa comportaverant, turres admodum cxx excitantur incredibili celeritate; quae deesse operi videbantur, perficiuntur. Hostes postero die multo maioribus coactis 30 copiis castra oppugnant, fossam complent. Eadem ratione, qua pridie, ab nostris resistitur. Hoc idem reliquis deinceps fit diebus. Nulla pars nocturni temporis ad laborem intermittitur; non aegris, non vulneratis facultas quietis datur.
Quaecumque ad proximi diei oppugnationem opus sunt, 35 noctu comparantur; multae praeustae sudes, magnus muralium pilorum numerus instituitur; turres contabulantur, pinnae loricaeque ex cratibus attexuntur. Ipse Cicero, cum tenuissima valetudine esset, ne nocturnum quidem sibi tempus ad quietem relinquebat, ut ultro militum concursu ac vocibus sibi parcere cogeretur.

XLI. Tunc duces principesque Nerviorum, qui aliquem sermonis aditum causamque amicitiae cum Cicerone habebant, colloqui sese velle dicunt. Facta potestate, eadem, 5 quae Ambiorix cum Titurio egerat, commemorant: omnem esse in armis Galliam; Germanos Rhenum transisse; Caesaris reliquorumque hiberna oppugnari. Addunt etiam de Sabini morte; Ambiorigem ostentant fidei faciundae causa. Errare eos dicunt, si quicquam ab his praesidii sperent, qui ro suis rebus diffidant; sese tamen hoc esse in Ciceronem populumque Romanum animo, ut nihil nisi hiberna recusent atque hanc inveterascere consuetudinem nolint; licere illis incolumibus per se ex hibernis discedere et, quascumque in partes velint, sine metu proficisci. Cicero ad haec unum 15 modo respondit: non esse consuetudinem populi Romani, accipere ab hoste armato condicionem: si ab armis discedere velint, se adiutore utantur legatosque ad Caesarem mittant; sperare pro eius iustitia, quae petierint, impetraturos.

XLII. Ab hac spe repulsi Nervii vallo pedum IX et fossa 20

XLII. Ab hac spe repulsi Nervii vallo pedum ix et fossa 20 pedum xv hiberna cingunt. Haec et superiorum annorum consuetudine ab nobis cognoverant et, quosdam de exercitu habebant captivos, ab his docebantur; sed nulla ferramentorum copia, quae esset ad hunc usum idonea, gladiis cespites circumcidere, manibus sagulisque terram exhaurire nitebantur. Qua quidem ex re hominum multitudo cognosci potuit: nam minus horis tribus milium passuum xv in circuitu munitionem perfecerunt, reliquisque diebus turres ad altitudinem valli, falces testudinesque, quas eidem captivi docuerant, parare ac facere coeperunt.

XLIII. Septimo oppugnationis die maximo coorto vento ferventes fusili ex argilla glandes fundis et fervefacta iacula in casas, quae more Gallico stramentis erant tectae, iacere coeperunt. Hae celeriter ignem comprehenderunt et venti magnitudine in omnem locum castrorum distulerunt. Hos- 35 tes maximo clamore, sicuti parta iam atque explorata victoria, turres testudinesque agere et scalis vallum ascendere coeperunt. At tanta militum virtus atque ea praesentia animi fuit ut, cum undique flamma torrerentur maximaque telorum multitudine premerentur suaque omnia impedimenta atque omnes fortunas conflagrare intellegerent, non modo demigrandi causa de vallo decederet nemo, sed paene ne respiceret quigdem quisquam, ac tum omnes acerrime fortissimeque pugnarent. Hic dies nostris longe gravissimus fuit; sed tamen hunc habuit eventum, ut eo die maximus numerus hostium vulneraretur atque interficeretur, ut se sub ipso vallo constipaverant recessumque primis ultimi non dabant. Paulum quidem intermissa flamma et quodam loco turri adacta et contingente vallum, tertiae cohortis centuriones ex eo, quo stabant, loco recesserunt suosque omnes removerunt, nutu vocibusque hostes, si introire vellent, vocare coeperunt; quorum progredi ausus est nemo. Tum ex omni parte 15 lapidibus coniectis deturbati, turrisque succensa est.

XLIV. Erant in ea legione fortissimi viri, centuriones, qui primis ordinibus appropinquarent, Titus Pulio et Lucius Vorenus. Hi perpetuas inter se controversias habebant, quinam anteferretur, omnibusque annis de locis summis 20 simultatibus contendebant. Ex his Pulio, cum acerrime ad munitiones pugnaretur, 'Quid dubitas,' inquit, 'Vorene? aut quem locum tuae probandae virtutis exspectas? hic dies de nostris controversiis iudicabit.' Haec cum dixisset, procedit extra munitiones, quaeque pars hostium confertissima est 25 visa, irrumpit. Ne Vorenus quidem sese vallo continet, sed omnium veritus existimationem subsequitur. Mediocri spatio relicto Pulio pilum in hostes immittit atque unum ex multitudine procurrentem traicit; quo percusso et exanimato, hunc scutis protegunt, in hostem tela universi coniciunt 30 neque dant regrediendi facultatem. Transfigitur scutum Pulioni et verutum in balteo defigitur. Avertit hic casus vaginam et gladium educere conanti dextram moratur manum, impeditumque hostes circumsistunt. Succurrit inimicus illi Vorenus et laboranti subvenit. Ad hunc se confestim a 35 Pulione omnis multitudo convertit; illum veruto arbitrantur occisum. Gladio comminus rem gerit Vorenus atque uno interfecto reliquos paulum propellit; dum cupidius instat, in locum deiectus inferiorem concidit. Huic rursus circumvento fert subsidium Pulio, atque ambo incolumes compluribus interfectis summa cum laude sese intra munitiones recipiunt. Sic fortuna in contentione et certamine utrumque versavit, ut alter alteri inimicus auxilio salutique esset, neque diiudicari posset, uter utri virtute anteferendus videretur.

XLV. Quanto erat in dies gravior atque asperior oppugnatio, et maxime quod magna parte militum confecta vulneribus res ad paucitatem defensorum pervenerat, tanto crebriores litterae nuntiique ad Caesarem mittebantur; quorum pars deprehensa in conspectu nostrorum militum cum cruciatu 10 necabatur. Erat unus intus Nervius nomine Vertico, loco natus honesto, qui a prima obsidione ad Ciceronem perfugerat suamque ei fidem praestiterat. Hic servo spe libertatis magnisque persuadet praemiis, ut litteras ad Caesarem deferat. Has ille in iaculo illigatas effert et Gallus inter 15 Gallos sine ulla suspicione versatus ad Caesarem pervenit. Ab eo de periculis Ciceronis legionisque cognoscitur.

XLVI. Caesar acceptis litteris hora circiter undecima diei statim nuntium in Bellovacos ad M. Crassum quaestorem mittit, cuius hiberna aberant ab eo milia passuum xxv; iubet 20 media nocte legionem proficisci celeriterque ad se venire. Exit cum nuntio Crassus. Alterum ad Gaium Fabium legatum mittit, ut in Atrebatum fines legionem adducat, qua sibi scit iter faciendum. Scribit Labieno, si reipublicae commodo facere posset, cum legione ad fines Nerviorum veniat. Reli-25 quam partem exercitus, quod paulo aberat longius, non putat exspectandam; equites circiter quadringentos ex proximis hibernis colligit.

XLVII. Hora circiter tertia ab antecursoribus de Crassi adventu certior factus, eo die milia passuum xx procedit. 30 Crassum Samarobrivae praeficit legionemque attribuit, quod ibi impedimenta exercitus, obsides civitatum, litteras publicas frumentumque omne, quod eo tolerandae hiemis causa devexerat, relinquebat. Fabius, ut imperatum erat, non ita multum moratus, in itinere cum legione occurrit. Labienus, 35 interitu Sabini et caede cohortium cognita, cum omnes ad eum Treverorum copiae venissent, veritus, si ex hibernis fugae similem profectionem fecisset, ut hostium impetum sustinere posset, praesertim quos recenti victoria efferri sciret, litteras Caesari remittit, quanto cum periculo legionem ex hibernis educturus esset, rem gestam in Eburonibus perscribit, docet, omnes peditatus equitatusque copias Treverorum tria 5 milia passuum longe ab suis castris consedisse.

XLVIII. Caesar consilio eius probato, etsi opinione trium legionum deiectus ad duas redierat, tamen unum communis salutis auxilium in celeritate ponebat. Venit magnis itineribus in Nerviorum fines. Ibi ex captivis cognoscit, quae apud 10 Ciceronem gerantur quantoque in periculo res sit. Tum cuidam ex equitibus Gallis magnis praemiis persuadet, uti ad Ciceronem epistolam deferat. Hanc Graecis conscriptam litteris mittit, ne intercepta epistola nostra ab hostibus consilia cognoscantur. Si adire non possit, monet, ut tragulam 15 cum epistola ad amentum deligata intra munitionem castrorum abiciat. In litteris scribit, se cum legionibus profectum celeriter affore; hortatur, ut pristinam virtutem retineat. Gallus periculum veritus, ut erat praeceptum, tragulam mittit. Haec casu ad turrim adhaesit neque ab nostris biduo ani-20 madversa tertio die a quodam milite conspicitur, dempta ad Ciceronem defertur. Ille perlectam in conventu militum recitat maximaque omnes laetitia afficit. Tum fumi incendiorum procul videbantur, quae res omnem dubitationem adventus legionum expulit.

25 XLIX. Galli re cognita per exploratores obsidionem relinquunt, ad Caesarem omnibus copiis contendunt. Haec erant armata circiter milia Lx. Cicero data facultate Gallum ab eodem Verticone, quem supra demonstravimus, repetit, qui litteras ad Caesarem deferat; hunc admonet, iter caute 30 diligenterque faciat; perscribit in litteris, hostes ab se discessisse omnemque ad eum multitudinem convertisse. Quibus litteris circiter media nocte Caesar allatis suos facit certiores eosque ad dimicandum animo confirmat. Postero die luce prima movet castra et circiter milia passuum quattuor 35 progressus trans vallem et rivum multitudinem hostium conspicatur. Erat magni periculi res, tantulis copiis iniquo loco dimicare; tum, quoniam obsidione liberatum Ciceronem sciebat, aequo animo remittendum de celeritate existimabat.

Consedit et, quam aequissimo loco potest, castra communit atque haec, etsi erant exigua per se, vix hominum milium septem, praesertim nullis cum impedimentis, tamen angustiis viarum, quam maxime potest, contrahit eo consilio, ut in summam contemptionem hostibus veniat. Interim speculatoribus in 5 omnes partes dimissis explorat, quo commodissime itinere valles transiri possit.

L. Eo die parvulis equestribus proeliis ad aquam factis utrique sese suo loco continent; Galli, quod ampliores copias, quae nondum convenerant, exspectabant; Caesar, si 10 forte timoris simulatione hostes in suum locum elicere posset, ut citra vallem pro castris proelio contenderet; si id efficere non posset, ut exploratis itineribus minore cum periculo vallem rivumque transiret. Prima luce hostium equitatus ad castra accedit proeliumque cum nostris equitibus committit. Caesar 15 consulto equites cedere seque in castra recipere iubet; simul ex omnibus partibus castra altiore vallo muniri portasque obstrui atque in his administrandis rebus quam maxime concursari et cum simulatione agi timoris iubet.

LI. Quibus omnibus rebus hostes invitati copias traducunt <sup>20</sup> aciemque iniquo loco constituunt, nostris vero etiam de vallo deductis, propius accedunt et tela intra munitionem ex omnibus partibus coniciunt praeconibusque circummissis pronuntiari iubent, seu quis Gallus seu Romanus velit ante horam tertiam ad se transire, sine periculo licere; post id tempus <sup>25</sup> non fore potestatem; ac sic nostros contempserunt, ut, obstructis in speciem portis, singulis ordinibus cespitum, quod ea non posse introrumpere videbantur, alii vallum manu scindere, alii fossas complere inciperent. Tum Caesar omnibus portis eruptione facta equitatuque emisso celeriter hostes in <sup>30</sup> fugam dat, sic uti omnino pugnandi causa resisteret nemo, magnumque ex eis numerum occidit atque omnes armis exuit.

LII. Longius prosequi veritus, quod silvae paludesque intercedebant neque etiam parvulo detrimento illorum locum 35 relinqui videbat, omnibus suis incolumibus copiis eodem die ad Ciceronem pervenit. Institutas turres, testudines munitionesque hostium admiratur; legione producta cognoscit, non decimum quemque esse reliquum militem sine vulnere: ex his omnibus iudicat rebus, quanto cum periculo et quanta cum virtute res sint administratae. Ciceronem pro eius merito legionemque collaudat; centuriones singillatim tri- bunosque militum appellat, quorum egregiam fuisse virtutem testimonio Ciceronis cognoverat. De casu Sabini et Cottae certius ex captivis cognoscit. Postero die contione habita rem gestam proponit, milites consolatur et confirmat: quod detrimentum culpa et temeritate legati sit acceptum, hoc ae- quiore animo ferundum docet, quod, beneficio deorum immortalium et virtute eorum expiato incommodo, neque hostibus diutina laetatio neque ipsis longior dolor relinquatur.

A proposed attack on Labienus is abandoned; but almost all Gaul is stirred up.

LIII. Interim ad Labienum per Remos incredibili celeritate de victoria Caesaris fama perfertur, ut, cum ab hibernis 15 Ciceronis milia passuum abesset circiter Lx, eoque post horam nonam diei Caesar pervenisset, ante mediam noctem ad portas castrorum clamor oreretur, quo clamore significatio victoriae gratulatioque ab Remis Labieno fieret. Hac fama ad Treveros perlata, Indutiomarus, qui postero die castra Labieni 20 oppugnare decreverat, noctu profugit copiasque omnes in Treveros reducit. Caesar Fabium cum sua legione remittit in hiberna, ipse cum tribus legionibus circum Samarobrivam trinis hibernis hiemare constituit et, quod tanti motus Galliae exstiterant, totam hiemem ipse ad exercitum manere decrevit. 25 Nam illo incommodo de Sabini morte perlato omnes fere Galliae civitates de bello consultabant, nuntios legationesque in omnes partes dimittebant et, quid reliqui consilii caperent atque unde initium belli fieret, explorabant nocturnaque in locis desertis concilia habebant. Neque ullum fere totius 30 hiemis tempus sine sollicitudine Caesaris intercessit, quin aliquem de consiliis ac motu Gallorum nuntium acciperet. In his ab Lucio Roscio, quem legioni tertiaedecimae praefecerat, certior factus est, magnas Gallorum copias earum civitatum, quae Aremoricae appellantur, oppugnandi sui causa 35 convenisse neque longius milia passuum octo ab hibernis suis afuisse, sed nuntio allato de victoria Caesaris discessisse, adeo ut fugae similis discessus videretur.

LIV. At Caesar principibus cuiusque civitatis ad se evocatis alias territando, cum se scire, quae fierent, denuntiaret, alias cohortando magnam partem Galliae in officio tenuit. 5 Tamen Senones, quae est civitas imprimis firma et magnae inter Gallos auctoritatis, Cavarinum, quem Caesar apud eos regem constituerat, cuius frater Moritasgus adventu in Galliam Caesaris, cuiusque maiores regnum obtinuerant, interficere publico consilio conati, cum ille praesensisset ac profugisset, 10 usque ad fines insecuti regno domoque expulerunt et, missis ad Caesarem satisfaciundi causa legatis, cum is omnem ad se senatum venire iussisset, dicto audientes non fuerunt. Tantum apud homines barbaros valuit, esse aliquos repertos principes inferendi belli, tantamque omnibus voluntatum com- 15 mutationem attulit, ut praeter Aeduos et Remos, quos praecipuo semper honore Caesar habuit, alteros pro vetere ac perpetua erga populum Romanum fide, alteros pro recentibus Gallici belli officiis, nulla fere civitas fuerit non suspecta nobis. Idque adeo haud scio mirandumne sit, cum com- 20 pluribus aliis de causis, tum maxime, quod ei, qui virtute belli omnibus gentibus praeferebantur, tantum se eius opinionis deperdidisse, ut a populo Romano imperia perferrent, gravissime dolebant.

LV. Treveri vero atque Indutiomarus totius hiemis nullum 25 tempus intermiserunt, quin trans Rhenum legatos mitterent, civitates sollicitarent, pecunias pollicerentur, magna parte exercitus nostri interfecta multo minorem superesse dicerent partem. Neque tamen ulli civitati Germanorum persuaderi potuit, ut Rhenum transiret, cum se bis expertos dicerent, 30 Ariovisti bello et Tencterorum transitu: non esse amplius fortunam temptaturos. Hac spe lapsus Indutiomarus nihilo minus copias cogere, exercere, a finitimis equos parare, exules damnatosque tota Gallia magnis praemiis ad se allicere coepit. Ac tantam sibi iam his rebus in Gallia auctori-35 tatem comparaverat, ut undique ad eum legationes concurrerent, gratiam atque amicitiam publice privatimque peterent.

The Gauls attack the camp of Labienus, and are repulsed.

LVI. Ubi intellexit, ultro ad se veniri, altera ex parte Senones Carnutesque conscientia facinoris instigari, altera Nervios Aduatucosque bellum Romanis parare, neque sibi voluntariorum copias defore, si ex finibus suis progredi coepisset, 5 armatum concilium indicit. Hoc more Gallorum est initium belli: quo lege communi omnes puberes armati convenire consuerunt; qui ex iis novissimus convenit, in conspectu multitudinis omnibus cruciatibus affectus necatur. In eo concilio Cingetorigem, alterius principem factionis generum 10 suum, quem supra demonstravimus Caesaris secutum fidem ab eo non discessisse, hostem iudicat bonaque eius publicat. His rebus confectis in concilio pronuntiat, arcessitum se a Senonibus et Carnutibus aliisque compluribus Galliae civitatibus: huc iturum per fines Remorum eorumque agros 15 populaturum ac, priusquam id faciat, castra Labieni oppugnaturum. Quae fieri velit, praecipit.

LVII. Labienus, cum et loci natura et manu munitissimis castris sese teneret, de suo ac legionis periculo nihil timebat, ne quam occasionem rei bene gerendae dimitteret, cogitabat.

20 Itaque a Cingetorige atque eius propinquis oratione Indutiomari cognita, quam in concilio habuerat, nuntios mittit ad finitimas civitates equitesque undique evocat: his certum diem conveniendi dicit. Interim prope cotidie cum omni equitatu Indutiomarus sub castris eius vagabatur, alias ut situm 25 castrorum cognosceret, alias colloquendi aut territandi causa; equites plerumque omnes tela intra vallum coniciebant. Labienus suos intra munitionem continebat timorisque opinionem, quibuscumque poterat rebus, augebat.

LVIII. Cum maiore in dies contemptione Indutiomarus ad castra accederet, nocte una intromissis equitibus omnium finitimarum civitatum, quos arcessendos curaverat, tanta diligentia omnes suos custodiis intra castra continuit, ut nulla ratione ea res enuntiari aut ad Treveros perferri posset. Interim ex consuetudine cotidiana Indutiomarus ad castra accedit at-35 que ibi magnam partem diei consumit; equites tela coniciunt et magna cum contumelia verborum nostros ad pugnam evocant. Nullo ab nostris dato responso, ubi visum est, sub vespe-rum dispersi ac dissipati discedunt. Subito Labienus duabus portis omnem equitatum emittit: praecipit atque interdicit, proterritis hostibus atque in fugam coniectis (quod fore, sicut accidit, videbat) unum omnes peterent Indutiomarum, neu quis quem prius vulneret, quam illum interfectum viderit, quod 5 mora reliquorum spatium nactum illum effugere nolebat; magna proponit iis, qui occiderint, praemia; submittit cohortes equitibus subsidio. Comprobat hominis consilium fortuna, et cum unum omnes peterent, in ipso fluminis vado deprehensus Indutiomarus interficitur caputque eius refertur in 10 castra; redeuntes equites, quos possunt, consectantur atque occidunt. Hac re cognita omnes Eburonum et Nerviorum, quae convenerant, copiae discedunt, pauloque habuit post id factum Caesar quietiorem Galliàm.

COMMENTARIUS SEXTUS.

Caesar, increasing his forces, subdues several rebellious tribes.

I. Multis de causis Caesar maiorem Galliae motum exspectans per Marcum Silanum, Gaium Antistium Reginum. Titum Sextium legatos delectum habere instituit; simul ab Gneo Pompeio proconsule petit, quoniam ipse ad urbem cum imperio reipublicae causa remaneret, quos ex Cisalpina Gallia consulis sacramento rogavisset, ad signa convenire et ad se proficisci iuberet, magni interesse etiam in reliquum tempus ad opinionem Galliae existimans, tantas videri Italiae facultates, ut, si quid esset in bello detrimenti acceptum, non 10 modo id brevi tempore resarciri, sed etiam maioribus augeri copiis posset. Quod cum Pompeius et reipublicae et amicitiae tribuisset, celeriter confecto per suos delectu tribus ante exactam hiemem et constitutis et adductis legionibus duplicatoque earum cohortium numero, quas cum O. Titurio 15 amiserat, et celeritate et copiis docuit, quid populi Romani disciplina atque opes possent.

II. Interfecto Indutiomaro, ut docuimus, ad eius propinquos a Treveris imperium defertur. Illi finitimos Germanos sollicitare et pecuniam polliceri non desistunt. Cum ab 20 proximis impetrare non possent, ulteriores temptant. Inventis nonnullis civitatibus iureiurando inter se confirmant obsidibusque de pecunia cavent; Ambiorigem sibi societate et foedere adiungunt. Quibus rebus cognitis Caesar, cum undique bellum parari videret, Nervios, Aduatucos, Menapios 25 adiunctis Cisrhenanis omnibus Germanis esse in armis, Senones ad imperatum non venire et cum Carnutibus finitimisque civitatibus consilia communicare, a Treveris Germanos crebris legationibus sollicitari, maturius sibi de bello cogitandum putavit.

III. Itaque nondum hieme confecta proximis quattuor coactis legionibus de improviso in fines Nerviorum contendit et. priusquam illi aut convenire aut profugere possent, magno pecoris atque hominum numero capto atque ea praeda militibus concessa vastatisque agris in deditionem venire atque s obsides sibi dare coegit. Eo celeriter confecto negotio rursus in hiberna legiones reduxit. Concilio Galliae primo vere, ut instituerat, indicto, cum reliqui praeter Senones, Carnutes Treverosque venissent, initium belli ac defectionis hoc esse arbitratus, ut omnia postponere videretur, concilium Lutetiam 10 Parisiorum transfert. Confines erant hi Senonibus civitatemque patrum memoria coniunxerant, sed ab hoc consilio afuisse existimabantur. Hac re pro suggestu pronuntiata eodem die cum legionibus in Senones proficiscitur magnisque itineribus eo pervenit. 15

IV. Cognito eius adventu Acco, qui princeps eius consilii fuerat, iubet in oppida multitudinem convenire. Conantibus, priusquam id effici posset, adesse Romanos nuntiatur. Necessario sententia desistunt legatosque deprecandi causa ad Caesarem mittunt; adeunt per Aeduos, quorum antiquitus 20 erat in fide civitas. Libenter Caesar petentibus Aeduis dat veniam excusationemque accipit, quod aestivum tempus instantis belli, non quaestionis esse arbitratur. Obsidibus imperatis centum, hos Aeduis custodiendos tradit. Eodem Carnutes legatos obsidesque mittunt, usi deprecatoribus Rezonis, quorum erant in clientela: eadem ferunt responsa. Peragit concilium Caesar equitesque imperat civitatibus.

V. Hac parte Galliae pacata totus et mente et animo in bellum Treverorum et Ambiorigis insistit. Cavarinum cum equitatu Senonum secum proficisci iubet, ne quis aut ex huius 30 iracundia aut ex eo, quod meruerat, odio civitatis motus exsistat. His rebus constitutis, quod pro explorato habebat, Ambiorigem proelio non esse concertaturum, reliqua eius consilia animo circumspiciebat. Erant Menapii propinqui Eburonum finibus, perpetuis paludibus silvisque muniti, qui 35 uni ex Gallia de pace ad Caesarem legatos numquam miserant. Cum his esse hospitium Ambiorigi sciebat; item per Treveros venisse Germanis in amicitiam cognoverat. Haec prius illi detrahenda auxilia existimabat, quam ipsum bello lacesseret, ne desperata salute aut se in Menapios abderet aut cum Transrhenanis congredi cogeretur. Hoc inito consilio totius exercitus impedimenta ad Labienum in Treveros mittit 5 duasque legiones ad eum proficisci iubet; ipse cum legionibus expeditis quinque in Menapios proficiscitur. Illi nulla coacta manu loci praesidio freti in silvas paludesque confugiunt suaque eodem conferunt.

VI. Caesar partitis copiis cum Gaio Fabio legato et Marco Crasso quaestore celeriterque effectis pontibus adit tripertito, aedificia vicosque incendit, magno pecoris atque hominum numero potitur. Quibus rebus coacti Menapii legatos ad eum pacis petendae causa mittunt. Ille obsidibus acceptis hostium se habiturum numero confirmat, si aut Ambiorigem 15 aut eius legatos finibus suis recepissent. His confirmatis rebus Commium Atrebatem cum equitatu custodis loco in Menapiis relinquit, ipse in Treveros proficiscitur.

Labienus conquers the Treveri.

VII. Dum haec a Caesare geruntur, Treveri magnis coactis peditatus equitatusque copiis Labienum cum una legi-20 one, quae in eorum finibus hiemaverat, adoriri parabant, iamque ab eo non longius bidui via aberant, cum duas venisse legiones missu Caesaris cognoscunt. Positis castris a milibus passuum xv auxilia Germanorum exspectare constituunt. Labienus hostium cognito consilio, sperans, temeri-25 tate eorum fore aliquam dimicandi facultatem, praesidio quinque cohortium impedimentis relicto cum viginti quinque cohortibus magnoque equitatu contra hostem proficiscitur et mille passuum intermisso spatio castra communit. Erat inter Labienum atque hostem difficili transitu flumen ripisque prae-30 ruptis. Hoc neque ipse transire habebat in animo neque hostes transituros existimabat. Augebatur auxiliorum cotidie spes. Loquitur in consilio palam, quoniam Germani appropinquare dicantur, sese suas exercitusque fortunas in dubium non devocaturum et postero die prima luce castra moturum. 35 Celeriter haec ad hostes deferuntur, ut ex magno Gallorum equitum numero nonnullos Gallicis rebus favere natura cogebat. Labienus noctu tribunis militum primisque ordinibus convocatis, quid sui sit consilii, proponit et, quo facilius hostibus timoris det suspicionem, maiore strepitu et tumultu, quam populi Romani fert consuetudo, castra moveri iubet. His rebus fugae similem profectionem effecit. Haec quoque 5 per exploratores ante lucem in tanta propinquitate castrorum ad hostes deferuntur.

VIII. Vix agmen novissimum extra munitiones processerat, cum Galli, cohortati inter se, ne speratam praedam ex manibus dimitterent; longum esse, perterritis Romanis Germano- 10 rum auxilium exspectare, neque suam pati dignitatem, ut tantis copiis tam exiguam manum, praesertim fugientem atque impeditam, adoriri non audeant, flumen transire et iniquo loco committere proelium non dubitant. Quae fore suspicatus Labienus, ut omnes citra flumen eliceret, eadem 15 usus simulatione itineris placide progrediebatur. Tum praemissis paulum impedimentis atque in tumulo quodam collocatis, 'Habetis,' inquit, 'milites, quam petistis, facultatem: hostem impedito atque iniquo loco tenetis: praestate eandem nobis ducibus virtutem, quam saepenumero imperatori prae- 20 stitistis, atque illum adesse et haec coram cernere existimate.' Simul signa ad hostem converti aciemque dirigi iubet et paucis turmis praesidio ad impedimenta dimissis reliquos equites ad latera disponit. Celeriter nostri clamore sublato pila in hostes immittunt. Illi, ubi praeter spem, quos fugere cre- 25 debant, infestis signis ad se ire viderunt, impetum modo ferre non potuerunt ac primo concursu in fugam coniecti proximas silvas petierunt. Ouos Labienus equitatu consectatus magno numero interfecto, compluribus captis paucis post diebus civitatem recepit. Nam Germani, qui auxilio veniebant, per- 30 cepta Treverorum fuga sese domum receperunt. Cum his propinqui Indutiomari, qui defectionis auctores fuerant, comitati eos ex civitate excesserunt. Cingetorigi, quem ab initio permansisse in officio demonstravimus, principatus atque imperium est traditum. 35

Caesar makes a second expedition into Germany.

IX. Caesar, postquam ex Menapiis in Treveros venit, duabus de causis Rhenum transire constituit; quarum una erat, quod auxilia contra se Treveris miserant, altera, ne ad eos Ambiorix receptum haberet. His constitutis rebus paulum supra eum locum, quo ante exercitum traduxerat, facere pontem instituit. Nota atque instituta ratione magno militum studio paucis diebus opus efficitur. Firmo in Treveris ad pontem praesidio relicto, ne quis ab his subito motus oreretur, reliquas copias equitatumque traducit. Ubii, qui ante obsides dederant atque in deditionem venerant, purgandi sui causa ad eum legatos mittunt, qui doceant, neque auxilia ex sua civitate in Treveros missa neque ab se fidem laesam; petunt atque orant, ut sibi parcat, ne communi odio Germanorum innocentes pro nocentibus poenas pendant; si amplius obsidum velit, dare pollicentur. Cognita Caesar causa reperit, ab Suebis auxilia missa esse; Ubiorum satis-

X. Interim paucis post diebus fit ab Ubiis certior, Suebos omnes in unum locum copias cogere atque iis nationibus, quae sub eorum sint imperio, denuntiare, ut auxilia peditatus equitatusque mittant. His cognitis rebus rem frumentariam 20 providet, castris idoneum locum deligit; Ubiis imperat, ut pecora deducant suaque omnia ex agris in oppida conferant, sperans, barbaros atque imperitos homines inopia cibariorum adductos ad iniquam pugnandi condicionem posse deduci; mandat, ut crebros exploratores in Suebos mittant, quaeque 25 apud eos gerantur, cognoscant. Illi imperata faciunt et paucis diebus intermissis referunt: Suebos omnes, posteaquam certiores nuntii de exercitu Romanorum venerint, cum omnibus suis sociorumque copiis, quas coegissent, penitus ad extremos fines se recepisse: silvam esse ibi infinita magni-30 tudine, quae appellatur Bacenis; hanc longe introrsus pertinere et pro nativo muro obiectam Cheruscos ab Suebis Suebosque ab Cheruscis iniuriis incursionibusque prohibere: ad eius initium silvae Suebos adventum Romanorum exspectare constituisse.

The customs of the Gauls and Germans contrasted.

35 XI. Quoniam ad hunc locum perventum est, non alienum esse videtur, de Galliae Germaniaeque moribus et, quo differant hae nationes inter sese, proponere.

In Gallia non solum in omnibus civitatibus atque in omnibus pagis partibusque, sed paene etiam in singulis domibus factiones sunt, earumque factionum principes sunt, qui summam auctoritatem eorum iudicio habere existimantur, quorum ad arbitrium iudiciumque summa omnium rerum 5 consiliorumque redeat. Itaque eius rei causa antiquitus institutum videtur, ne quis ex plebe contra potentiorem auxilii egeret: suos enim quisque opprimi et circumveniri non patitur, neque, aliter si faciat, ullam inter suos habet auctoritatem. Haec eadem ratio est in summa totius Galliae: namque 10 omnes civitates in partes divisae sunt duas.

XII. Cum Caesar in Galliam venit, alterius factionis principes erant Aedui, alterius Sequani. Hi cum per se minus valerent, quod summa auctoritas antiquitus erat in Aeduis magnaeque eorum erant clientelae, Germanos atque Ario- 15 vistum sibi adiunxerant eosque ad se magnis iacturis pollicitationibusque perduxerant. Proeliis vero compluribus factis secundis atque omni nobilitate Aeduorum interfecta tantum potentia antecesserant, ut magnam partem clientium ab Aeduis ad se transducerent obsidesque ab iis principum 20 filios acciperent et publice iurare cogerent, nihil se contra Sequanos consilii inituros, et partem finitimi agri per vim occupatam possiderent Galliaeque totius principatum obtinerent. Qua necessitate adductus Divitiacus auxilii petendi causa Romam ad senatum profectus imperfecta re redierat. 25 Adventu Caesaris facta commutatione rerum, obsidibus Aeduis redditis, veteribus clientelis restitutis, novis per Caesarem comparatis, quod hi, qui se ad eorum amicitiam aggregaverant, meliore condicione atque aequiore imperio se uti videbant, reliquis rebus eorum gratia dignitateque amplificata, 30 Sequani principatum dimiserant. In eorum locum Remi successerant; quos quod adaequare apud Caesarem gratia intellegebatur, ii, qui propter veteres inimicitias nullo modo cum Aeduis coniungi poterant, se Remis in clientelam dicabant. Hos illi diligenter tuebantur: ita et novam et repente 35 collectam auctoritatem tenebant. Eo tum statu res erat, ut longe principes haberentur Aedui, secundum locum dignitatis Remi obtinerent.

XIII. In omni Gallia eorum hominum, qui aliquo sunt nu mero atque honore, genera sunt duo. Nam plebes paene servorum habetur loco, quae nihil audet per se, nullo adhibe tur consilio. Plerique, cum aut aere alieno aut magnitudine 5 tributorum aut iniuria potentiorum premuntur, sese in servitutem dicant nobilibus; in hos eadem omnia sunt iura. quae dominis in servos. Sed de his duobus generibus alterum est druidum, alterum equitum. Illi rebus divinis intersunt. sacrificia publica ac privata procurant, religiones interpretantur; 10 ad eos magnus adulescentium numerus disciplinae causa concurrit, magnoque hi sunt apud eos honore. Nam fere de omnibus controversiis publicis privatisque constituunt, et si quod est admissum facinus, si caedes facta, si de hereditate, si de finibus controversia est, idem decernunt, 15 praemia poenasque constituunt; si qui aut privatus aut populus eorum decreto non stetit, sacrificiis interdicunt. Haec poena apud eos est gravissima. Quibus ita est interdictum, hi numero impiorum ac sceleratorum habentur, his omnes decedunt, aditum sermonemque defugiunt, ne quid ex con-20 tagione incommodi accipiant, neque his petentibus ius redditur neque honos ullus communicatur. His autem omnibus druidibus praeest unus, qui summam inter eos habet auctoritatem. Hoc mortuo aut, si qui ex reliquis excellit dignitate, succedit, aut, si sunt plures pares, suffragio drui-25 dum, nonnumquam etiam armis de principatu contendunt. Hi certo anni tempore in finibus Carnutum, quae regio totius Galliae media habetur, considunt in loco consecrato. Huc omnes undique, qui controversias habent, conveniunt eorumque decretis iudiciisque parent. Disciplina in Britannia 30 reperta atque inde in Galliam translata esse existimatur, et nunc, qui diligentius eam rem cognoscere volunt, plerumque illo discendi causa proficiscuntur.

XIV. Druides a bello abesse consuerunt neque tributa una cum reliquis pendunt, militiae vacationem omniumque rerum 35 habent immunitatem. Tantis excitati praemiis et sua sponte multi in disciplinam conveniunt et a parentibus propinquisque mittuntur. Magnum ibi numerum versuum ediscere dicuntur. Itaque annos nonnulli vicenos in aisciplina permanent. Neque fas esse existimant ea litteris mandare, cum in reliquis fere rebus, publicis privatisque rationibus, Graecis litteris utantur. Id mihi duabus de causis instituisse videntur, quod neque in vulgum disciplinam efferri velint neque eos, qui discunt, litteris confisos minus memoriae studere; quod fere 5 plerisque accidit, ut praesidio litterarum diligentiam in perdiscendo ac memoriam remittant. Imprimis hoc volunt persuadere, non interire animas, sed ab aliis post mortem transire ad alios, atque hoc maxime ad virtutem excitari putant, metu mortis neglecto. Multa praeterea de sideribus atque re eorum motu, de mundi ac terrarum magnitudine, de rerum natura, de deorum immortalium vi ac potestate disputant et inventuti tradunt.

XV. Alterum genus est equitum. Hi, cum est usus atque aliquod bellum incidit (quod fere ante Caesaris adventum 15 quotannis accidere solebat, uti aut ipsi iniurias inferrent aut illatas propulsarent), omnes in bello versantur, atque eorum ut quisque est genere copiisque amplissimus, ita plurimos circum se ambactos clientesque habet. Hanc unam gratiam potentiamque noverunt.

XVI. Natio est omnium Gallorum admodum dedita religionibus, atque ob eam causam, qui sunt affecti gravioribus morbis quique in proeliis periculisque versantur, aut pro victimis homines immolant aut se immolaturos vovent administrisque ad ea sacrificia druidibus utuntur, quod, pro vita 25 hominis nisi hominis vita reddatur, non posse deorum immortalium numen placari arbitrantur, publiceque eiusdem generis habent instituta sacrificia. Alii immani magnitudine simulacra habent, quorum contexta viminibus membra vivis hominibus complent; quibus succensis circumventi flamma exanibmantur homines. Supplicia eorum, qui in furto aut in latrocinio aut aliqua noxa sint comprehensi, gratiora dis immortalibus esse arbitrantur; sed cum eius generis copia defecit, etiam ad innocentium supplicia descendunt.

XVII. Deum maxime Mercurium colunt. Huius sunt 35 plurima simulacra, hunc omnium inventorem artium ferunt, hunc viarum atque itinerum ducem, hunc ad guaestus pecuniae mercaturasque habere vim maximam arbitrantur. Post hunc Apollinem et Martem et Iovem et Minervam. De his eandem fere, quam reliquae gentes, habent opinionem : Apollinem morbos depellere, Minervam operum atque artificiorum initia tradere, Iovem imperium caelestium tenere, Martem 5 bella regere. Huic, cum proelio dimicare constituerunt, ea, quae bello ceperint, plerumque devovent; cum superaverunt, animalia capta immolant reliquasque res in unum locum conferunt. Multis in civitatibus harum rerum exstructos tumulos locis consecratis conspicari licet; neque saepe accidit, ut no neglecta quispiam religione aut capta apud se occultare aut posita tollere auderet, gravissimumque ei rei supplicium cum cruciatu constitutum est.

XVIII. Galli se omnes ab Dite patre prognatos praedicant idque ab druidibus proditum dicunt. Ob eam causam spatia omnis temporis non numero dierum, sed noctium finiunt; dies natales et mensium et annorum initia sic observant, ut noctem dies subsequatur. In reliquis vitae institutis hoc fere ab reliquis differunt, quod suos liberos, nisi cum adoleverunt, ut munus militiae sustinere possint palam ad se adire non patiuntur filiumque puerili aetate in publico in conspectu patris assistere turpe ducunt.

XIX. Viri, quantas pecunias ab uxoribus dotis nomine acceperunt, tantas ex suis bonis aestimatione facta cum dotibus communicant. Huius omnis pecuniae coniunctim ratio para utriusque servantur; uter eorum vita superavit, ad eum pars utriusque cum fructibus superiorum temporum pervenit. Viri in uxores, sicuti in liberos, vitae necisque habent potestatem; et cum paterfamiliae illustriore loco natus decessit, eius propinqui conveniunt et, de morte si res in suspicionem venit, de uxoribus in servilem modum quaestionem habent et, si compertum est, igni atque omnibus tormentis excruciatas interficiunt. Funera sunt pro cultu Gallorum magnifica et sumptuosa; omniaque, quae vivis cordi fuisse arbitrantur, in ignem inferunt, etiam animalia, ac paulo supra hanc memoriam servi et clientes, quos ab iis dilectos esse constabat, iustis funeribus confectis una cremabantur.

Caesar, returning to Gaul, routs the forces of Ambiorix, and begins an active campaign against the Eburones.

XXIX. Caesar, postquam per Ubios exploratores comperit, Suebos sese in silvas recepisse, inopiam frumenti veritus, 5 quod, ut supra demonstravimus, minime omnes Germani agriculturae student, constituit non progredi longius; sed, ne omnino metum reditus sui barbaris tolleret atque ut eorum auxilia tardaret, reducto exercitu partem ultimam pontis, quae ripas Ubiorum contingebat, in longitudinem pedum 10 ducentorum rescindit, atque in extremo ponte turrim tabulatorum quattuor constituit praesidiumque cohortium XII pontis tuendi causa ponit magnisque eum locum munitionibus firmat. Ei loco praesidioque Gaium Volcatium Tullum adulescentem praefecit. Ipse, cum maturescere frumenta 15 inciperent, ad bellum Ambiorigis profectus per Arduennam silvam, quae est totius Galliae maxima atque ab ripis Rheni finibusque Treverorum ad Nervios pertinet milibusque amplius quingentis in longitudinem patet, Lucium Minucium Basilum cum omni equitatu praemittit, si quid celeritate itineris atque 20 opportunitate temporis proficere posset; monet, ut ignes in castris fieri prohibeat, ne qua eius adventus procul significatio fiat ; sese confestim subsequi dicit.

XXX. Basilus, ut imperatum est, facit. Celeriter contraque omnium opinionem confecto itinere multos in agris in25 opinantes deprehendit: eorum indicio ad ipsum Ambiorigem contendit, quo in loco cum paucis equitibus esse dicebatur. Multum cum in omnibus rebus, tum in re militari potest fortuna. Nam sicut magno accidit casu, ut in ipsum incautum etiam atque imparatum incideret, priusque eius adventus 30 ab omnibus videretur, quam fama ac nuntius afferretur, sic magnae fuit fortunae, omni militari instrumento, quod circum se habebat, erepto, redis equisque comprehensis, ipsum effugere mortem. Sed hoc quoque factum est, quod aedificio circumdato silva, ut sunt fere domicilia Gallorum, qui vitandi 35 aestus causa plerumque silvarum atque fluminum petunt pro-pinquitates, comites familiaresque eius angusto in loco paulisper equitum nostrorum vim sustinuerunt. His pugnantibus illum in equum quidam ex suis intulit; fugientem silvae texerunt. Sic et ad subeundum periculum et ad vitandum multum fortuna valuit.

XXXI. Ambiorix copias suas iudicione non conduxerit, quod proelio dimicandum non existimarit, an tempore exclusus et repentino equitum adventu prohibitus, cum reliquum exercitum subsequi crederet, dubium est. Sed certe dimissis per agros nuntiis sibi quemque consulere iussit. Quorum 10 pars in Arduennam silvam, pars in continentes paludes profugit; qui proximi Oceano fuerunt, hi insulis sese occultaverunt, quas aestus efficere consuerunt; multi ex suis finibus egressi se suaque omnia alienissimis crediderunt. Catuvolcus, rex dimidiae partis Eburonum, qui una cum Ambiorige consilium inierat, aetate iam confectus, cum laborem belli aut fugae ferre non posset, omnibus precibus detestatus Ambiorigem, qui eius consilii auctor fuisset, taxo, cuius magna in Gallia Germaniaque copia est, se exanimavit.

XXXII. Segni Condrusique, ex gente et numero Germa- 20 norum, qui sunt inter Eburones Treverosque, legatos ad Caesarem miserunt oratum, ne se in hostium numero duceret neve omnium Germanorum, qui essent citra Rhenum, unam esse causam iudicaret: nihil se de bello cogitasse, nulla Ambiorigi auxilia misisse. Caesar explorata re quae- 25 stione captivorum, si qui ad eos Eburones ex fuga convenissent, ad se ut reducerentur, imperavit; si ita fecissent, fines eorum se violaturum negavit. Tum copiis in tres partes distributis impedimenta omnium legionum Aduatucam contulit. Id castelli nomen est. Hoc fere est in mediis Eburo- 30 num finibus, ubi Titurius atque Aurunculeius hiemandi causa consederant. Hunc cum reliquis rebus locum probarat, tum quod superioris anni munitiones integrae manebant, ut militum laborem sublevaret. Praesidio impedimentis legionem quartamdecimam reliquit, unam ex his tribus, quas 35 proxime conscriptas ex Italia traduxerat. Ei legioni castrisque Quintum Tullium Ciceronem praeficit ducentosque equites attribuit.

XXXIII. Partito exercitu Titum Labienum cum legionibus tribus ad Oceanum versus in eas partes, quae Menapios attingunt, proficisci iubet; Gaium Trebonium cum pari legionum numero ad eam regionem, quae ad Aduatucos adiacet, 5 depopulandam mittit; ipse cum reliquis tribus ad flumen Scaldem, quod influit in Mosam, extremasque Arduennae partis ire constituit, quo cum paucis equitibus profectum Ambiorigem audiebat. Discedens post diem septimum sese reversurum confirmat; quam ad diem ei legioni, quae in praesidio relinquebatur, deberi frumentum sciebat. Labienum Treboniumque hortatur, si reipublicae commodo facere possint, ad eum diem revertantur, ut rursus communicato consilio exploratisque hostium rationibus aliud initium belli capere possent.

XXXIV. Erat, ut supra demonstravimus, manus certa nulla, non oppidum, non praesidium, quod se armis defenderet, sed omnis in partis dispersa multitudo. Ubi cuique aut valles abdita aut locus silvestris aut palus impedita spem praesidii aut salutis aliquam offerebat, consederat. Haec loca vicini-20 tatibus erant nota, magnamque res diligentiam requirebat non in summa exercitus tuenda (nullum enim poterat universis ab perterritis ac dispersis periculum accidere), sed in singulis militibus conservandis; quae tamen ex parte res ad salutem exercitus pertinebat. Nam et praedae cupiditas multos longius 25 evocabat, et silvae incertis occultisque itineribus confertos adire prohibebant. Si negotium confici stirpemque hominum sceleratorum interfici vellet, dimittendae plures manus diducendique erant milites; si continere ad signa manipulos vellet, ut instituta ratio et consuetudo exercitus Romani 30 postulabat, locus ipse erat praesidio barbaris, neque ex occulto insidiandi et dispersos circumveniendi singulis deerat audacia. Ut in eiusmodi difficultatibus, quantum diligentia provideri poterat, providebatur, ut potius in nocendo aliquid praetermitteretur, etsi omnium animi ad ulciscendum ardebant, quam 35 cum aliquo militum detrimento noceretur. Dimittit ad finitimas civitates nuntios Caesar: omnes ad se evocat spe praedae ad diripiendos Eburones, ut potius in silvis Gallorum vita quam legionarius miles periclitetur, simul ut magna multitudine circumfusa pro tali facinore stirps ac nomen civitatis tollatur. Magnus undique numerus celeriter convenit.

Meanwhile the Sugambri attack Cicero's camp, unsuccessfully.

XXXV. Haec in omnibus Eburonum partibus gerebantur, diesque appetebat septimus, quem ad diem Caesar ad impedimenta legionemque reverti constituerat. Hic, quantum 5 in bello fortuna possit et quantos afferat casus, cognosci potuit. Dissipatis ac perterritis hostibus, ut demonstravimus, manus erat nulla, quae parvam modo causam timoris afferret. Trans Rhenum ad Germanos pervenit fama, diripi Eburones atque ultro omnes ad praedam evocari. Cogunt equitum 10 duo milia Sugambri, qui sunt proximi Rheno, a quibus receptos ex fuga Tencteros atque Usipetes supra docuimus. Transeunt Rhenum navibus ratibusque triginta milibus passuum infra eum locum, ubi pons erat perfectus praesidiumque ab Caesare relictum; primos Eburonum fines adeunt; multos 15 ex fuga dispersos excipiunt, magno pecoris numero, cuius sunt cupidissimi barbari, potiuntur. Invitati praeda longius procedunt. Non hos palus in bello latrociniisque natos, non silvae morantur. Ouibus in locis sit Caesar, ex captivis quaerunt: profectum longius reperiunt omnemque exercitum dis- 20 cessisse cognoscunt. Atque unus ex captivis, 'Quid vos,' inquit. 'hanc miseram ac tenuem sectamini praedam, quibus licet iam esse fortunatissimis? Tribus horis Aduatucam venire potestis: huc omnes suas fortunas exercitus Romanorum contulit; praesidii tantum est, ut ne murus quidem 25 cingi possit, neque quisquam egredi extra munitiones audeat.' Oblata spe Germani, quam nacti erant praedam, in occulto relinguunt; ipsi Aduatucam contendunt usi eodem duce. cuius haec indicio cognoverant.

XXXVI. Cicero, qui omnes superiores dies praeceptis 30 Caesaris cum summa diligentia milites in castris continuisset ac ne calonem quidem quemquam extra munitionem egredi passus esset, septimo die, diffidens de numero dierum Caesarem fidem servaturum, quod longius progressum audiebat neque ulla de reditu eius fama afferebatur, simul eorum 35 permotus vocibus, qui illius patientiam paene obsessionem appellabant, siquidem ex castris egredi non liceret, nullum eiusmodi casum exspectans, quo, novem oppositis legionibus maximoque equitatu dispersis ac paene deletis hostibus, in milibus passuum tribus offendi posset, quinque cohortes frustementatum in proximas segetes mittit, quas inter et castra unus omnino collis intererat. Complures erant ex legionibus aegri relicti; ex quibus qui hoc spatio dierum convaluerant, circiter ccc, sub vexillo una mittuntur; magna praeterea multitudo calonum, magna vis iumentorum, quae in castris so subsederant, facta potestate seguitur.

XXXVII. Hoc ipso tempore et casu Germani equites interveniunt protinusque eodem illo, quo venerant, cursu ab decumana porta in castra irrumpere conantur, nec prius sunt visi obiectis ab ea parte silvis, quam castris appropinguarent, 15 usque eo ut, qui sub vallo tenderent mercatores, recipiendi sui facultatem non haberent. Inopinantes nostri re nova perturbantur, ac vix primum impetum cohors in statione sustinet. Circumfunduntur ex reliquis hostes partibus, si quem aditum reperire possent. Aegre portas nostri tuentur; 20 reliquos aditus locus ipse per se munitioque defendit. trepidatur castris, atque alius ex alio causam tumultus quaerit; neque quo signa ferantur, neque quam in partem quisque conveniat, provident. Alius iam castra capta pronuntiat, alius deleto exercitu atque imperatore victores barbaros venisse 25 contendit; plerique novas sibi ex loco religiones fingunt Cottaeque et Titurii calamitatem, qui in eodem occiderint castello, ante oculos ponunt. Tali timore omnibus perterritis, confirmatur opinio barbaris, ut ex captivo audierant, nullum esse intus praesidium. Perrumpere nituntur seque ipsi ad-30 hortantur, ne tantam fortunam ex manibus dimittant.

XXXVIII. Erat aeger cum praesidio relictus Publius Sextius Baculus, qui primum pilum ad Caesarem duxerat, cuius mentionem superioribus proeliis fecimus, ac diem iam quintum cibo caruerat. Hic diffisus suae atque omnium saluti inermis ex tabernaculo prodit; videt, imminere hostes atque in summo esse rem discrimine: capit arma a proximis atque in porta consistit. Consequuntur hanc centuriones eius cohortis, quae in statione erat; paulisper una proelium sustinent. Relinquit animus Sextium gravibus acceptis vulneribus; aegre per manus tractus servatur. Hoc spatio interposito reliqui sese confirmant tantum, ut in munitionibus consistere audeant speciemque defensorum praebeant.

XXXIX. Interim confecta frumentatione milites nostri 5 clamorem exaudiunt; praecurrunt equites; quanto res sit in periculo, cognoscunt. Hic vero nulla munitio est, quae perterritos recipiat: modo conscripti atque usus militaris imperiti ad tribunum militum centurionesque ora convertunt; quid ab his praecipiatur, exspectant. Nemo est tam fortis, 10 quin rei novitate perturbetur. Barbari signa procul conspicati oppugnatione desistunt; redisse primo legiones credunt, quas longius discessisse ex captivis cognoverant; postea despecta paucitate ex omnibus partibus impetum faciunt.

XL. Calones in proximum tumulum procurrunt. celeriter deiecti se in signa manipulosque coniciunt; eo magis timidos perterrent milites. Alii, cuneo facto ut celeriter perrumpant, censent, quoniam tam propingua sint castra, et si pars aliqua circumventa ceciderit, at reliquos servari 20 posse confidunt; alii, ut in iugo consistant atque eundem omnes ferant casum. Hoc veteres non probant milites, quos sub vexillo una profectos docuimus. Itaque inter se cohortati duce Gaio Trebonio, equite Romano, qui eis erat praepositus, per medios hostes perrumpunt incolumesque ad 25 unum omnes in castra perveniunt. Hos subsecuti calones equitesque eodem impetu militum virtute servantur. At ii. qui in jugo constiterant, nullo etiam nunc usu rei militaris percepto, neque in eo, quod probaverant, consilio permanere, ut se loco superiore defenderent, neque eam, quam 30 prodesse aliis vim celeritatemque viderant, imitari potuerunt, sed se in castra recipere conati iniquum in locum demiserunt. Centuriones, quorum nonnulli ex inferioribus ordinibus reliquarum legionum virtutis causa in superiores erant ordines huius legionis traducti, ne ante partam rei militaris laudem 35 amitterent, fortissime pugnantes conciderunt. Militum pars. horum virtute summotis hostibus, praeter spem incolumis in castra pervenit, pars a barbaris circumventa periit.

XLI. Germani desperata expugnatione castrorum, quod nostros iam constitisse in munitionibus videbant, cum ea praeda, quam in silvis deposuerant, trans Rhenum sese receperunt. Ac tantus fuit etiam post discessum hostium 5 terror, ut ea nocte, cum Gaius Volusenus missus cum equitatu ad castra venisset, fidem non faceret, adesse cum incolumi Caesarem exercitu. Sic omnino animos timor praeoccupaverat, ut paene alienata mente deletis omnibus copiis equitatum se ex fuga recepisse dicerent neque incolumi ro exercitu Germanos castra oppugnaturos fuisse contenderent. Quem timorem Caesaris adventus sustulit.

XLII. Reversus ille, eventus belli non ignorans, unum, quod cohortes ex statione et praesidio essent emissae, questus (ne minimo quidem casu locum relinqui debuisse) multum <sup>15</sup> fortunam in repentino hostium adventu potuisse iudicavit, multo etiam amplius, quod paene ab ipso vallo portisque castrorum barbaros avertisset. Quarum omnium rerum maxime admirandum videbatur, quod Germani, qui eo consilio Rhenum transierant, ut Ambiorigis fines depopularentur, <sup>20</sup> ad castra Romanorum delati optatissimum Ambiorigi beneficium obtulerunt.

Caesar chastises the Eburones, calls a council of Gaul, places his army in winter quarters, and goes to Italy.

XLIII. Caesar rursus ad vexandos hostes profectus magno coacto numero ex finitimis civitatibus in omnes partes dimittit. Omnes vici atque omnia aedificia, quae quisque conspexerat, 25 incendebantur; praeda ex omnibus locis agebatur; frumenta non solum tanta multitudine iumentorum atque hominum consumebantur, sed etiam anni tempore atque imbribus procubuerant, ut, si qui etiam in praesentia se occultassent, tamen his deducto exercitu rerum omnium inopia pereundum videroretur. Ac saepe in eum locum ventum est tanto in omnis partis diviso equitatu, ut modo visum ab se Ambiorigem in fuga circumspicerent captivi nec plane etiam abisse ex conspectu contenderent, ut spe consequendi illata atque infinito labore suscepto, qui se summam ab Caesare gratiam inituros putarent, paene naturam studio vincerent, semperque paulum

Qua oblata potestate omnibus his civitatibus obsides imperat, certum numerum militum ad se celeriter adduci iubet, armorum quantum quaeque civitas 35 domi quodque ante tempus efficiat, constituit; imprimis equitatui studet. Summae diligentiae summam imperii severitatem addit; magnitudine supplicii dubitantes cogit. Nam maiore commisso delicto igne atque omnibus tormentis necat, leviore de causa auribus desectis aut singulis effossis oculis domum remittit, ut sint reliquis documento et magnitudine poenae perterreant alios.

5 V. His suppliciis celeriter coacto exercitu, Lucterium Cadurcum, summae hominem audaciae, cum parte copiarum in Rutenos mittit; ipse in Bituriges proficiscitur. adventu Bituriges ad Aeduos, quorum erant in fide, legatos mittunt subsidium rogatum, quo facilius hostium copias susti-10 nere possint. Aedui de consilio legatorum, quos Caesar ad exercitum reliquerat, copias equitatus peditatusque subsidio Biturigibus mittunt. Qui cum ad flumen Ligerim venissent, quod Bituriges ab Aeduis dividit, paucos dies ibi morati neque flumen transire ausi domum revertuntur legatisque nostris 15 renuntiant, se Biturigum perfidiam veritos revertisse, quibus id consilii fuisse cognoverint, ut, si flumen transissent, una ex parte ipsi, altera Arverni se circumsisterent. Id eane de causa, quam legatis pronuntiarunt, an perfidia adducti fecerint, quod nihil nobis constat, non videtur pro certo esse proponendum. 20 Bituriges eorum discessu statim cum Arvernis junguntur.

Caesar joins his army, subdues the Arverni, and sets out to go to Gorgobina, which Vercingetorix had attacked.

VI. His rebus in Italiam Caesari nuntiatis, cum iam ille urbanas res virtute Gnaei Pompei commodiorem in statum pervenisse intellegeret, in Transalpinam Galliam profectus est. Eo cum venisset, magna difficultate afficiebatur, qua 25 ratione ad exercitum pervenire posset. Nam si legiones in provinciam arcesseret, se absente in itinere proelio dimicaturas intellegebat; si ipse ad exercitum contenderet, ne iis quidem eo tempore, qui quieti viderentur, suam salutem recte committi videbat.

3º VII. Interim Lucterius Cadurcus in Rutenos missus eam civitatem Arvernis conciliat. Progressus in Nitiobroges et Gabalos ab utrisque obsides accipit et magna coacta manu in provinciam Narbonem versus eruptionem facere contendit. Qua re nuntiata Caesar omnibus consiliis antevertendum 35 existimavit, ut Narbonem proficisceretur. Eo cum venisset, timentes confirmat, praesidia in Rutenis provincialibus, Volcis Arecomicis, Tolosatibus circumque Narbonem, quae loca hostibus erant finitima, constituit, partem copiarum ex provincia supplementumque, quod ex Italia adduxerat, in Helvios, qui fines Arvernorum contingunt, convenire iubet.

VIII. His rebus comparatis represso iam Lucterio et remoto, quod intrare intra praesidia periculosum putabat, in Helvios proficiscitur. Etsi mons Cebenna, qui Arvernos ab Helviis discludit, durissimo tempore anni altissima nive iter impediebat, tamen discussa nive sex in altitudinem pedum 10 atque ita viis patefactis summo militum sudore ad fines Arvernorum pervenit. Quibus oppressis inopinantibus, quod se Cebenna ut muro munitos existimabant, ac ne singulari quidem umquam homini eo tempore anni semitae patuerant, equitibus imperat, ut, quam latissime possint, vagentur et 15 quam maximum hostibus terrorem inferant. Celeriter haec fama ac nuntiis ad Vercingetorigem perferuntur; quem perterriti omnes Arverni circumsistunt atque obsecrant, ut suis fortunis consulat neu se ab hostibus diripi patiatur, praesertim Ouorum ille 20 cum videat omne ad se bellum translatum. precibus permotus castra ex Biturigibus movet in Arvernos versus.

IX. At Caesar biduum in his locis moratus, quod haec de Vercingetorige usu ventura opinione praeceperat, per causam supplementi equitatusque cogendi ab exercitu discedit, Bru- 25 tum adulescentem his copiis praeficit; hunc monet, ut in omnis partes equites quam latissime pervagentur: daturum se operam, ne longius triduo ab castris absit. His constitutis rebus suis inopinantibus, quam maximis potest itineribus, Viennam pervenit. Ibi nanctus recentem equitatum, quem 30 multis ante diebus eo praemiserat, neque diurno neque nocturno itinere intermisso per fines Aeduorum in Lingones contendit, ubi duae legiones hiemabant, ut, si quid etiam de sua salute ab Aeduis iniretur consilii, celeritate praecurreret. Eo cum pervenisset, ad reliquas legiones mittit priusque omnes 35 in unum locum cogit, quam de eius adventu Arvernis nuntiari posset. Hac re cognita Vercingetorix rursus in Bituriges exercitum reducit atque inde profectus Gorgobinam, Boiorum oppidum, quos ibi Helvetico proelio victos Caesar collocaverat Aeduisque attribuerat, oppugnare instituit.

X. Magnam haec res Caesari difficultatem ad consilium

X. Magnam haec res Caesari difficultatem ad consilium capiendum afferebat, si reliquam partem hiemis uno in loco 5 legiones contineret, ne stipendiariis Aeduorum expugnatis cuncta Gallia deficeret, quod nullum amicis in eo praesidium videretur positum esse; si maturius ex hibernis educeret, ne ab re frumentaria duris subvectionibus laboraret. Praestare visum est tamen omnis difficultates perpeti, quam tanta contumelia accepta omnium suorum voluntates alienare. Itaque cohortatus Aeduos de supportando commeatu praemittit ad Boios, qui de suo adventu doceant hortenturque, ut in fide maneant atque hostium impetum magno animo sustineant. Duabus Agedinci legionibus atque impedimentis totius exteritus relictis ad Boios proficiscitur.

Caesar marches toward Avaricum, taking three cities on the way. The Bituriges burn all their towns except Avaricum.

XI. Altero die cum ad oppidum Senonum Vellaunodunum venisset, ne quem post se hostem relinqueret, quo expeditiore re frumentaria uteretur, oppugnare instituit idque biduo circumvallavit; tertio die missis ex oppido legatis de deditione, 20 arma conferri, iumenta produci, sexcentos obsides dari iubet. Ea qui conficeret, C. Trebonium legatum relinquit, ipse ut quam primum iter faceret. Cenabum Carnutum proficiscitur; qui, tum primum allato nuntio de oppugnatione Vellaunoduni, cum longius eam rem ductum iri existimarent, praesidium 25 Cenabi tuendi causa, quod eo mitterent, comparabant. biduo pervenit. Castris ante oppidum positis, diei tempore exclusus in posterum oppugnationem differt, quaeque ad eam rem usui sint, militibus imperat et, quod oppidum Cenabum pons fluminis Ligeris continebat, veritus, ne nocte ex oppido 30 profugerent, duas legiones in armis excubare iubet. Cenabenses paulo ante mediam noctem silentio ex oppido egressi flumen transire coeperunt. Qua re per exploratores nuntiata, Caesar legiones, quas expeditas esse iusserat, portis incensis intromittit atque oppido potitur perpaucis ex hostium numero 35 desideratis, quin cuncti caperentur, quod pontis atque itinerum angustiae multitudinis fugam intercluserant. Oppidum diripit atque incendit, praedam militibus donat, exercitum Ligerem traducit atque in Biturigum fines pervenit.

XII. Vercingetorix, ubi de Caesaris adventu cognovit. oppugnatione destitit atque obviam Caesari proficiscitur. 5 Ille oppidum Biturigum positum in via Noviodunum oppugnare instituerat. Quo ex oppido cum legati ad eum venissent oratum, ut sibi ignosceret suaeque vitae consuleret, ut celeritate reliquas res conficeret, qua pleraque erat consecutus, arma conferri, equos produci, obsides dari iubet. Parte iam 10 obsidum tradita, cum reliqua administrarentur, centurionibus et paucis militibus intromissis, qui arma iumentaque conquirerent, equitatus hostium procul visus est, qui agmen Vercingetorigis antecesserat. Quem simulatque oppidani conspexerunt atque in spem auxilii venerunt, clamore sublato arma 15 capere, portas claudere, murum complere coeperunt. Centuriones in oppido, cum ex significatione Gallorum novi aliquid ab iis iniri consilii intellexissent, gladiis destrictis portas occupaverunt suosque omnes incolumes receperunt.

XIII. Caesar ex castris equitatum educi iubet, proelium 20 equestre committit; laborantibus iam suis Germanos equites circiter cccc submittit, quos ab initio habere secum instituerat. Eorum impetum Galli sustinere non potuerunt atque in fugam coniecti multis amissis se ad agmen receperunt. Quibus profligatis rursus oppidani perterriti comprehensos eos, quo-25 rum opera plebem concitatam existimabant, ad Caesarem perduxerunt seseque ei dediderunt. Quibus rebus confectis Caesar ad oppidum Avaricum, quod erat maximum munitissimumque in finibus Biturigum atque agri fertilissima regione, profectus est, quod eo oppido recepto civitatem Biturigum se in potestatem redacturum confidebat.

XIV. Vercingetorix tot continuis incommodis Vellaunoduni, Cenabi, Novioduni acceptis suos ad concilium convocat. Docet, longe alia ratione esse bellum gerendum, atque antea gestum sit. Omnibus modis huic rei studendum, ut pabulatione et commeatu Romani prohibeantur. Id esse facile, quod equitatu ipsi abundent et quod anni tempore subleventur. Pabulum secari non posse; necessario dispersos hostes ex aedificiis petere: hos omnes cotidie ab equitibus deleri posse. Praeterea salutis causa rei familiaris commoda neglegenda: vicos atque aedificia incendi oportere hoc spatio ab via quoqueversus, quo pabulandi causa adire posse vide-Harum ipsis rerum copiam suppetere, quod, quorum in finibus bellum geratur, eorum opibus subleventur: Romanos aut inopiam non laturos aut magno periculo longius ab castris processuros; neque interesse, ipsosne interficiant impedimentisne exuant, quibus amissis bellum geri non possit. 10 Praeterea oppida incendi oportere, quae non munitione et loci natura ab omni sint periculo tuta, neu suis sint ad detrectandam militiam receptacula neu Romanis proposita ad copiam commeatus praedamque tollendam. Haec si gravia aut acerba videantur, multo illa gravius aestimare, liberos, 15 coniuges in servitutem abstrahi, ipsos interfici; quae sit necesse accidere victis.

XV. Omnium consensu hac sententia probata, uno die amplius xx urbes Biturigum incenduntur. Hoc idem in reliquis fit civitatibus. In omnibus partibus incendia conspiciuntur; quae etsi magno cum dolore omnes ferebant, tamen hoc sibi solatii proponebant, quod se prope explorata victoria celeriter amissa reciperaturos confidebant. Deliberatur de Avarico in communi concilio, incendi placeret an defendi. Procumbunt omnibus Gallis ad pedes Bituriges, ne pulcherrimam prope totius Galliae urbem, quae praesidio et ornamento sit civitati, suis manibus succendere cogerentur; facile se loci natura defensuros dicunt, quod, prope ex omnibus partibus flumine et palude circumdata, unum habeat et perangustum aditum. Datur petentibus venia, dissuadente primo Vercingetorige, post concedente et precibus ipsorum et misericordia vulgi. Defensores oppido idonei deliguntur.

Caesar, though harassed by Vercingetorix, besieges Avaricum. Vercingetorix being accused of treachery clears himself. Avaricum is taken by Caesar.

XVI. Vercingetorix minoribus Caesarem itineribus subsequitur et locum castris deligit paludibus silvisque munitum ab Avarico longe milia passuum xvi. Ibi per certos explora-

Caesar, etsi a bello atque hoste discedere detriCaesar sends a part of his army north, with the rest encamps before Gergovia; he settles another disturbance among the Aedui.

XXXIV. Hoc decreto interposito cohortatus Aeduos, ut controversiarum ac dissensionis obliviscerentur atque omnibus omissis rebus huic bello servirent eaque, quae meruissent, praemia ab se devicta Gallia exspectarent equitatumque omnem et peditum milia decem sibi celeriter mitterent, quae 5 in praesidiis rei frumentariae causa disponeret, exercitum in duas partes divisit: quattuor legiones in Senones Parisiosque Labieno ducendas dedit, sex ipse in Arvernos ad oppidum Gergoviam secundum flumen Elaver duxit; equitatus partem illi attribuit, partem sibi reliquit. Qua re cognita Vercingero torix omnibus interruptis eius fluminis pontibus ab altera fluminis parte iter facere coepit.

XXXV. Cum uterque utrique esset exercitus in conspectu fereque e regione castris castra poneret, dispositis exploratoribus, necubi effecto ponte Romani copias traducerent, erat 15 in magnis Caesaris difficultatibus res, ne maiorem aestatis partem flumine impediretur, quod non fere ante autumnum Elaver vado transiri solet. Itaque, ne id accideret, silvestri loco castris positis e regione unius eorum pontium, quos Vercingetorix rescindendos curaverat, postero die cum duabus 20 legionibus in occulto restitit; reliquas copias cum omnibus impedimentis, ut consueverat, misit, captis quibusdam cohortibus, uti numerus legionum constare videretur. His, quam longissime possent, egredi iussis, cum iam ex diei tempore coniecturam ceperat, in castra perventum, isdem sublicis, quarum 25 pars inferior integra remanebat, pontem reficere coepit. Celeriter effecto opere legionibusque traductis et loco castris idoneo delecto reliquas copias revocavit. Vercingetorix re cognita, ne contra suam voluntatem dimicare cogeretur, magnis itineribus antecessit.

XXXVI. Caesar ex eo loco quintis castris Gergoviam pervenit equestrique eo die proelio levi facto, perspecto urbis situ, quae posita in altissimo monte omnis aditus difficiles habebat, de expugnatione desperavit, de obsessione non prius agendum constituit, quam rem frumentariam expedisset. At Vercingetorix castris prope oppidum positis mediocribus circum se intervallis separatim singularum civitatium copias collocaverat, atque omnibus eius iugi collibus occupatis, qua 5 despici poterat, horribilem speciem praebebat principesque earum civitatium, quos sibi ad concilium capiendum delegerat, prima luce cotidie ad se convenire iubebat, seu quid communicandum, seu quid administrandum videretur, neque ullum fere diem intermittebat, quin equestri proelio interiectis 10 sagittariis, quid in quoque esset animi ac virtutis suorum, perspiceret. Erat e regione oppidi collis sub ipsis radicibus montis egregie munitus atque ex omni parte circumcisus; quem si tenerent nostri, et aquae magna parte et pabulatione libera prohibituri hostes videbantur. Sed is locus praesidio 15 ab his non nimis firmo tenebatur. Tamen silentio noctis Caesar ex castris egressus, priusquam subsidio ex oppido veniri posset, deiecto praesidio potitus loco, duas ibi legiones collocavit fossamque duplicem duodenum pedum a maioribus castris ad minora perduxit, ut tuto ab repentino hostium 20 incursu etiam singuli commeare possent.

XXXVII. Dum haec ad Gergoviam geruntur, Convictolitavis Aeduus, cui magistratum adiudicatum a Caesare demonstravimus, sollicitatus ab Arvernis pecunia cum quibusdam adulescentibus colloquitur; quorum erat princeps 25 Litaviccus atque eius fratres, amplissima familia nati adule-Cum his praemium communicat hortaturque, ut se liberos et imperio natos meminerint. Esse nonnullo se Caesaris beneficio affectum, sic tamen, ut iustissimam apud eum causam obtinuerit; sed plus communi libertati tribuere. Cur enim potius Aedui de suo iure et de legibus ad Caesarem disceptatorem, quam Romani ad Aeduos veniant? 35 Celeriter adulescentibus et oratione magistratus et praemio deductis, cum se vel principes eius consilii fore profiterentur, ratio perficiendi quaerebatur, quod civitatem temere ad suscipiendum bellum adduci posse non confidebant.

Placuit, ut Litaviccus decem illis milibus, quae Caesari ad bellum mitterentur, praeficeretur atque ea ducenda curaret, fratresque eius ad Caesarem praecurrerent. Reliqua qua ratione agi placeat, constituunt.

XXXVIII. Litaviccus accepto exercitu, cum milia pas- 5 suum circiter xxx ab Gergovia abesset, convocatis subito militibus lacrimans, 'Quo proficiscimur,' inquit, 'milites? Omnis noster equitatus, omnis nobilitas interiit; principes civitatis, Eporedorix et Viridomarus, insimulati proditionis, ab Romanis indicta causa interfecti sunt. Haec ab ipsis 10 cognoscite, qui ex ipsa caede fugerunt; nam ego, fratribus atque omnibus meis propinquis interfectis, dolore prohibeor, quae gesta sunt, pronuntiare.' Producuntur hi, quos ille edocuerat, quae dici vellet, atque eadem, quae Litaviccus pronuntiaverat, multitudini exponunt: equites Aeduorum 15 interfectos, quod collocuti cum Arvernis dicerentur; ipsos se inter multitudinem militum occultasse atque ex media caede fugisse. Conclamant Aedui et Litaviccum obsecrant, ut sibi consulat. 'Quasi vero,' inquit ille, 'consilii sit res, ac non necesse sit nobis Gergoviam contendere et cum Arvernis 20 nosmet coniungere. An dubitamus, quin nefario facinore admisso Romani iam ad nos interficiendos concurrant? Proinde, si quid in nobis animi est, persequamur eorum mortem, qui indignissime interierunt, atque hos latrones interficiamus.' Ostendit cives Romanos, qui eius praesidii fiducia una erant; 25 magnum numerum frumenti commeatusque diripit, ipsos crudeliter excruciatos interficit. Nuntios tota civitate Aeduorum dimittit, eodem mendacio de caede equitum et principum permovet; hortatur, ut simili ratione, atque ipse fecerit, suas iniurias persequantur.

XXXIX. Eporedorix Aeduus, summo loco natus adulescens et summae domi potentiae, et una Viridomarus, pari aetate et gratia, sed genere dispari, quem Caesar ab Divitiaco sibi traditum ex humili loco ad summam dignitatem perduxerat, in equitum numero convenerant nominatim ab eo evo- 35 cati. His erat inter se de principatu contentio, et in illa magistratuum controversia alter pro Convictolitavi, alter pro Coto summis opibus pugnaverant. Ex his Eporedorix cog-nito Litavicci consilio media fere nocte rem ad Caesarem defert; orat, ne patiatur civitatem pravis adulescentium consiliis ab amicitia populi Romani deficere; quod futurum provideat, si se tot hominum milia cum hostibus coniunxerint, 5 quorum salutem neque propinqui neglegere neque civitas levi momento aestimare posset.

XL. Magna affectus sollicitudine hoc nuntio Caesar, quod semper Aeduorum civitati praecipue indulserat, nulla interposita dubitatione legiones expeditas quattuor equitatumque 10 omnem ex castris educit, nec fuit spatium tali tempore ad contrahenda castra, quod res posita in celeritate videbatur; Gaium Fabium legatum cum legionibus duabus castris praesidio relinquit. Fratres Litavicci cum comprehendi iussisset, paulo ante reperit ad hostes fugisse. Adhortatus milites, ne necessario tempore itineris labore permoveantur, cupidissimis omnibus progressus milia passuum xxv, agmen Aeduorum conspicatus, immisso equitatu iter eorum moratur atque impedit interdicitque omnibus, ne quemquam interficiant. Eporedorigem et Viridomarum, quos illi interfectos existi-20 mabant, inter equites versari suosque appellare iubet. His cognitis et Litavicci fraude perspecta Aedui manus tendere, deditionem significare et proiectis armis mortem deprecari incipiunt. Litaviccus cum suis clientibus, quibus more Gallorum nefas est etiam in extrema fortuna deserere patronos, 25 Gergoviam profugit.

Caesar nuntiis ad civitatem Aeduorum missis, qui suo beneficio conservatos docerent, quos iure belli interficere potuisset, tribusque horis noctis exercitui ad quietem datis castra ad Gergoviam movit. Medio fere itinere equites a Fabio 30 missi, quanto res in periculo fuerit, exponunt. celeritate posse mutari; occasionis esse rem, non proelii. His rebus expositis signum dat et ab dextra parte alio ascensu eodem tempore Aeduos mittit.

XLVI. Oppidi murus ab planitie atque initio ascensus recta regione, si nullus amfractus intercederet, mille ducentos 5 passus aberat; quicquid huc circuitus ad molliendum clivum accesserat, id spatium itineris augebat. A medio fere colle in longitudinem, ut natura montis ferebat, ex grandibus saxis sex pedum murum, qui nostrorum impetum tardaret, praeduxerant Galli atque inferiore omni spatio vacuo relicto superiorem partem collis usque ad murum oppidi densissimis castris compleverant. Milites dato signo celeriter ad munitionem perveniunt eamque transgressi trinis castris potiuntur; ac tanta fuit in castris capiendis celeritas, ut Teutomatus, rex Nitiobrogum, subito in tabernaculo oppressus, ut meridie conquieverat, superiore corporis parte nudata, vulnerato equo vix se ex manibus praedantium militum eriperet.

XLVII. Consecutus id, quod animo proposuerat, Caesar receptui cani iussit legionisque decimae, quacum erat, continuo signa constituit. At reliquarum legionum milites non 20 exaudito tubae sono, quod satis magna valles intercedebat. tamen ab tribunis militum legatisque, ut erat a Caesare praeceptum, retinebantur; sed elati spe celeris victoriae et hostium fuga et superiorum temporum secundis proeliis nihil adeo arduum sibi esse existimaverunt, quod non virtute con- 25 sequi possent, neque finem prius sequendi fecerunt, quam muro oppidi portisque appropinquarunt. Tum vero ex omnibus urbis partibus orto clamore, qui longius aberant, repentino tumultu perterriti, cum hostem intra portas esse existimarent, sese ex oppido ejecerunt. Matresfamiliae de muro vestem 30 argentumque iactabant et pectore nudo prominentes passis manibus obtestabantur Romanos, ut sibi parcerent neu, sicut Avarici fecissent, ne a mulieribus quidem atque infantibus abstinerent; nonnullae de muris per manus demissae sese militibus tradebant. L. Fabius, centurio legionis viii, quem 35 inter suos eo die dixisse constabat, excitari se Avaricensibus praemiis neque commissurum, ut prius quisquam murum ascenderet, tres suos nactus manipulares atque ab iis sublevatus murum ascendit; hos ipse rursus singulos exceptans in murum extulit.

XLVIII. Interim ii, qui ad alteram partem oppidi, ut supra demonstravimus, munitionis causa convenerant, primo exausitio clamore, inde etiam crebris nuntiis incitati, oppidum a Romanis teneri, praemissis equitibus magno concursu eo contenderunt. Eorum ut quisque primus venerat, sub muro consistebat suorumque pugnantium numerum augebat. Quorum cum magna multitudo convenisset, matresfamiliae, quae paulo ante Romanis de muro manus tendebant, suos obtestari et more Gallico passum capillum ostentare liberosque in conspectum proferre coeperunt. Erat Romanis nec loco nec numero aequa contentio; simul et cursu et spatio pugnae fatigati non facile recentes atque integros sustinebant.

XLIX. Caesar cum iniquo loco pugnari hostiumque augeri copias videret, praemetuens suis ad Titum Sextium legatum, quem minoribus castris praesidio reliquerat, misit, ut cohortes ex castris celeriter educeret et sub infimo colle ab dextro latere hostium constitueret, ut, si nostros loco depulsos vidisset, quo minus libere hostes insequerentur, terreret. Ipse paulum ex eo loco cum legione progressus, ubi constiterat, eventum pugnae exspectabat.

L. Cum acerrime comminus pugnaretur, hostes loco et numero, nostri virtute confiderent, subito sunt Aedui visi ab latere nostris aperto, quos Caesar ab dextra parte alio ascensu manus distinendae causa miserat. Hi similitudine armorum vehementer nostros perterruerunt, ac tametsi dextris humeris exsertis animadvertebantur, quod insigne pacatorum esse consuerat, tamen id ipsum sui fallendi causa milites ab hostibus factum existimabant. Eodem tempore Lucius Fabius centurio, quique una murum ascenderant, circumventi atque interfecti muro praecipitabantur. Marcus Petronius, eiusdem legionis centurio, cum portas excidere conatus esset, a multitudine oppressus ac sibi desperans, multis iam vulneribus acceptis, manipularibus suis, qui illum secuti erant, 'Quoniam,' inquit, 'me una vobiscum servare non possum, vestrae quidem certe vitae prospiciam, quos cupiditate gloriae adductus in periculum deduxi. Vos data facultate vobis con-

- sulite.' Simul in medios hostis irrupit duobusque interfectis reliquos a porta paulum summovit. Conantibus auxiliari suis 'Frustra,' inquit, 'meae vitae subvenire conamini, quem iam sanguis viresque deficiunt. Proinde abite, dum est facultas, vosque ad legionem recipite.' Ita pugnans post paulum 5 concidit ac suis saluti fuit.
- LI. Nostri, cum undique premerentur, XLVI centurionibus amissis deiecti sunt loco. Sed intolerantius Gallos insequentes legio decima tardavit, quae pro subsidio paulo aequiore loco constiterat. Hanc rursus XIII legionis cohortes exceperunt, 10 quae ex castris minoribus eductae cum Tito Sextio legato ceperant locum superiorem. Legiones, ubi primum planitiem attigerunt, infestis contra hostes signis constiterunt. Vercingetorix ab radicibus collis suos intra munitiones reduxit. Eo die milites sunt paulo minus septingenti desiderati.
- LII. Postero die Caesar contione advocata temeritatem cupiditatemque militum reprehendit, quod sibi ipsi iudicavissent, quo procedendum aut quid agendum videretur, neque signo recipiendi dato constitissent neque ab tribunis militum legatisque retineri potuissent. Exposuit, quid iniqui- 20 tas loci posset, quid ipse ad Avaricum sensisset, cum sine duce et sine equitatu deprehensis hostibus exploratam victoriam dimisisset, ne parvum modo detrimentum in contentione propter iniquitatem loci accideret. Quanto opere eorum animi magnitudinem admiraretur, quos non castrorum muni- 25 tiones, non altitudo montis, non murus oppidi tardare potuisset, tanto opere licentiam arrogantiamque reprehendere, quod plus se quam imperatorem de victoria atque exitu rerum sentire existimarent; nec minus se ab milite modestiam et continentiam quam virtutem atque animi magnitudinem de- 3º siderare.
- LIII. Hac habita contione et ad extremam orationem confirmatis militibus, ne ob hanc causam animo permoverentur neu, quod iniquitas loci attulisset, id virtuti hostium tribuerent, eadem de profectione cogitans, quae ante senserat, 35 legiones ex castris eduxit aciemque idoneo loco constituit. Cum Vercingetorix nihilo magis in aequum locum descenderet, levi facto equestri proelio atque secundo in castra exercitum reduxit. Cum hoc idem postero die fecisset, satis ad Gallicam ostentationem minuendam militumque animos confirmandos factum existimans in Aeduos movit castra. Ne tum quidem insecutis hostibus, tertio die ad flumen Elaver 5 pontes reficit eoque exercitum traducit.

The Aedui begin war; Caesar crosses the Liger.

LIV. Ibi a Viridomaro atque Eporedorige Aeduis appellatus discit, cum omni equitatu Litaviccum ad sollicitandos Aeduos profectum; opus esse ipsos antecedere ad confirmandam civitatem. Etsi multis iam rebus perfidiam Ae10 duorum perspectam habebat atque horum discessu admaturari defectionem civitatis existimabat, tamen eos retinendos non constituit, ne aut inferre iniuriam videretur aut dare timoris aliquam suspicionem. Discedentibus his breviter sua in Aeduos merita exposuit; quos et quam humiles accepisset, compulsos in oppida, multatos agris, omnibus ereptis copiis, imposito stipendio, obsidibus summa cum contumelia extortis, et quam in fortunam quamque in amplitudinem deduxisset, ut non solum in pristinum statum redissent, sed omnium temporum dignitatem et gratiam antecessisse viderentur. His 20 datis mandatis eos ab se dimisit.

LV. Noviodunum erat oppidum Aeduorum ad ripas Ligeris opportuno loco positum. Huc Caesar omnes obsides Galliae, frumentum, pecuniam publicam, suorum atque exercitus impedimentorum magnam partem contulerat; huc 25 magnum numerum equorum huius belli causa in Italia atque Hispania coëmptum miserat. Eo cum Eporedorix Viridomarusque venissent et de statu civitatis cognovissent, Litaviccum Bibracti ab Aeduis receptum, quod est oppidum apud eos maximae auctoritatis, Convictolitavim magistratum mag-30 namque partem senatus ad eum convenisse, legatos ad Vercingetorigem de pace et amicitia concilianda publice missos, non praetermittendum tantum commodum existimaverunt. Itaque interfectis Novioduni custodibus, quique eo negotiandi causa convenerant, pecuniam atque equos inter se partiti 35 sunt, obsides civitatum Bibracte ad magistratum deducendos curaverunt, oppidum, quod a se teneri non posse iudicabant, ne cui esset usui Romanis, incenderunt, frumenti quod subito potuerunt, navibus avexerunt, reliquum flumine atque incendio corruperunt. Ipsi ex finitimis regionibus copias cogere, praesidia custodiasque ad ripas Ligeris disponere equitatumque omnibus locis iniciendi timoris causa ostentare 5 coeperunt, si ab re frumentaria Romanos excludere aut adductos inopia in provinciam expellere possent. Quam ad spem multum eos adiuvabat, quod Liger ex nivibus creverat, ut omnino vado non posse transiri videretur.

LVI. Quibus rebus cognitis Caesar maturandum sibi cen- 10 suit, si esset in perficiendis pontibus periclitandum, ut prius, quam essent maiores eo coactae copiae, dimicaret. Nam ut commutato consilio iter in provinciam converteret, id ne metu quidem necessario faciundum existimabat, cum quod infamia atque indignitas rei et oppositus mons Cebenna via- 15 rumque difficultas impediebat, tum maxime quod, abiuncto Labieno atque iis legionibus, quas una miserat, vehementer timebat. Itaque admodum magnis diurnis nocturnisque itineribus confectis contra omnium opinionem ad Ligerem venit, vadoque per equites invento pro rei necessitate oppor- 20 tuno, ut brachia modo atque humeri ad sustinenda arma liberi ab aqua esse possent, disposito equitatu, qui vim fluminis refringeret, atque hostibus primo aspectu perturbatis, incolumem exercitum traduxit, frumentumque in agris et pecoris copiam nactus, repleto his rebus exercitu iter in Senones 25 facere instituit.

Meanwhile the expedition of Labienus against Lutetia is successful. He joins Caesar.

LVII. Dum haec apud Caesarem geruntur, Labienus eo supplemento, quod nuper ex Italia venerat, relicto Agedinci, ut esset impedimentis praesidio, cum quattuor legionibus Lutetiam proficiscitur. Id est oppidum Parisiorum, quod 30 positum est in insula fluminis Sequanae. Cuius adventu ab hostibus cognito, magnae ex finitimis civitatibus copiae convenerunt. Summa imperii traditur Camulogeno Aulerco, qui prope confectus aetate tamen propter singularem scientiam rei militaris ad eum est honorem evocatus. Is cum ani- 35 madvertisset, perpetuam esse paludem, quae influeret in Sequanam atque illum omnem locum magnopere impediret, hic consedit nostrosque transitu prohibere instituit.

LVIII. Labienus primo vineas agere, cratibus atque aggere 5 paludem explere atque iter munire conabatur. Postquam id difficilius confieri animadvertit, silentio e castris tertia vigilia egressus eodem, quo venerat, itinere Metiosedum pervenit. Id est oppidum Senonum, in insula Sequanae positum, ut paulo ante de Lutetia diximus. Deprensis navibus circiter 10 quinquaginta celeriterque coniunctis atque eo militibus iniectis et rei novitate perterritis oppidanis, quorum magna pars erat ad bellum evocata, sine contentione oppido potitur. Refecto ponte, quem superioribus diebus hostes resciderant, exercitum traducit et secundo flumine ad Lutetiam iter facere Hostes re cognita ab iis, qui Metiosedo fugerant, 15 coepit. Lutetiam incendi pontesque eius oppidi rescindi iubent; ipsi profecti a palude ad ripas Sequanae e regione Lutetiae contra Labieni castra considunt.

LIX. Iam Caesar a Gergovia discessisse audiebatur, iam 20 de Aeduorum defectione et secundo Galliae motu rumores afferebantur, Gallique in colloquiis interclusum itinere et Ligeri Caesarem inopia frumenti coactum in provinciam contendisse confirmabant. Bellovaci autem defectione Aeduorum cognita, qui iam ante erant per se infideles, manus cogere 25 atque aperte bellum parare coeperunt. Tum Labienus tanta rerum commutatione longe aliud sibi capiendum consilium, atque antea senserat, intellegebat, neque iam, ut aliquid acquireret proelioque hostes lacesseret, sed ut incolumem exercitum Agedincum reduceret, cogitabat. Namque altera ex 30 parte Bellovaci, quae civitas in Gallia maximam habet opinionem virtutis, instabant, alteram Camulogenus parato atque instructo exercitu tenebat; tum legiones a praesidio atque impedimentis interclusas maximum flumen distinebat. Tantis subito difficultatibus obiectis ab animi virtute auxilium peten-35 dum videbat.

buit et prima confecta vigilia quattuor milia passuum secundo flumine silentio progredi ibique se exspectari iubet. Quinque cohortes, quas minime firmas ad dimicandum esse existimabat, castris praesidio relinquit; quinque eiusdem legionis reliquas de media nocte cum omnibus impedimentis adverso 5 flumine magno tumultu proficisci imperat. Conquirit etiam lintres; has magno sonitu remorum incitatas in eandem partem mittit. Ipse post paulo silentio egressus cum tribus legionibus eum locum petit, quo naves appelli iusserat.

LXI. Eo cum esset ventum, exploratores hostium, ut omni 10 fluminis parte erant dispositi, inopinantes, quod magna subito erat coorta tempestas, ab nostris opprimuntur; exercitus equitatusque equitibus Romanis administrantibus, quos ei negotio praefecerat, celeriter transmittitur. Uno fere tempore sub lucem hostibus nuntiatur, in castris Romanorum 15 praeter consuetudinem tumultuari, et magnum ire agmen adverso flumine sonitumque remorum in eadem parte exaudiri, et paulo infra milites navibus transportari. Quibus rebus auditis, quod existimabant, tribus locis transire legiones atque omnes perturbatos defectione Aeduorum fugam pa- 20 rare, suas quoque copias in tres partes distribuerunt. Nam praesidio e regione castrorum relicto et parva manu Metiosedum versus missa, quae tantum progrediatur, quantum naves processissent, reliquas copias contra Labienum duxerunt. 25

LXII. Prima luce et nostri omnes erant transportati et hostium acies cernebatur. Labienus milites cohortatus, ut suae pristinae virtutis et secundissimorum proeliorum retinerent memoriam atque ipsum Caesarem, cuius ductu saepenumero hostes superassent, praesentem adesse existimarent, 30 dat signum proelii. Primo concursu ab dextro cornu, ubi septima legio constiterat, hostes pelluntur atque in fugam coniciuntur; ab sinistro, quem locum duodecima legio tenebat, cum primi ordines hostium transfixi telis concidissent, tamen acerrime reliqui resistebant, nec dabat suspicionem 35 fugae quisquam. Ipse dux hostium Camulogenus suis aderat atque eos cohortabatur. Incerto nunc etiam exitu victoriae, cum septimae legionis tribunis esset nuntiatum, quae in sinistro cornu gererentur, post tergum hostium legionem ostenderunt signaque intulerunt. Ne eo quidem tempore quisquam loco cessit, sed circumventi omnes interfectique sunt. Eandem fortunam tulit Camulogenus. At ii, qui praesidio contra 5 castra Labieni erant relicti, cum proelium commissum audissent, subsidio suis ierunt collemque ceperunt, neque nostrorum militum victorum impetum sustinere potuerunt. Sic cum suis fugientibus permixti, quos non silvae montesque texerunt, ab equitatu sunt interfecti. Hoc negotio confecto Labienus 10 revertitur Agedincum, ubi impedimenta totius exercitus relicta erant; inde cum omnibus copiis ad Caesarem pervenit.

The revolt becomes general. Vercingetorix is appointed commander. His cavalry being defeated by Caesar, he takes refuge in Alesia.

LXIII. Defectione Aeduorum cognita bellum augetur. Legationes in omnes partes circummittuntur; quantum gratia, auctoritate, pecunia valent, ad sollicitandas civitates nituntur; 15 nacti obsides, quos Caesar apud eos deposuerat, horum supplicio dubitantes territant. Petunt a Vercingetorige Aedui, ut ad se veniat rationesque belli gerendi communicet. Re impetrata contendunt, ut ipsis summa imperii tradatur, et re in controversiam deducta totius Galliae concilium Bibracte 20 indicitur. Eodem conveniunt undique frequentes. Multitudinis suffragiis res permittitur; ad unum omnes Vercingetorigem probant imperatorem. Ab hoc concilio Remi, Lingones, Treveri afuerunt; illi, quod amicitiam Romanorum sequebantur; Treveri, quod aberant longius et ab Germanis 25 premebantur, quae fuit causa, quare toto abessent bello et neutris auxilia mitterent. Magno dolore Aedui ferunt se deiectos principatu, queruntur fortunae commutationem et Caesaris indulgentiam in se requirunt, neque tamen suscepto bello suum consilium ab reliquis separare audent. Inviti 30 summae spei adulescentes, Eporedorix et Viridomarus, Vercingetorigi parent.

LXIV. Ipse imperat reliquis civitatibus obsides diemque huic rei constituit; omnes equites, xv milia numero, celeriter convenire iubet. Peditatu, quem antea habuerat, se fore contentum dicit, neque fortunam temptaturum aut in acie dimicaturum, sed, quoniam abundet equitatu, perfacile esse factu frumentationibus pabulationibusque Romanos prohibere; aequo modo animo sua ipsi frumenta corrumpant aedificiaque incendant, qua rei familiaris iactura perpetuum imperium 5 libertatemque se consequi videant. His constitutis rebus Aeduis Segusiavisque, qui sunt finitimi provinciae, decem milia peditum imperat; huc addit equites octingentos. praeficit fratrem Eporedorigis bellumque inferri Allobrogibus iubet. Altera ex parte Gabalos proximosque pagos Arverno- 10 rum in Helvios, item Rutenos Cadurcosque ad fines Volcarum Arecomicorum depopulandos mittit. Nihilo minus clandestinis nuntiis legationibusque Allobrogas sollicitat, quorum mentes nondum ab superiore bello resedisse sperabat. rum principibus pecunias, civitati autem imperium totius 15 provinciae pollicetur.

LXV. Ad hos omnes casus provisa erant praesidia cohortium duarum et viginti, quae ex ipsa provincia ab Lucio Caesare legato ad omnes partes opponebantur. Helvii sua sponte cum finitimis proelio congressi pelluntur et Gaio 20 Valerio Donnotauro, Caburi filio, principe civitatis, compluribusque aliis interfectis intra oppida ac muros compelluntur. Allobroges crebris ad Rhodanum dispositis praesidiis magna cum cura et diligentia suos fines tuentur. Caesar, quod hostes equitatu superiores esse intellegebat et interclusis 25 omnibus itineribus nulla re ex provincia atque Italia sublevari poterat, trans Rhenum in Germaniam mittit ad eas civitates, quas superioribus annis pacaverat, equitesque ab his arcessit et levis armaturae pedites, qui inter eos proeliari consuerant. Eorum adventu, quod minus idoneis equis ute- 30 bantur, a tribunis militum reliquisque equitibus Romanis atque evocatis equos sumit Germanisque distribuit.

LXVI. Interea, dum haec geruntur, hostium copiae ex Arvernis equitesque, qui toti Galliae erant imperati, conveniunt. Magno horum coacto numero, cum Caesar in Sequanos per extremos Lingonum fines iter faceret, quo facilius subsidium provinciae ferri posset, circiter milia passuum decem ab Romanis trinis castris Vercingetorix consedit convo-catisque ad concilium praefectis equitum venisse tempus victoriae demonstrat: fugere in provinciam Romanos Galliaque excedere. Id sibi ad praesentem obtinendam libertatem satis esse; ad reliqui temporis pacem atque otium parum 5 profici: maioribus enim coactis copiis reversuros neque finem bellandi facturos. Proinde agmine impeditos adoriantur. pedites suis auxilium ferant atque in eo morentur, iter facere non posse; si, id quod magis futurum confidat, relictis impedimentis suae saluti consulant, et usu rerum necessariarum 10 et dignitate spoliatum iri. Nam de equitibus hostium, quin nemo eorum progredi modo extra agmen audeat, ipsos quidem non debere dubitare. Id quo maiore faciant animo, copias se omnes pro castris habiturum et terrori hostibus futurum. Conclamant equites, sanctissimo jureiurando con-15 firmari oportere, ne tecto recipiatur, ne ad liberos, ne ad parentes, ad uxorem aditum habeat, qui non bis per agmen hostium perequitasset.

LXVII. Probata re atque omnibus iureiurando adactis, postero die in tres partes distributo equitatu duae se acies 20 ab duobus lateribus ostendunt, una a primo agmine iter impedire coepit. Qua re nuntiata Caesar suum quoque equitatum tripertito divisum contra hostem ire iubet. Pugnatur una omnibus in partibus. Consistit agmen; impedimenta inter legiones recipiuntur. Si qua in parte nostri laborare 25 aut gravius premi videbantur, eo signa inferri Caesar aciemque constitui iubebat; quae res et hostes ad insequendum tardabat et nostros spe auxilii confirmabat. Tandem Germani ab dextro latere summum iugum nancti hostes loco depellunt; fugientes usque ad flumen, ubi Vercingetorix 30 cum pedestribus copiis consederat, persequuntur compluresque interficiunt. Qua re animadversa reliqui, ne circumirentur, veriti se fugae mandant. Omnibus locis fit caedes. Tres nobilissimi Aedui capti ad Caesarem perducuntur: Cotus, praefectus equitum, qui controversiam cum Convic-35 tolitavi proximis comitiis habuerat, et Cavarillus, qui post defectionem Litavicci pedestribus copiis praefuerat, et Eporedorix, quo duce ante adventum Caesaris Aedui cum Sequanis bello contenderant.

LXXXV. Caesar idoneum locum nactus, quid quaque ex 15 parte geratur, cognoscit; laborantibus submittit. Utrisque ad animum occurrit, unum esse illud tempus, quo maxime contendi conveniat: Galli, nisi perfregerint munitiones, de omni salute desperant; Romani, si rem obtinuerint, finem laborum omnium exspectant. Ipse adit reliquos, cohortatur, ne labori succumbant; omnium superiorum dimicationum fructum in eo die atque hora docet consistere. Eius adventu ex colore vestitus cognito, quo insigni in proeliis uti consuerat, turmisque equitum et cohor-15 tibus visis, quas se sequi iusserat, ut de locis superioribus haec declivia et devexa cernebantur, hostes proelium committunt. Utrimque clamore sublato, excipit rursus ex vallo atque omnibus munitionibus clamor. Nostri omissis pilis gladiis rem gerunt. Repente post tergum equitatus cernitur; cohortes 20 aliae appropinquant. Hostes terga vertunt; fugientibus equites occurrunt. Fit magna caedes. Sedulius, dux et princeps Lemovicum, occiditur; Vercassivellaunus Arvernus vivus in fuga comprehenditur; signa militaria septuaginta quattuor ad Caesarem referuntur; pauci ex tanto numero se incolu-25 mes in castra recipiunt. Conspicati ex oppido caedem et fugam suorum desperata salute copias a munitionibus reducunt. Fit protinus hac re audita ex castris Gallorum fuga. Ouod nisi crebris subsidiis ac totius diei labore milites essent defessi, omnes hostium copiae deleri potuissent. De media 30 nocte missus equitatus novissimum agmen consequitur; magnus numerus capitur atque interficitur, reliqui ex fuga in civitates discedunt.

LXXXIX. Postero die Vercingetorix consilio convocato id bellum se suscepisse non suarum necessitatum, sed com35 munis libertatis causa demonstrat, et quoniam sit fortunae cedendum, ad utramque rem se illis offerre, seu morte sua Romanis satisfacere seu vivum tradere velint. Mittuntur de his rebus ad Caesarem legati. Iubet arma tradi, prin-cipes produci. Ipse in munitione pro castris consedit; eo duces producuntur. Vercingetorix deditur, arma proiciuntur. Reservatis Aeduis atque Arvernis, si per eos civitates reciperare posset, ex reliquis captivis toto exercitui capita singula praedae nomine distribuit.

All Gaul submits to Caesar. He places his army in winter quarters. A thanksgiving is decreed at Rome.

XC. His rebus confectis in Aeduos proficiscitur; civitatem recipit. Eo legati ab Arvernis missi, quae imperaret, se facturos pollicentur. Imperat magnum numerum obsidum. Legiones in hiberna mittit. Captivorum circiter xx milia Aeduis Arvernisque reddit. T. Labienum duabus cum legi- 10 onibus et equitatu in Sequanos proficisci iubet; huic M. Sempronium Rutilum attribuit. Gaium Fabium legatum et Lucium Minucium Basilum cum legionibus duabus in Remis collocat, ne quam ab finitimis Bellovacis calamitatem accipiant. Gaium Antistium Reginum in Ambivaretos, Titum Sextium in Bituriges, Gaium Caminium Rebilum in Rutenos cum singulis legionibus mittit. Quintum Tullium Ciceronem et Publium Sulpicium Cabilloni et Matiscone in Aeduis ad Ararim rei frumentariae causa collocat. Ipse Bibracte hiemare constituit. His rebus ex litteris Caesaris cognitis, Romae die- 20 rum viginti supplicatio redditur.

Page 47. C. IULI CAESARIS: on the three names, — praenōmen, nōmen, and cognōmen, — see A. 80; H. 649. C. stands for Gaius; in proper names initial c was in Caesar's time written in place of g. Why? A. 6; H. 2, I-3. Iuli: why the ending i instead of ii? B. 25, I; A. 40, b; H. 51, 5. Caesaris: the origin of the name Caesar has been much discussed, but remains uncertain. Most likely it comes from caesaries, 'hair,' — the first one to bear the name having had a remarkable amount of hair in infancy. What other derivations have been suggested? See Smith's Dict. of Biography and Mythology, vol. i. p. 536. DE BELLO GALLICO: A. 217, R.; H. 359, N. I, 4); the titles of books in Latin are often put in the abl. with de. - [linguā]. Caesar, although writing in the third person, often uses nos and noster for Romani and Romanorum. lingua: B. 226; A. 253; H. 424. The language of all the Gauls except the Aquitani was Keltic, of which, however, there were many dialects. Some dialects of the Belgae contained German elements. The peculiar speech of the Aquitani survives in the Basque language; see p. 40. lingua, institutis, legibus: When several words stand in the same construction, a conjunction is usually repeated with all, or entirely omitted. In translating, supply 'and' with the last two. Sometimes, however, -que may be added to the last word, when the conjunction is omitted with the others.

  4. inter se: 'from one another.' B. 245; A. 196, f; H. 448, N.

  5. dividit: sing. number because the Marne and Seine were looked upon as forming one boundary. B. 255, 3; A. 205, b; H. 463, II., 3.
- 6. Horum: B. 201, 1; A. 216, a, 2; H. 397, 3. propterea quod: 'because'; propterea (= propter ea) is properly an adv. meaning 'on this account, but when closely connected with quod, as here, the two may be translated by one word. 7. cultu: refers to the external characteristics of 'civilization,' as dress, food, etc., while humanitas suggests 'refinement' and culture of mind. 8. minime — saepe = rarissime, 'very seldom.' mercatores: the 'traders' were mainly from Massilia (see p. 41) and found their way into central Gaul by following the course of the Rhone and the Saône (see p. 39), so that naturally they did not often go so far north as the region of the Belgae. 9. ad effeminandos animos, etc.: 'tend to weaken the courage.' B. 339, 2; A. 296, 300; H. 544, I. 10. Germanis: B. 192, I; A. 234, a; H. 391, I. What other case does proximus govern? Cf. p. 76, 8 and N.; p. 95, 36. quibuscum: B. 142, 4; A. 104, e; H. 187, 2. 11. B. 226; A. 253; H. 424. 13. proeliis: B. 220, I; A. 248; H. 420. cum: the conj. cum can be distinguished from the prep. cum only by the sense and the connection. suis: B. 244, I, I.; A. 196; H. 449. 14. eos := Germanos. finibus: B. 214, 2; A. 243; H. 414.
- 15. Eorum: = horum omnium, i. e., the inhabitants of Gaul mentioned at the beginning of the chapter; pars, 'division,' is used because eorum refers to the country rather than to the people. quam: object of obtinere ('occupy'), which with Gallos stands as subject of dictum est. B. 330; A. 329, 330, a, 2; H. 538. The Galli here are simply the inhabitants of the central part of Gaul'; see p. 38. 16. capit a: 'begins at.' Garumna: Why abl.? Notice the omission of the conjunction; see N. to l. 3 above. 17. Oceano: Oceanus was often used to designate the Atlantic Ocean; the part here referred to is known to-day as the Bay of Biscay. ab: 'on the side of.' 18. vergit: 'slopes.' 19. extremis: 'furthest.' Caesar's standpoint is the Roman Province. inferiorem partem: the part of the Rhine near its mouth. 20. in septen. et or. solem: i. e., (toward the) N. E. 22. ad: 'near.' 23. occasum solis et septen.: i. e., (toward the) N. W.

- bienus. 37. causis: the reasons here assigned by Caesar hardly seem adequate (cf. Book IV., Chap. 16). The first expedition had certainly been barren of results (see N. to p. 114, 14), and could raise no great hopes of brilliant conquest. Perhaps Caesar wished to show both his enemics and his friends that, notwithstanding the rebellions in Gaul, he had the country so well in hand that he could well leave it to engage in military enterprises elsewhere.

- X. 18. denuntiare: N. to p. 147, 4. 29. silvam: the Bacenis wood appears to have formed a part of the great Hercynian forest (Chap. 24), which extended over a large portion of Germany. It is mentioned by Caesar only, and is thought by some to have been in the region of the Hartz Mountains, or perhaps identical with the Thuringian Forest. See map. 31. ab: on the part of. 32. ad eius initium silvae: in Meiningen, the western part of Saxony, Goeler thinks.
- XI. 35. perventum est ad: 'since we have reached.' alienum: 'foreign to the subject,' 'out of place.' This interesting and valuable digression on the customs of the Gauls and Germans is probably introduced to draw attention from the fact that Caesar, from a military point of view, utterly failed to accomplish anything by his second expedition into Germany. He marched over the Rhine, and marched back again, without fighting a battle or taking a prisoner. The moral effect of the expedition, however, upon the Gauls and his fellow-countrymen was doubtless great.

Disciplina: 'system,' i. e., of the 30. reperta, translata: A. 272 b; H. 536, 2, 1). The truth seems to be that, in Caesar's time, Druidism in Gaul, affected by the general degeneracy of society, had long been declining; but that in Britain, owing to the isolated situation of the island and the backwardness of the inhabitants, it was still flourishing with undiminished vigor. It probably originated in Gaul. 31. diligentius: 'with special thoroughness.' eam rem : = eam.

The truth of Caesar's statement is beyond question. 8. animas: 'the life,' 'the soul' as life-principle; the Latin often uses the pl. where the English prefers the sing. The doctrine to which Caesar alludes is that known as Metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls. It was believed in by the ancient Egyptians, by Plato and Pythagoras and their followers, and is held to-day by the Buddhists. 9. hoc: i. e., this belief in the soul's immortality. 10. metu . . . neglecto: causal abl. abs., 'since,' etc. 11. terrarum: = orbis terrarum = 'the earth' (lit. 'the circle of lands'). de rerum natura: 'about nature.' The mystic, half-poetic teachings of the Druids have awakened great interest among scholars; but very little is known about them. Read the article on Druidism in the Encyclopædia Britannica, last edition.
- XV. 14. Alterum: cf. p. 156, 7-8. cum: 'whenever.' 15. incidit: 'breaks out.' 17. versantur: 'engage.' 18. genere: 'family,'='position.' plurimos, etc.: owing to the feudal organization of society, members of the nobility could acquire vast power. Orgetorix had 10,000 retainers, besides many others under obligations to him; see Book I., Chap. 4. 19. Hanc, etc.: 'This is the only source of influence and power that they are familiar with.' 20. noverunt: A. 143 c N.; G. 228, 2 R.I; H. 297 I. 2.
- XVI. 21. dedita: 'devoted.' A. 291 b; G. 439; H. 550 N.2. 23. pro: 'as.' The Romans in their early history sometimes resorted to human sacrifices, as did also the Persians. 25. pro . . . reddatur: suggestive of the ancient Hebrew principle, "whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." 28. habent instituta: almost equals instituerunt. A. 292 c; G. 230; H. 388, I N. simulacra: rude cages of wickerwork, having in shape some resemblance to the human form. 30. quibus: the antecedent is simulacra. Several practices of the Gauls point to a vein of extreme cruelty in the Gallic character; cf. Book v. Chap. 56, Book VII. Chap. 4. This may serve to throw light on the statement, sometimes made, that the horrible excesses of the French Revolution could have occurred in no other civilized country than France. Cf. pp. 42, 43.
- XVII. 35. Deum: gen. pl., = deorum. Mercurium: Caesar applies the names of Roman gods to the divinities of the Gauls; the Gallic names cannot in all cases be determined. Mercury probably corresponds to the Gallic Teutates, Apollo to Belenus (or Belen), Mars to Hesus (or Esus), Jupiter to Tarănis (or Taran, = 'Thunderer). 37. itinerum: 'of journeys.' Mercury is dux viarum in that he points out the road, and dux itinerum because he accompanies the traveller on the way.

Apollinem: for the beliefs about Apollo and the other deities mentioned, see Vocab., and Murray's "Manual of Mythology." 6. ceperint: pf. subj. instead of the fut. pf. indic.; for devovent in meaning looks forward to the future. cum superaverunt: post victoriam. 9. neque: et non. 10. capta: acc. 11. posita tollere: i. e., to take up and carry off things set aside as votive offerings to the gods.
- XVIII. 13. patre: not a regular title of Pluto, but a term suggested by the relationship of children claimed by the Galli. 14. ob eam causam: i. e., because sprung from the god of the Lower World, the realm of darkness and night. 15. numero . . . noctium: the early Germans also reckoned periods of time by nights instead of by days. A survival of this custom is found in our words fortnight (= fourteen nights), sennight (= seven nights), twelfth night, etc. 16. ut . . . subsequatur: i. e., instead of saying, "the first day of the month," "the first day of the year," as we do, they said "the first night of the month," or "of the year." The practice probably originated in the measuring of time by the courses of the moon, in which the night would naturally form the starting-point of reckoning. 18. ab reliquis: i. e., from all other peoples. 21. turpe ducunt: 'consider it disgraceful.'
- XIX. 22. Viri: 'husbands'; the Germans use the word Mann in the same way. pecunias: not necessarily money, but 'property' in general. Derivation of pecunia? dotis nomine: 'by way of dowry.' 23. tantas, etc.: from his own property the husband set aside an amount equal to the dower received with the wife. The income from this common fund, or estate, was saved up, and when the husband or wife died went to the survivor. This custom could have been in vogue only among the higher classes; for the common people were very poor. 25. uter: 'whichever,' husband or wife. vita: why abl.? 26. eum: why 27. in: 'over.' vitae necisque potestatem: among the early Romans also the father had the power of life and death over wife, children, and slaves. 28. illustriore loco: 'of higher rank.' 29. de ... venit: 'if suspicion has arisen in regard to (the cause of) death.' 30. uxoribus: the pl. implies the practice of polygamy among the higher classes of Gaul. 30. in servilem modum: see IDIOMS, under in. 32. excruciatas interficiunt: 'they torture and kill.' See N. to p. 157, 30, and A. 292 R.; G. 667 R.I; H. 549, 5. pro cultu: 'considering the civilization.' Showy parades and brilliant fêtes are a marked characteristic of French life. In view of the fact that the ancient Gauls to so great a degree (as we learn elsewhere) loved pomp and finery, is it not significant that modern Paris is the leader of the world's fashions? Cf. pp. 42, 43.

33. vivis cordi fuisse: cf. IDIOMS, under Esse with two datives.

Cf. p. 156, 8. 10. student: 'pay heed.' Deorum, etc.: the religion of the early Germans was a kind of nature-worship, but hardly so simple as here represented. They worshipped several gods besides the three that Caesar mentions; and the prophetic utterances of women were considered inspired. Cf. Implanted in these early Germans was a spirit of independence and love of freedom that rendered impossible among them marked class distinctions or despotic rule.

The statements in Chapters 22 and 23 about the institutions of the early Germans are of the highest interest and value; for they point to principles of government the fuller outworking of which in the feudal system and in the English Constitution have had much to do with shaping the political history of Europe and even of America. A large body of them, however, early settled in the countries now known as Bavaria and Bohemia, where they long held their own against the Germans. Another portion of them joined the great Gallic migration to the east, and formed a part of the Galatians (cf. p. 41). 24. occupaverunt: not 'occupied.' quae . . . tempus: 'and that people up to the present time.' sese continet: 'has maintained itself' (lit. See Plate V., 5. In this case the Gauls caught hold of the falces with nooses, turned them aside, and having gotten a firm grip on them, drew them over inside the walls by means of windlasses (tormentis). 37. subtrahebant: 'drew away' the agger by running mines under it, so that it sank down into the ground. 38. ferrariae: iron is still mined in the region about Bourges (Avaricum).

On the agger the Romans had wooden towers, which were raised gradually as the height of the agger was increased. See Plan X. 4 a. 6. commissis . . . malis: 'by building up between the corner-posts of their towers.' When the Gauls erected a tower on the walls they left the upright posts at the corners of full length, projecting above the stories at first built; the height could readily be increased, as circumstances might demand, by laying crosspieces above, between these corner-posts already in position. 7. apertos cuniculos: '(the construction of) the open galleries' in the agger, through which timber and other material were carried to the front. As the agger was prolonged nearly to the wall, the enemy hurled sharp darts and other things into the ends of these passage-ways to hinder the progress of the work.

EXIII. 11. Trabes, etc.: in connection with this description, study Plate VI., figure 3. In the construction of the Gallic wall, first, beams were laid parallel on the ground at right angles to the direction of the wall and two feet apart. Some distance from the outer ends these beams were firmly fastened by means of tie-pieces (probably mortised in), running at right angles to them and parallel with the line of the wall. Between the outer ends of the beams large rocks were carefully fitted; the remaining spaces were filled up level with the top of the beams with earth. The first layer (ordo) was now done. Above this a second layer was laid in the same way, but so that the ends of the beams of the upper layer rested on the rocks of the lower. In like manner the remaining layers were constructed, rocks and beams alternating, till the wall was raised to the requisite height. The outer surface of the wall presented an appearance something like that of a checker-board. directae: 'at right angles' to the line of the proposed wall. perpetuae in longitudinem: 'without a break along the (entire) length (of the wall).' ciuntur: by the tie-pieces, running the same direction as the wall; see 16. idem illud intervallum: two feet. 17. singulae, etc.: 'the different beams are held in position by (corresponding) rocks laid in between.' 19. expleatur: why not indic.? in speciem varietatemque: 'in point of diversified appearance.' 24. perpetuis: i. e., by a 'continuous' line of tie-pieces, each 40 feet long, and fastened at the ends to the ends of those adjoining it. 25. perrumpi: 'broken to pieces' by the battering-ram and heavy missiles. Possibly Caesar has not told the whole truth in regard to the matter. It seems probable that the division of parties among the Aedui was on the question of loyalty to himself; at any rate, a number of the Aedui soon joined the rebellion against him.

Vercingetorix was on the west side of the Allier (Elaver). Caesar, leaving Decize (Decetia) marched along the east bank in the direction of Gergovia, which he could not reach without crossing the stream. See map.

From the six legions with him Caesar first chose out 20 cohorts (= 2 legions); then arranged the remaining 40 cohorts so that on the march they presented the appearance of 6 full legions, and sent them on in the direction he had been following. 25. perventum [esse]: i. e., that the legions had gone about the usual distance of a day's march, and had halted, to encamp. Vercingetorix, following along on the other side of the river, would naturally encamp too, thus leaving the coast clear for Caesar and the two legions that had stayed back to build the bridge. Thus Caesar's ruse succeeded perfectly. Vercingetorix had not yet learned to keep scouts in the rear. 26. pars inferior: the piles had not been destroyed below the water line.

In southern countries frequently these are left on the animals for weeks at a time without being removed. 22. easdem regiones: the lower ground southwest of the smaller camp, toward Chanonat; as they proceeded in this direction the purpose of the manœuvre would seem to the Gauls to be, to skirt the base of the Risolle Heights on the south and make a dash against the point they were fortifying from the 24. neque: = et non. spatio: 'distance.' 25. Legionem: marked Detached Legion on the Plan. 27. illo munitionum: 'to that point of the fortifications' mentioned in l. 13. B. 201, 2; A. 216, a, 4; 28. insignibus: N. to p. 86, 18. The crests and standards could be seen by the enemy from the plateau of Gergovia, above the embankment thrown up inside the trenches connecting the two camps. 29. raros: 'in scattered parties.' 34. incommodi: dep. on quid.

Page 191. 1. occasionis...proelii: 'that they were attempting a surprise, not a battle.' Caesar's purpose was not to hold the Gallic encampment but simply to raid it, thinking that after a successful dash of this sort he could withdraw from the siege with his credit good.

2. alio ascensu: i. e., to the plateau of Gergovia, on the east; see Plan.

XLVI. 5. recta regione: 'in a straight line.' mille ducentos passus: in this ascent of 1200 paces (a little over an English mile) the troops would have to surmount an elevation of about 600 feet. The plateau of Gergovia lies at least 450 feet above the top of the hill la Roche-Blanche (see Napoleon's Atlas, Plan 22).

6. quicquid huc, etc.: 'whatever curve there was in addition to this (direct distance of 1200 paces, built in the road) for the purpose of making the slope easy (to ascend).'

7. A medio colle: = medio in colle: cf. IDIOMS.

8. ferebat: 'permitted.' 9. murum: see Plan, Gallic Wall. tardaret: subj. of purpose. 10. inferiore spatio: that part of the slope of the hill below and outside of the wall. 11. densissimis: i. e., standing close to each other. 13. trinis: B.81, 4; A.95, b; H. 172, 3.

16. superiore . . . nudata: explained by ut . . . conquieverat.

XLVII. 18. id ... proposuerat: cf. N. to l. 1 above. The opinion is current that Caesar has falsified in regard to his intentions in making this assault. It is thought that he seriously planned by a daring attempt, when the enemy had been drawn off by a feint, to capture the city; but that, having failed in this, he passed the matter over as a mere dash, whose purpose was simply to humble the enemy and encourage his own men. This view does not seem plausible, because of the nature of the instructions given before the battle (see Chap. 45). About these Caesar would hardly have ventured to falsify, for the reason that, when the memoirs were given to the world, those lieutenants placed in command of the legions (p. 190, 31) were still living, and Caesar knew that they might bring any untruth at once to public notice. After the Gallic War several of Caesar's lieutenants became his bitterest enemies. gionis decimae: cf. N. to p. 68, 33. 20. constituit: 'planted,' 21. valles: a depression in the slope, just west 'brought to a halt.' of the village of Merdogne. Caesar with the tenth legion was on the east side of this (see Plan, Xth LEGION, 1st Position), the other legions 23. retinebantur: expresses attempted action. on the west side. B. 260, 3; A 277, c; H. 469, II., I. 29. hostem: the Romans. 30. vestem: 'clothing' abstract sing, used instead of concrete pl. 32, neu: = et ne. 34. demissae: 'let down' outside the city wall by taking hold of the hands of those remaining on the wall. 36. Avaricensibus: 'gained at Avaricum,' which Caesar permitted his men to sack with all manner of atrocities. See Chap 28. 37. neque ... ascenderet: 'and that he was not going to let any one scale the wall before himself.'

Page 192. XLVIII. 3. ii: sc. hostes alteram partem: N. to p. 190, 9. 4. munitionis: notice the verbal force, 'of fortifying.' 7. sub muro: 'at the base of the wall' on the outside. 11. liberos ... proferre: the women of the ancient Germans frequently in battle placed themselves and their children in sight of their husbands and fathers, in order to inspire greater courage. 14. non facile—sustinebant: 'could not easily hold out against.'

XLIX. 18. sub infimo colle: 'at the base of the hill' on which the small camp stood. See Plan, Sextius, ist Position. 21. progressus: trans. as if regressus. See Plan, Xth Legion, 2nd Position.

- L. 23. loco, numero, virtute: B. 219, 1; A. 254, b; H. 425, II., 1, 1), N. 24. Aedui: they had been directed to scale the height of Gergovia from the east (p. 191, 3 and N.), and were hence north of the retreating legions. See Plan. 26. manus distinendae causa: 'to separate the enemy's forces.' 28. insigne pacatorum: 'an indication of those at peace,' = 'indicating friends.' As the dress and armor of the Aedui were Gallic, the mistake of the panic-stricken soldiers in supposing them enemies was a natural one. 32. eiusdem legionis: the VIIIth (p. 191, 35).
- Page 193. 6. suis saluti fuit: 'he saved his men' by taking up the attention of the enemy till they could make good their escape.
- LI. 8. deiecti sunt loco: 'were forced down from their position.'

  9. aequiore loco: see Plan, xth Legion, 3rd Position.

  12. locum superiorem: see Plan, Sextius, 2nd Position.

  Legiones: driven by the Gauls down the entire ascent leading to the town; once on level ground, however, and supported by the xth and xiith legions, they turned and drove back their pursuers.

  15. septingenti: B. 217, 3; A. 247, c; H. 417, I, N. 2. desiderati: 'missing.'
- LII. 17. cupiditatem: 'eager desire' for victory, not for booty. sibi: 'for themselves.' 20. quid . . . posset: 'what the effect of a disadvantageous position is.' posset: trans. as if pres. B. 268, 1; A. 287, a; H. 495, 1. 22. exploratam victoriam: Caesar was not so sure about the victory at the time; cf. Chap. 19, and N. to p. 178, 14. 24. Quanto opere—tanto opere: see Vocab. under Quantō.
- LIII. 32. ad extremam orationem: 'at the close of his address.' 35. ante: cf. p. 189, 35-36. 36. idoneo loco: Caesar wished to entice the Gauls into a general engagement, where they would be at a great disadvantage. Vercingetorix, however, was wise enough to avoid a regular battle.
- Page 194. 1. satis . . . factum: these words hardly conceal the fact that the siege of Gergovia was a complete failure, and in several respects a serious reverse.

  5. eo: i. e., flumine.
- LIV. 6. Ibi: on the east side of the Elaver (Allier), in the territory of the Aedui.

  8. opus esse: see IDIOMS. Viridomarus and Eporedorix were going to turn traitor to Caesar, and wished for an excuse to get away from him.

  10. perspectam habebat: trans. as if perspectart.

  12. B. 337, 6; A. 292, c; H. 388, I, N.

  13. his: Viridomarus and Eporedorix.

  14. quam humiles: cf. Book VI., Chap. 12, and Book I., Chap. 31.

  18. omnium temporum: 'of all (previous) periods.'

- 20. mandatis: 'instructions,' points which Caesar gave Viridomarus and Eporedorix to understand they were to use with their fellow-countrymen.
- LV. 21. Noviodunum: now Nevers; this town Caesar had taken as his permanent base of supplies. 23. pecuniam publicam: i. e., the military chest. 28. Bibracti: locative. 33. negotiandi causa: N. to p. 171, 6. 35. obsides civitatum: held by Caesar as pledges of loyalty. The capture of these by the Aedui had much to do with hastening the spread of the rebellion. See p. 198, 15.
- Page 195. 1. frumenti quod: 'whatever grain.' 6. si: '(to see) whether.' B. 300, 3; A. 334, f; H. 529, I, N. I. 8. ex nivibus: i. e, the melting of the snow on the mountains. It was now harvest-time, probably early in July; cf. l. 24, frumentum in agris.
- LVI. 11. si . . . periclitandum: haste was necessary in order to get over the Liger before the enemy should have gathered any greater forces to prevent his crossing. Retreating to the Province was out of the question; he must push to the north, and effect a junction with Labienus at all hazards. 17. Labieno: dat. of advantage. 20. vado: probably at Bourbon, near Decize, where there has always been a ford. pro . . . opportuno: 'good enough considering the emergency,' though under ordinary circumstances dangerous and impracticable. 22. disposito equitatu: by stationing the cavalry in a compact line across the stream, the force of the current was broken, so that the infantry could keep their footing in the deep water while marching over. 26. instituit: = coepit. Caesar's objective point was Agedincum.

- Page 196. 1. perpetuam paludem: this 'continuous marsh' probably lay along the little stream Esonne, extending back from its junction with the Seine. On the north side of it the Gauls were securely posted. See Plan XII.
- LVIII. 4. vineas agere, etc.: Labienus proposed, under cover of vineae, to build a causeway over the marsh in the face of the enemy, throwing in fascines and earth as if filling up the most of a besieged city.

  5. iter munire: 'to construct a road.' id difficilius confieri: the implication is that the difficulty arose less from the attacks of the enemy than from the yielding nature of the marsh. 7. eodem . . . pervenit: Labienus had come from Agedineum along the left bank of the Seine as far as the Esonne. Not being able to cross this, he marched back the way he came as far as Melun, there passed over to the east side of the Seine, and followed the course of the river down to Paris unhindered. See Plan. 10. eo: 'thereon.' 13. ponte: across the Seine at Melun. 14. secundo flumine: see Idioms. 17. e regione Lutetiae: 'directly opposite Paris.' For the positions of the camps of Labienus and the Gauls, see Plan XII.

- LIX. 19. audiebatur: 'men were hearing,' 'the report was being circulated.'

  21. itinere et Ligeri: 'from marching, and from (crossing) the Loire.'

  26. rerum: 'circumstances.' aliud—atque: 'different from what.'

  27. ut: introducing a subj. of purpose. Labienus had now to plan not merely about inflicting damage upon the enemy, but even about making sure his retreat and getting back in safety to Agedincum.

  29. altera ex parte: on the north; see Plan. opinionem: 'reputation.'

  33. flumen: the Seine; Labienus was now on the east side, while Agedincum lay to the southwest of the river.

  34. virtute: 'determination.'
- LX. 38. singulas equitibus Romanis: 'each to a Roman knight.' These knights were "unattached officers waiting till they were appointed to a legion."
- Page 197. 2. ibi: four miles below Paris, near the site of the village of Point-du-Jour. 5. adverso flumine: see IDIOMS. The skill shown in this stratagem reveals in Labienus the true general. 9. eum locum: N. to ihi above.
- LXI. 14. transmittitur: across the Seine, not far below the Gallic camp. 16. tumultuari: pass used impers. 19. tribus locis: the Gauls heard the uproar in the Roman camp, thought that a large detachment was going up the river, and were informed by scouts of the approach of Labienus from below. Accordingly they separated their forces into three divisions, one of which went up-stream, another mounted guard on the bank of the Seine opposite the Roman camp, and a third went to meet Labienus. Thus the ruse of Labienus was successful in scattering the forces of the enemy, though not in taking them on the rear by surprise as he had perhaps intended. 22. e regione castrorum: on the bank of the Seine, 'in a line with (the Gallic) camp.' 23. progrediatur for progrederetur, as if following a historical pres.; 'which was to advance (only) so far.' 24. naves: the lintres of 1. 7 above, which were being rowed up-stream with great tumult.

LXII. 26. nostri: Labienus with three legions and the cavalry; five cohorts had remained at the camp, and the remaining five of the same legion had gone up-stream.

27. hostium acies: the division of the enemy that had marched down stream from their camp. The probable scene of the battle is indicated on the Plan by crossed swords.

31. ab dextro cornu: see IDIOMS.

33. quem locum: 'the position, which.'

34. cum: concessive.

35. suspicionem: 'indication.'

36. quisquam: emphatic by position.

38. septimae legionis: the VIIth legion made a flank movement and turned the enemy's rear.

Page 198. 6. ceperunt: 'reached' the elevated ground on which Labienus had taken his stand. neque: = et tamen non. 8. quos: sc. ei. 10. ubi . . . erant: see p. 174, 17, and N. 11. Caesarem: Caesar had been marching to the north of the Loire, and met Labienus probably near Joigny, on the Yonne. See map.

4. aequo animo: see Idioms. corrumpant, incendant: imp. or hortatory subj. in dir. disc. aedificia: N. to p. 176, 2. Vercingetorix was consistently carrying out the policy he had proposed at the outset; see Chap. 14, and N. to p. 176, 13.

5. qua iactura: 'since by this loss.'

8. huc: = ad hos.

9. Allobrogibus: in the Province.

10. Altera ex parte: i. e., on the west, reckoning from the territory of the Aedui, which for the time being Vercingetorix made his base of operations. For the different peoples mentioned see Vocab. and map.

14. superiore bello: the uprising of the Allobroges in B. C. 60, for which they had been terribly punished by the Romans. Vercingetorix hoped that their old hatred of the Romans had not died out.

- LXV. 22. intra...muros: i.e., into their fortified towns and 25. interclusis omnibus itineribus: 'if all the behind their walls. roads should be blocked up' by the enemy's cavalry, 15,000 in number 26. provincia: 'the Province,' while by Italia (see p. 198, 33). probably Cisalpine Gaul is meant; cf. N. to p. 51, 31. civitates: the Ubii were friendly to Caesar; what other German states are referred to it is impossible to determine. 28. superioribus annis: B. C. 55 and 53; see Book IV. Chap. 16-19, and Book VI. Chap. 9-28. 29. qui... consuerat: after the manner described in Book I., Chap. 48. Vercingetorix had adopted the same tactic (see p. 177, 34-35, and N.). Caesar had had a division of German cavalry before this (cf. p. 175, 21, and N.). 30. minus idoneis: the German horses, though hardy, were small and scraggy; see Book IV., Chap. 2. evocatis: the evocati were perhaps mounted for service on the staff. Cf. p. 21.
- LXVI. 38. trinis castris: marked V V V on Plan XIII. From the place where he was joined by Labienus (Joigny on the Yonne, southeast of Agedincum), Caesar had marched eastward, and was now east of Dijon, near the little river Vingeanne, a tributary of the Saône. Here the engagement described in Chapters 66, 67, took place.
- Page 200. 2. Gallia: Vercingetorix does not consider the Province a part of Gaul. 3 Id: the retreat of the Romans to the Province.

  4. parum profici: 'that little would be gained' if the Romans were allowed to escape unharmed. 6. impeditos: sc. eos (Romanos). Si pedites, etc.: Vercingetorix proposed to attack the Romans on the march. If the Roman infantry, thus caught at a disadvantage, should attempt to protect the baggage-train, their retreat would be hindered; if they should leave the baggage to its fate and try to protect themselves, they would be cut off from their supplies. Either alternative, Vercingetorix reckoned, would in the end put complete victory within his grasp.

  10. spoliatum iri: fut. infin. pass.

  12. Id: the manœuvre proposed. faciant: sc. equites, or praefecti equitum, from 1. I. 13. copias: he would display the infantry before the camp as an inspiration to the cavalry, who were to make the attack.

  17. perequitasset: fut. pf. indic. in dir. disc.
- LXVII. 18. iureiurando: the oath given in lines 15-17 above. It would be interesting to know how many of them kept their vow!

  19. duae acies, una [acies]: the three bodies of Gallic cavalry, marked g g g on the Plan.

  20. a primo agmine: 'on the van' of the Roman line of march.

  21. equitatum tripertito: see Plan, e e e.

  Pugnatur: see Idioms, p. 389.

  23. impedimenta... recipiuntur:

each legion protected its own baggage. 25. signa inferri: 'that an advance be made.' 27. Germani: see Plan XIII., x.; to them is due the credit of having turned the tide of battle. Cf. N. to p. 110, 33. 29. flumen: the Vingeanne. 36. Eporedorix: see Vocab. (1).

vii. THE SIEGE AND FALL OF ALESIA. LXIX-XC.

LXIX. 12. Alesia: the site of Alesia has been determined with absolute certainty. The town was situated on the top of an oval elevation, a part of which is now occupied by the village of Alise Ste. Reine (see Plan XIV.). The base of the height is washed on two sides by small streams, the Ose and the Oserain, which flow near by into the Brenne, a tributary of the Yonne. To the west, along the Brenne, a level plain, shut in by hills on the north and south, extends about three miles. On the remaining sides are ranges of heights similar to that on which the city stood. The highest point of Alesia rose about 500 feet above the beds of the brooks on each side. Excavations carried on under the direction of the Emperor Napoleon III. brought to light abundant traces of Caesar's works, verifying in a remarkable way the statements of the text. colle summo: cf. N. to p. 58, 5. admodum edito loco: 'having a very elevated position.' 14. flumina: the brooks Ose and Oserain. 16. in longitudinem: i. e., to the west. 17. spatio: the average distance between the height of Alesia and the tops of the surrounding hills is about a mile. 18. fastigio: here applied to the horizontal top of an elevation, - a rare use of the word. The principal hills about Alise Ste. Reine are Mont Réa and Bussy Heights on the north, Pennevelle Heights on the east, and Flavigny Heights on the south See quae ... locum: = omnem eam partem collis, quae ad orientem solem spectabat, copiae Gallorum compleverant. 20. fossam maceriamque: marked P, S on the Plan. 21. munitionis: not a continuous line of works, but a series of fortified encampments, the spaces between which were guarded by frequent redoubts (castella). The sites of the encampments and of several of the redoubts were discovered in the course of Napoleon's excavations (indicated on the Plan by angular and circular red lines). 22. tenebat: 'extended.'

LXX. 29. supra: in line 15 above. Summa vi: see IDIOMS. 30. Germanos: cf. p. 199, 27, and N. 32. Praesidio: 'support.' nostris: = nostrorum. B. 188, I, N.; A. 235,  $\alpha$ ; H. 384, II., 4, N. 2. 34.

angustioribus portis relictis: 'since the (spaces) left (in the wall for) gates were quite narrow.' 35. munitiones: i. e., hostium.

Page 202. 2. pro vallo: 'as a rampart' for Caesar's cavalry to retreat to in case of any reverse.
4. munitiones: = fossam et maceriam of l. 1; see p. 201, 20 and N. veniri: impers. 'that the enemy are coming.'
6. castra: just east of the city, inside of the Gallic wall and trench. See Plan.

LXXI. 10. perficiantur: B. 292; A. 327; H. 520, I., 2. consilium capit: see IDIOMS; the 'plan' is explained by omnem . . . dimittere.

14. neu: = et ne. 15. meritum: participle. 16. Quod: N. to p. 53, 36. 17. Ratione inita: 'having made calculation.' 19. parcendo: "by shortening the rations," we should say. opus erat intermissum: 'there was a break in the (Roman) line,' between two redoubts; see N. to p. 201, 21. 20. secunda vigilia: what time? Cf. p. 33. Frumentum omne: i. e., within the city. Vercingetorix puts the inhabitants under martial law. 21. capitis poenam: see IDIOMS.

22. paruerint: subj. of characteristic. 24. pro oppido: on the east side.

LXXII. 28. haec: 'the following' or 'as follows.' B. 246, 2; H. 29. directis lateribus: 'with perpendicular sides.' so that the ditch was as wide at the bottom (solum) as at the top. This trench (marked f f f on the Plan) extended across the level plain just west of the town between the two brooks, Ose and Oserain. Its entire course has been discovered by means of excavations. 31. id: sc. atque fecit. hoc, etc.: Order, hoc consilio, ne, quoniam . . . cingeretur, de improviso . . . 32. esset — complexus, cingeretur: subj. by attraction, expressing the ground of the ne-clause. 33. nec := et non. totum corpus, etc.: 'the entire extent of the works could not be completely manned with soldiers.' corona: = an encircling, a posting at every 36. Hoc spatio: 400 ft., measured west of the trench f f. duas fossas: indicated on the Plan by parallel red lines. eadem altitudine: '(both) of the same depth,' 8 to 9 ft., as shown by Napoleon's excavations. 38. aqua, etc.: deposits of silt and gravel, showing the action of water, have been found about the middle of the inner trench. Post: 'Behind;' the outer ditch served as a trench for the rampart; study Plate VI., I.

Page 203. 1. aggerem: 'earthwork,' the line of earth thrown up on the west side of the outer trench. vallum: the 'palisade' erected on this earthwork, like the palisade of a camp (cf. p. 31), and 3 or 4 feet in height.

loricam: a 'breastwork,' made by weaving supple branches closely together, and put on the exposed side of the palisade.

2. pinnas: 'battlements,' made of framework covered with wickerwork (taking the place of boards), projecting above the palisade at certain intervals, and 6 to 8 feet in height. Behind these the soldiers could find shelter after having hurled their weapons over the palisade. cervis: 'stag's-horns,' 'chevaux-de-frise,' tops of young trees, from which the foliage and twigs had perhaps been removed, leaving only the larger branches projecting from the trunk; these were planted along the earthwork at the foot of the palisade, projecting outwards over the trench and towards the town. See Plate VI., I, the projecting branches at the foot of the tower.

3. pluteorum: 'parapets,' here a comprehensive term designating the wood-work above the earthwork as a whole, — including the palisade, the breastwork, and the battlements.

6. materiari, frumentari: co-ordinate with munitiones fieri as subject of Erat. 10. summa vi: see IDIOMS. dendum [esse]: impers., 'that an addition ought to be made.' minore numero: Moberly calculates that to man the whole line of works 38,000 men would have been required, - a much larger force than Caesar could provide for this purpose. 13. admodum firmis ramis: abl. of characteristic (or quality) limiting truncis, 'with quite strong branches.' 14. delibratis: the bark was peeled off in order to make them smooth and slippery, so that any one trying to step over would be able to get no perpetuae: 'continuous,' running parallel with firm footing on them. the rampart on the side towards the town. quinos: notice the distributive force, 'each five feet deep.' 15. See Plate VI., r a. Quini: five rows, one 18. vallis: dat., referring to the sharp, pointed in each trench. 19. Ante quos: 'In front of these' rows of branches of the cippi. 20. scrobes: 'wolf-pits.' Pits were dug, cippi, towards the town. three feet deep and small at the bottom, arranged diagonally (see Vocab. under quincunx) in eight rows, three feet apart. In these smooth stakes were set, sharpened at the upper end, but not projecting above the level of the ground more than four inches. At the bottom of the stakes earth was packed in firmly to the depth of a foot, leaving still a depth of two feet in the pits, which were concealed from view by placing brush over them. See Plate VI., r b. In the course of Napoleon's excavations many of these pits were brought to light, and found to correspond exactly with the description here given. 'crow's-feet,' upright iron bars with pointed hooks projecting from the upper end, fastened to blocks of wood, which were sunk firmly in the earth. Several of the hooks have been found. See Plate VI., I c.

LXXIV. 32. secutus: 'keeping to.' 34. munitiones: an outer line of works, outside of the Roman encampments, to protect against the Gallic army that was coming to relieve the town. See Plan. 'facing in the opposite direction' from the works described in the last two chapters, the purpose of which was to hem in Vercingetorix. 35. multitudine: i. e., hostium. si ita accidat: i. e., si magna multi-36. eius discessu: these words are probably an incorrect reading of the MSS.; as they stand they can only mean 'on his departure,' 'even in case he (Caesar) should be away.' 37. ex castris egredi: i.e., for the purpose of foraging. dierum: cf. p. 202, 17-19; distinction between subjective and objective gen.?

Notice particularly the survivals of Gallic names in the names of modern towns and localities. The Aquitani did not join the rebellion (cf. N. to p. 97, 34, and N. to p. 183, 37), nor did the Volcae and the Helvii (cf. Chap. 64), nor the Remi, Lingones, and Treveri (cf. Chap. 63). With these exceptions, the movement of all Gaul outside the Province against Caesar was unanimous. 24. pro: 'out of regard for.'

Peskett well remarks that, "The result of this unsuccessful attempt of the Gauls shows Caesar's wisdom in constructing so many lines of defence. Had the Gauls in Alesia been able to advance up to the outer" line of works, which was being attacked by the army of succor, "the two forces by a simultaneous assault would probably have broken through the lines and inflicted a serious defeat on the Romans." 21. re infecta: 'without gaining their object.'

LXXXVIII. 13. colore: ancient purple, corresponding nearly to our scarlet; on the paludamentum see p. 25. Notice throughout this chapter the vividness of style, which is heightened by the omission of conjunctions.

15. haec declivia et devexa: 'these descending slopes'; Caesar passed down the northwest side of the Flavigny Heights, in full view of the enemy.

17. excipit: 'follows.'

19. tergum: sc. hostium.

28. Quod: N. to p. 53, 36.

LXXXIX. 36. ad utramque rem: 'for either alternative.'

1. Ipse: Caesar. 2. Vercingetorix: Vercingetorix (as we learn elsewhere), having arrayed himself in splendid armor, mounted a horse adorned with trappings, passed slowly out from Alesia, and rode around Caesar sitting to receive the prisoners; then, halting before Caesar, he sprang from his horse, laid off his armor, and without a word placed himself at the feet of his conqueror — "every inch a King!" For six years after this he languished in a Roman dungeon; at length in B.C. 45 he was put to death to celebrate Caesar's great triumph. Thus closed the career of the greatest of the Gauls, — the first national hero of 3. si: '(to see) whether.' B. 300, 3; A. 334, f; H. 529, II., 4. toto: dat. for toti. capita singula: i.e., a captive to each soldier; cf. N to p. 61, 14. Thus fell Alesia, after one of the most remarkable sieges on record. Caesar's devices for rendering impassible his lines of defence, for ingenuity and adaptation to the purpose for which they were intended, have never been excelled in the annals of military engineering. They are a further evidence of that readiness to meet emergencies and that practical mastery of mechanical details previously shown in the construction of the bridges over the Rhine. Further than this, Caesar's success well illustrates the inevitable superiority of discipline, generalship, persistency, and hard work over vastly greater numbers, even in the face of every disadvantage of position and surroundings. For the Gauls the fall of Alesia was the crowning disaster of a hopeless struggle. They staked all on the relief of the city, and lost. But if Caesar instead of Vercingetorix had suffered complete defeat, little doubt that Gaul would long have remained unconquered, and that the course of European history would have been changed. The siege of Alesia may well rank among the decisive military operations of the world's history.

XC. 6. civitatem: 'he recovered the state' from its condition of rebellion. 9. in hiberna: the legions were distributed so as to be a support to one another in case of need, and at the same time so as to command the whole country. The strength of Gaul had been so far broken that little danger was to be apprehended from rebellion. 13. Remis: these from the first had been friendly to Caesar. 20. ex litteris: 'from despatches.' 21. supplicatio: cf. p. 92, 7, and N.

ON THE STUDY OF CAESAR.

THE student of Caesar should give his attention to three things—the thought, translation, and explanation.

The Thought: A page of Caesar is not a mere exercise in parsing, contrived to discipline the mind and tax the patience of the student. It is a fragment of the world's literature. It has been transmitted down through the centuries and spared by the destructive agencies of time because it contains thought,—thought of such interest and value that men would not willingly let it pass into oblivion. Approach the Gallic War, then, as a work which the verdict of the ages has pronounced a literary masterpiece; in studying it your first task will be to grasp the underlying thought.

In learning to read Latin, the aim should be as early as possible to gain the ability to understand the thought in the order in which the Roman reader or hearer took it in. First it is necessary to know the forms; without a clear idea of the force of inflectional changes further progress is impossible. Great pains should be taken also with the learning of new words; they should be memorized accurately, so as to become a permanent addition to your outfit as a student of Latin. With reference to the exact method by which you may most readily get at the thought of the Latin, no brief rule can be laid down; labor omnia vincit. When you have the general idea of one sentence, go over the following sentences in like manner, trying to determine the drift of the paragraph, or chapter, or lesson.

If you have now a fairly clear conception of the thought, the next thing is to master the constructions. Never be content with a careless half-notion of the meaning. You will never really understand a sentence till you can explain every form and word in it. Here parrot-like glibness in the repeating of grammatical rules is not the chief thing. Be sure that you understand how and why, that you cannot simply give the rule but explain the principle involved. At first look up all grammatical references; later on, as you become familiar with Caesar's constructions, refer to the grammar only in cases of uncertainty. Try often to read your lesson and understand it without reference to grammar, notes, or vocabulary, making the connection explain obscure points; but never leave a lesson till you are sure that you understand the thought in it as well as if it were expressed in English.

Translation: Languages differ in their ways of expressing the same thought. In translating Caesar, be careful not to transfer to English forms of expression peculiar to the Latin. Render Latin by English, not by Latin-English. The following points are worthy of special mention:—

- a. After verbs of saying, perceiving, knowing, and the like, the Latin infinitive with its subject-accusative should be rendered into English by a clause.
- b. The Latin uses the copula esse in many relations where we must employ an entirely different form of expression. For examples see IDIOMS, p. 390.
- c. The Latin often uses the passive voice of intransitive verbs impersonally, in order to make prominent the action rather than the agent. Whenever possible, translate such by a noun designating the action, with a suitable verb; in other cases translate by the active voice, and supply a personal subject according to the connection. Study IDIOMS, p. 389.
- d. The Latin has several uses of the genitive case that should never be translated into English literally. Study IDIOMS, p. 388.
- e. The Latin ablative absolute is in many instances employed where the English prefers clauses or phrases. Render it rarely by the English nominative absolute, but rather by clauses introduced by when, as, after, now that, if; by by and a participle, with or without an object; by a preposition and a noun, etc.
- f. The Latin relative often expresses relations between clauses and sentences altogether foreign to the English relative. In such cases it should not be translated by which or who, but as the sense requires; as, in clauses of purpose (with the subjunctive) by to (with the infinitive); in clauses of characteristic result often by so that he (she, it, they); in causal clauses, by since or because he (she, it they); in concessive clauses, by although he, etc.; at the beginning of a clause or sentence, often by and he, he, they, this, that, etc.

Never be content with your translation of a lesson till you are sure, first, that it represents exactly the thought of the original; secondly, that it is expressed in so perfect English that the same sentences, if in an English essay, would receive your teacher's approval. Remember that Caesar is one of the world's great writers; try to bring out in English the clearness, conciseness, and vigor of his style.

Explanation: It is not enough to comprehend clearly the thought of Caesar, and to be able to express this in the best English; there yet remains the understanding of everything connected with the portion read. Having mastered the construction of your passage and carefully translated it, be not satisfied till you can explain intelligently the references in it to persons, places (including rivers, mountains, towns, etc.), states or tribes; events, dates, military organization or tactics, manners and customs. Investigate the significance of Caesar's writings and career in the light of history and the development of European civilization. Thus pursued, the study of the Gallic War will become both interesting and profitable.

VOCABULARY.

QUANTITY. In this vocabulary the quantity of words is marked according to prose usage, as it is deemed unwise to unite poetic license and prose quantity in such a way as to create an impression in the mind of the student that vowels are indifferently long or short in certain syllables. "Common" marks of quantity are not employed; for example, final o is marked long, except in the few instances where it is short.

DERIVATION. In the derivation of words no attempt has been made to give ultimate or hypothetical roots. Only such aid is given in this direction as can be readily appreciated, applied, and remembered by a student possessing as little capacity for philological research as does the average boy or girl who reads Caesar.

IDIOMS. Very many of the more common idioms contained in the Table preceding the Vocabulary are repeated here.

THE LETTER J. The Vocabulary, consistently with the text, does not employ the letter j, but the consonant i. As an aid, however, to those pupils accustomed to the letter j, words containing the consonant i are also given (in parentheses) with the j; e. g. abiungo (or abjungo).

A. with proper names stands for Aulus.
